Disaster Threatens Week-Old Invasion As Janina Forces Defeat Fascists

The War Today

GREEK TROOPS are reported to have almost surrounded the Italian Albania base of Koritza after smashing the Fascists' northern offensive toward Salonika, while 70 miles to the south the Italian thrust on Janina is reported completely halted.

AXIS FOREIGN MINISTERS meet somewhere in Germany as reports spread that German military action in the Balkans is imminent.

LONDON SPENDS its first bombless night in eight weeks after a day marked by German machine-gun strafing of several coastal towns.

A New Thermopolae

By International News Service

Bitolj, Yugoslav-Greek Frontier (Monday), Nov. 4.—The week-old Italian invasion of Greece was reported gravely endangered early today by a stunning Greek advance in Albania which threatened the city of Koritza with momentary capture and by a bloody defeat administered on Fascist troops trying to reach Ioannina (Janina).

More than 2,200 soldiers and officers of Italy's army were taken prisoners, scores of Italian tanks were destroyed and others captured, and heavy casualties inflicted on Fascist troops in both of these actions, according to advices reaching the Yugoslav-Greek frontier.

Large bodies of Italian troops were reported trapped or in imminent peril of encirclement in Koritza, one of Italy's principal Albanian bases, and in the district west of Janina, industrial and highway town in northwestern Greece.

Italian Bases Bombed

On these two main fronts of the Italo-Greek war, the Greeks were delivering smashing blows and counter-blows by air as well as land. British planes were said to have joined Greek bombers in attacks on the biggest Italian bases and seaports including Santi Quaranti and the Albanian capital of Tirana.

In a push of more than 15 miles into Albania, Greek mountain warriors were said to have encircled Koritza on the north after a day long battle Sunday in which at least 1,200 Italians were reported captured and 30 tanks destroyed.

Naval Battle Off Corfu Is Reported in Athens

Athens, Nov. 3 (AP).—The Athens radio broadcast tonight that "according to telegrams from Corfu a naval battle took place at 8 p. m. today west of Corfu."

The radio said that half an hour later a "large vessel was seen ablaze steaming northward."

Inhabitants of Corfu and the Greek mainland heard thunderous cannonading all day Sunday, accompanied by the drone of airplane motors, the radio declared.

[In London, informed quarters said they knew "nothing" of the reported battle.]

Hitler Peace Move Rumors Reach Capital

Roosevelt Returns To Confer With Hull

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Rumors that Adolf Hitler is about to make peace suggestions, probably in an address to the German Reichstag, have reached Government circles here, it was learned last night.

The word came as President Roosevelt returned here from his final campaign tour expressly for a detailed discussion with Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary Welles on the menacing European war developments and the delicate situation surrounding French colonial possessions in this hemisphere.

Background for their discussions was found in continued reports of United States naval movements in the Caribbean, in the general vicinity of the French island of Martinique—reports that have intrigued American observers, though lacking any official verification of their supposed significance.

Officials denied reports from

Italians Bomb Malta Under Clearing Sky

Fascist Airmen Battle British for Greek Air, Sea Bases

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 3.—A bitter fight for air and sea bases in Greece developed today between Italian and British airmen as clearing weather gave Italy's land forces a firmer footing for their slow advance.

The Italian high command reported that Fascist bombing squadrons had carried out a strong attack Saturday on Britain's vital naval base at Malta, and today the Italian airmen, favored by bright skies, were reported carrying load after load of bombs toward Greek ports where the British might be unloading troops and supplies to bolster Greek defenses.

Ioannina (Janina) and Florina appeared the immediate objectives of the widely separated Italian columns driving over the rocky mountains of northern Greece with the apparent intention of enveloping the Greeks in a giant pincer movement.

Italians meanwhile looked toward Africa where they expected Marshal Graziani to begin his long-delayed advance on Alexandria and Suez over the long western desert stretches. Italians regarded Graziani's threat as a kind of "sword of

Swiss Predict Nazis Will Enter Balkans, Report Molotoff May Visit Berlin

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 3.—Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano's reported flight from Albania to Germany for an Axis conference was seen here tonight as a prelude to German military action in the Balkans to aid Italy's drive into Greece.

Count Ciano left his active command of the Fascist air forces attacking Greece to see Nazi Foreign Minister Ribbentrop and Germany's ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, who are reported by Berlin to have gone grouse shooting.

Diplomatic quarters in the Balkans reported that Germany has been moving huge numbers of troops into Rumania and now is using Hungarian railroads for that purpose.

Attack on Russia Rumored

British and neutral observers thus believed the meeting between Ciano and the two Germans was a final military conference before Germany moves from Rumania toward the Suez Canal by way of the strategic Dardanelles that Turkey guards.

Rumors emanating from Axis sources here said the German eastward movement was part of Nazi preparations to attack Russia both from Poland and Rumania. Because of the source of those rumors neutral observers discounted them as a smokescreen.

[A possible Moscow-Berlin-Rome agreement on the various questions pertaining to the Balkans and the Near East, particularly Turkey, is seen in Bern diplomatic quarters, the New York Times reported.

Molotoff to Visit Berlin

[Soviet Premier Molotoff is understood in these quarters, the Times said, to be preparing a visit in the near future to Berlin. Questions to be discussed would include division of "spheres of influence" and might even include discussions of active Russian collaboration in attaining the "peaceful" conquest of the Near East.

[Italian friction with Moscow over control of the Dardanelles is believed now thoroughly overcome, thanks to direct German intervention in the question.

Agreement Predicted

[Ciano and Ribbentrop were reported by well-informed Rome circles to be drawing up comprehensive plans for an Axis agreement with Russia, the United Press said. Turkey's position also was expected to be discussed.

[Negotiations recently conducted in Moscow, though officially classified as "routine studies to improve economic relations existing between the Axis powers and Russia," are thought to have been far more important than that, the Times reported from Bern. This feeling is based on the fact that they were

Germans Machine-Gun Buses And Strollers in East Anglia

By The Associated Press

London (Monday), Nov. 4.—Sunday strollers, cyclists and motorists in East Anglian villages were reported systematically machine-gunned last night by "hedge-hopping" German raiders in the first such attack on the British since the air siege of the United Kingdom began.

German airmen previously have fired machine guns in single instances upon British towns and even upon London's streets. But the East Anglian reports said the raiders flying singly or in pairs strafed buses, automobiles and pedestrians in various parts of that area north of the Thames and northeast of London.

London spent its fifty-eighth night of air siege "all clear," for the first time in weeks.

Lone raiders darting precariously through England's defenses made scattered attacks on the London area, but midnight passed without an alarm.

Rain and mist on the English Channel and Royal Air Force blasts at landing fields in German-occupied France, Belgium and Holland were believed in the capital to be important factors in the shift in German tactics.

London's defenders were no less vigilant than usual.

Alderman Charles Key, who is also deputy A. R. P. controller for the London dock district, remarked wryly:

Note Tells Banker Wife Is Kidnaped, Demands Ransom

Failure of a bizarre plot to extort $7,500 from a Washington banker who believed his wife had been kidnaped, was revealed last night.

McLACHLEN

Intended victim of the abduction hoax was Archibald M. McLachlen, vice president and treasurer of the McLachlen Banking Corporation.

Thursday morning, while at his bank office, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, McLachlen received a typewritten note, delivered by messenger, purporting that his wife, Josephine, had been kidnaped and that unless $7,500 was paid immediately, she would suffer injury.

The banker first viewed the threatening message as a Halloween prank, but on checking with his home, 5511 Chevy Chase Parkway, he learned that Mrs. McLachlen was not in, nor could he learn where she might be.

2d D. C. Draft Call May Be Postponed

Likely to Be Put Over Until After Christmas, Gen. Grant Indicates

There is a strong probability that in this area the second induction of men under Selective Service, tentatively fixed for December 2, will be postponed beyond the Christmas season, it was learned yesterday.

Maj. Gen. W. S. Grant, commander of the Third Army Corps Area, said yesterday that because of the bare four-day lapse between the first induction, November 27-28, and the proposed second induction date, a postponement is probable.

The factor of the Christmas season, he stated, will be taken into consideration. Man-power requirements are still fluctuating because of extensive volunteering, so that Gen. Grant would not estimate the number of men likely to be summoned in the second call. The number previously announced was 300.

Meanwhile, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Selective Service executive, announced yesterday that clearance would be given today for a general distribution of question-

SHE FRIGHTENED BURGLAR—Ann Sherman, 16, is seated at the desk the marauder ransacked

Espionage possibilities of a burglary early yesterday in the home of Commander Forrest Sherman, official of the War Plans Division of the Navy and a member of the Canada-United States Defense Board, were being investigated by authorities last night.

The intruder ransacked the commander's desk in the study of his residence at 4611 Kenmore Drive Northwest before he was frightened away at 4 a. m. by the screams of the officer's daughter, Miss Ann Sherman, 16.

No other part of the house was disturbed by the intruder, who disclosed a familiarity with the house by carefully removing all electric light fuses from a fuse box in the basement garage before beginning his search.

The War Plans Division is responsible for formulating plans for defense of the Western Hemisphere from attack in any quarter. Commander Sherman has been devoting most of his time to Canada-United States defense.

The Naval officer said last night he sometimes works on departmental matters in his home but never

Call to the Polls

Facing what appeared to be the closest race in which he has engaged in national politics, President Roosevelt last night called on all of America's qualified millions to vote tomorrow.

He announced that Government employes would be given sufficient time off from their duties to permit them to cast their ballots and he urged private employers to grant the same privilege.

A statement issued by the President said:

"It is a duty to the Nation that every citizen should exercise the solemn right of suffrage guaranteed under the Constitution. It therefore behooves all citizens to cooperate to the end that the largest number eligible shall register their preference in the elections to be held on Tuesday, November 5, next.

"To that end, I am directing that all employes of the Federal Government be given sufficient time from their duties to cast their votes, and I urge that all Government agencies—State and local—and all other employers grant the same privilege in order that all who are qualified may vote."

Off To Hyde Park

The President returned at midday yesterday from his final campaign tour to Cleveland, and departed late last night for his Hyde Park home where he will vote tomorrow and listen to election returns at night.

Today he will make a motor tour of the Hudson Valley, covering three counties surrounding his home, and probably will deliver several informal talks.

Tonight he will make his last pre-election statement in a Nation-wide broadcast from his home at 11 o'clock. All networks will carry it.

Meanwhile, statements replaced orations in the comparative campaign lull observed through Sunday.

John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., who abandoned support of Mr. Roosevelt, appealed to labor to follow its own leaders and not "accept the temporary leadership of an erratic, warmongering politician."

His brief statement said:

Willkie Vows 2-Term Limit Amendment

(Willkie's Statement, Page 7.)

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 3.—Amid a final checkup of his Presidential campaign business, Wendell Willkie said tonight that "when elected" his first message to Congress would recommend a constitutional amendment "limiting the time any one President may serve to eight years or less."

In a formal statement issued from his personal headquarters at the Hotel Commodore, Willkie declared that President Roosevelt's speech Saturday night had contained from the Chief Executive a reference to "at least one issue of this year's campaign."

"He would have us believe," said the Republican Presidential nominee, "though he doesn't expressly say it, that he will be content with just one more term. But if once our common law against a

Defense Aide Says Rearming Sets Record

Progress in 5 Months Fastest in History, Henderson Asserts

Leon Henderson, a member of the Defense Commission, expressed the opinion yesterday that the United States had progressed more rapidly in setting up machinery to rearm itself in the last five months than any other country ever had done in the same period of war or peace.

"In some circles," he said in a radio address, "it has been, shall I say 'fashionable' to belittle the letting of eight billion dollars of contracts within a few weeks. By the sheer volume of empty sound and sarcasm these same persons have sought to drown out the actual physical production of defense items.

"But the fact remains that tanks, semiautomatic rifles, warships and bombers are being delivered currently and constantly. Last week the political din was so great that the country couldn't even hear Knudsen (Defense Commissioner William S. Knudsen) talking about plans for 12,000 additional bombers. I'd be willing to bet that certain chancelleries in Europe and Asia heard—and understood—Knudsen's statement, for 8,000 two-motor bombers and 4,000 four-motor bombers are more bombers than any

Politicians Keep Eyes on Weather As Campaign Goes Into Home Stretch

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J. (Monday), Nov. 4.—Franklin D. Roosevelt leads Wendell L. Willkie in popular votes in the American Institute of Public Opinion's final survey on the 1940 campaign. But as of Sunday, November 3, the trend was still continuing toward Willkie. It was running strongly enough to indicate the closest election in 24 years and one in which the winner in popular votes might not carry a majority of electoral votes.

As of Sunday noon, in a Nation-wide telegraphic poll, the survey showed the President with 52 per cent of the major party vote, to 48 per cent for Willkie. But a lead of 52 per cent by no means spells victory for Roosevelt. What counts in a Presidential election is electoral votes.

Political history indicates that when a Democratic candidate has 52 per cent of the popular vote, it is an even race because of the surplus Democratic popular majorities in the South.

Wilson, Cleveland Recalled

The Democrat, Grover Cleveland, in 1888 had 51.4 per cent—a majority—and yet lost the election to Harrison in the electoral college. In 1916 Wilson had 51.7 per cent and barely won in the electoral college with only 11 electoral votes to spare.

In fact, the evidence from the Institute's own early studies of the campaign provides recent confirmation of the fact that a Democratic candidate with 52 per cent is in a precarious position. In two surveys in August the institute found Roosevelt with 51 per cent in popular votes, but Willkie actually leading in electoral votes, with 304 on one occasion and 284 on another. It takes 266 to win.

To attempt to predict the winner on the basis of a 52-48 split requires one to go beyond the figures, and to ignore the known margin of error in all survey work. That error in Institute surveys in recent elections has averaged 4 per cent State-by-State.

On the basis of today's results either party could claim victory on Tuesday, depending on the breaks in certain areas.

Mystery Submarine Hunted By Navy Near Panama Canal

By International News Service

Balboa, Canal Zone, Nov. 3.—The United States Navy tonight was engaged in a widespread hunt for a mystery submarine reported to have been spotted off Cape Mala, near the Pacific entrance to the Panama Canal.

All available naval ships in these waters, including three destroyers and some submarines, participated in the search. Patrolling airplanes also scoured the region.

The Navy launched the search this morning after receiving a report last night from officers of a merchant vessel docking in Balboa, who said they saw what appeared to be a submarine making suspicious movements near Cape Mala.

The stories told by the merchant marine officers seemed to tally with reports that have come to United States naval authorities in the Canal Zone for the last two weeks.

Last Thursday the Navy investigated reports that a foreign submarine had been observed near the Gulf of Darien, east of the Atlantic entrance to the canal.

Possibility that the craft may have been German arose from the fact [illegible] he Nazi freighter [illegible] land, carrying diesel fuel and gasoline which could be transferred to a submarine at sea, had been sighted Thursday afternoon 8 miles off the Canal's Atlantic end.

Threaten Koritza After Destroying Many Enemy Tanks

Associated Press reported, said Greek troops Saturday night outflanked Italian invaders crossing in small boats the lower end of Lake Presba, situated at the corner of the Albanina, Greek and Yugoslav frontiers, some 15 miles north of Koritza. Italian garrisons at Puesteo, west of the lake, were savagely attacked. This report did not indicate whether the Greek assault had been successful, but it appeared this flanking operation played a key part in the reported encirclement of Koritza.

British Aid Expected Soon

[Athenians expected British expeditionary troops would soon rush north to help the Greeks hold their "Koritza wedge" until numerical parity with the Italians can be achieved, after which a joint British-Greek smash through Albania may be launched. Maj. Gen. Gambier-Parry and his staff officers, of the British Middle East command at Cairo, arrived in Athens to arrange for advent of British troops to the Greek mainland.

[The Greek people, meanwhile, manifested jubilation over reports prominently published in their papers that British troops, naval and air units had installed themselves on the Greek island of Crete.

Italian Offensive Repelled

On the Epirus front, the Greeks repulsed a large scale Italian offensive through the western gap in the Pindus Mountains in the direction of Janina (Ioannina), according to information reaching the Yugolav frontier.

More than 1,000 Italian troops were reported captured in this battle and a large number of Italian tanks were said to have been captured.

The defeat, followed by immediate numbers of Italian troops in danger-Greek counter attacks, placed large ous positions on mountain ledges and paths as the Greeks circled and drew up on the rear to threaten the invaders with extermination.

Bear Down Swiftly

Greek troops were said to be bearing down swiftly on Koritza, a city of 25,000 inhabitants, situated south and west of Lakes Presba and Ventrok where Yugoslavia borders both Greece and Albania. The Greeks thereby turned into complete reverse the Italian push toward Florina, which had been aimed at the great Aegean port of Salonika.

It appeared that the Fascist garrison at Koritza would prove insufficient in numbers and strategical position to hold out against the battering Greek forces.

Italy was understood to be rushing additional columns to the scene in a desperate effort to avert what might develop into a military disaster.

Two additional Italian divisions were reported moving into the Italo-Greek war front, making 14 divisions, or about 210,000 Fascist troops, engaged.

Exceptional Violence

Sunday's battle in the steep terrain east and north of Koritza was described as an action of exceptional violence. Crack Italian Alpine troops, moving behind artillery and air barrages, opened the engagement with counterattacks at dawn in attempts to dislodge the Greeks from fortified Italian positions they had captured when they broke into Albania Friday.

The rugged Greeks, most of them 6-footers picked for their stamina, hammered back each Italian charge. Then, early in the afternoon, the Greeks resumed their smashing drive with bayonet and hand grenade assaults that broke the mechanized Italian lines and sent the Fascists into precipitate retreat, according to reports to the Yugoslav border.

Picking up momentum, the Greeks swept on to approach the gates of Koritza, capture of which would mean the first major victory on either side since the Italo-Greek war began with the Fascist invasion last Monday.

Greeks Hold Gains

By the Associated Press

Athens, Nov. 3.—Destructive new raids on Greek cities were reported today as Greece's unyielding mountain line kept the Italian invasion stalled near the Albanian frontier.

The invaders apparently still held their shallow salient on Greek soil but there was no sign of a break in the defense line and the Greeks declared that heavy Italian air and artillery barrages had failed to dislodge them from their gains in Albania.

Both sides resorted extensively to air attacks and widely separated Greek cities again suffered heavily from bombardment. No new figures were issued, however, an army communique merely saying, "There are dead and injured among civilians."

Airdromes Bombed

Greek air forces—presumably a combination of Greece's own planes and cooperating British bombers—were said to have scored telling hits behind the Italian lines and to have shot down four of the invaders' planes at a loss of only two of their own.

"Our planes successfully bombed the Koritza and Argyrocastro airdromes," a communique last night said, "and destroyed several planes on the ground. Oil reserves were set afire and a blaze was seen in airdrome facilities.

"Enemy concentrations and batteries were bombed successfully by our aviation."

Zog's Palace Damaged

"During air fights four bombers were shot down. Two of our own planes failed to return."

A British radio report heard in New York said the palace of former King Zog of Albania was damaged in a joint Greek-British air attack yesterday on Tirana and that an unidentified Albania port also was bombed. The palace now is headquarters for the Italian army in Albania.

(In Belgrade, Fascist bombers were reported subjecting northern Greece to a third successive day of heavy air attack, particularly the strategic port of Salonika, at the top of the Aegean Sea, and railroads radiating east and north from it. Italian reports said the railroads were rendered useless.)

Civilian casualties and damage to dwellings Saturday in Salonika, the port of Patras and its environs and on the islands of Crete and Corfu—each of these objectives being twice raided—were reported by the home security ministry.

200 Civilians Reported Dead

(A Reuters, British news agency, report from Salonika said 200 civilians, including many children, were killed there in two big Italian raids Saturday.)

Jannina suffered three raids, the communique said, and ten other towns and villages also were attacked.

The army communique said that Albanian territory captured by Greek forces was being held "despite strong reaction of the enemy heavy artillery and enemy aviation."

(Reuters, British news agency, quoted a Rome broadcast saying that "Italian troops are finding themselves up against a well-fortified line of resistance." It also reported, from Athens, that Britain had sent the Greek government £20,000,000 ($80,000,000).)

conducted on the Russian side by Molotoff personally.

[This, coupled with the well-known plan of the commissioner of foreign affairs to visit Berlin soon, is taken as an indication that the conversations were considerably more important. In fact, some circles hint that Molotoff would proceed to Berlin to sign on the dotted line, making Russian adherence to the tri-partite pact "against aggression" fact instead of fancy.]

Four-Point Offensive

Here is the four-point offensive observers here expected:

1. Italian drive towards Salonika and Greek isles—already under way.

2. Italian push eastward toward Alexandria and Suez through western Egypt—apparently about to begin from Italian advance base at Sidi Barrani, 60 miles inside Egypt from Italian Libya.

3. German aid to Italy with two-pronged thrust south from Rumania through friendly Bulgaria, one aimed at undermining the Greek defenses by striking west through Macedonia.

4. The other and strongest Nazi prong would hit the Turks and the Dardanelles Straits in the hope of opening a pathway through Turkey, Syria and Palestine to the Suez Canal.

News from German-occupied France and the Balkans indicated the importance of present German moves in the east.

Since the Italo-Greek war began travelers and diplomats have reported that Germany has pulled many of her veteran motorized and infantry troops out of occupied France back into Germany.

Information from the Balkans indicated those forces now moving eastward include those same troops.

Himmler in Rumania

Germany's police chief, Heinrich Himmler, is now in Rumania. German action often has coincided with his travels.

Turkey's President Ismet Inonu in telling the national assembly recently of his country's decision to retain her armed neutrality at present also said close contact was being maintained with the British.

Informed ffuarters here said both the Turks and British were aware that the Turks might be "sticking out their necks" in any headlong concentration of troops in Greek Macedonia against Italy because of the possibility of a Nazi thrust through Bulgaria to outflank them.

Istanbul (Turkey), Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Authoritative sources reported tonight that Germany was about ready to join Italy in hostilities against Greece and that Ambassador Papen had been called to Berlin to tell what Turkey might be expected to do.

[The Turkish government has called up for service 20 classes between the ages of 21 and 40 including all men who have not yet served in the military forces, the British Broadcasting Co. reported. The reservists have been instructed to report at mobilization points Monday.]

The report here was that, since the Italians had been fighting the Greeks nearly a week without the expected results, Germany was ready to go to the aid of her Axis partner in order to uphold the reputation of the alliance. Before taking such a step, however, the Germans were said to be desirous of knowing Turkey's attitude and hence called Papen back to report.

Inonu Speech Cited

The same source said Axis powers were ready to offer Turkey guarantees in exchange for non-belligerence. Commenting on this phase of the report, a semi-official source said that "the President's speech already has answered such proposals."

In a speech to the national assembly Friday, President Inonu announced Turkey's intentions of holding aloof from the hostilities, at least for the present, and Turkish observers professed to see in the speech an implicit reminder to Germany that the Turks could not be intimidated.

Other reports that Papen's visit was connected with some sort of new Russian-German agreement were given little credence here.

Reports circulated here that further Bulgarian mobilization might be expected within a few days. If Bulgaria does move suddenly, reliable sources said, Turkey can be expected to do likewise. Papen was believed to have carried such a report to Berlin.

Italians Bomb Malta, Greek Ports

Damocles" hanging over the British in the Eastern Mediterranean.

The high command's summary of action in Greece said troops were moving forward in Epirus, northwestern Greece, and that the Italians in their advance south of Borgo Tellini (Kakavia, on the Greek-Albanian border) to Perati bridge on the Kalibaki River had passed well-fortified defense lines.

Fascist air squadrons, the high command declared, repeatedly bombed the Island of Corfu, causing many explosions especially at Fort Nuovo; the port of Patras where a station, a factory and infantry barracks were hit; Larisa, Janina, Salonika, Navarrino and Khania (Canea on Crete).

Valletta Port Damaged

The high command said four bombing formations, protected by fighting planes, carried out the attack on Malta and seriously damaged the port facilities at Valletta, as well as buildings and the air port at Micabba.

They were met by antiaircraft fire and British fighting planes and a violent fight took place in which one British ship was shot down. One Italian plane was also lost.

The high command also claimed an aerial torpedo hit on a British warship along the Egyptian coast. Two Italian submarines were reported missing.

Two Italian Planes Felled

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 3 (AP).—Two Italian planes were shot down, two others damaged and another believed shot down when two formations of raiders, escorted by fighting planes, attacked Malta yesterday, a Royal Air Force communique said today.

A severe attack was delivered on a transport and troop column in Ethiopia on the Metemma-Gondar Road, the communique said, and four direct hits were registered on the line of trucks. Three other bombs fell near the column, it was said.

Numerous reconnaissance flights were carried out over Greek and Italian waters, the R. A. F. said, and one of the British planes engaged in a battle with Italian fighters. An Italian flying boat was said to have been damaged.

Two Italian planes were said to have been shot down and another damaged in an encounter with the South African air force over Kenya.

Tobruk Bombed 71 Times

Rome, Nov. 3 (AP).—The Italian naval base of Tobruk in Libya had been bombed 71 times by British planes since the outbreak of hostilities, the official news agency, Stefani, said today.

Twenty British planes were shot down in these raids, and eight more probably were shot down by anti-aircraft fire, the agency said.

Many British raids were in mass formation, Stefani added.

Roosevelt, Jr., Speaks For Father in Harlem

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., said tonight in a campaign talk in Harlem that "we're not for Al Smith, but, thank God, Wall Street will never get my father."

Republicans, the speaker said, were conducting "the most vicious and most lying campaign in the history of the country" against his father.

The rally was held under auspices of the Negro Youth Division of the National Committee of Independent voters for Roosevelt and Wallace.

British Contract For Seven 4-Motor Bombers on Coast

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 3 (AP).—Great Britain, informed sources said today, has contracted for seven of Consolidated Aircraft Corporation's new four-motored long-range bombers, the first of which was given its initial test flight yesterday.

It was reported the fleet of bombers first would be used to ferry Canadian pilots to the British Isles and return to Canada with fliers not suited for combat duty, who fly fighting planes to England.

Official sources here indicated the British hoped to double the monthly delivery of planes to England if the National Defense Priorities Board gave favorable consideration to that nation's request for permission to purchase 12,000 additional ships in the United States.

Democracy... Your Right of Choice

'HINDSIGHT AND FORESIGHT'
a weekly column by
Holgar J. Johnson
President Institute of Life Insurance

THE most important thing democracy gives us is our right of choice. America is one of the few countries where that right still exists, and tomorrow our citizens will go to the polls to exercise it.

JOHNSON

In addition to this right of political choice, we have another right, equally important. It is the right to choose with whom we shall do business. This right we exercise every time we spend or invest our earnings.

What has this to do with life insurance?

Life insurance has grown in size because it has had to meet the increasing demands of a growing country, with an expanding income, for protection. It has grown in the range of its services because it has been subject to the consumer's freedom of choice as to what kind of policy he prefers and what kind of advice he wants. Policy forms and company practices have been modified again and again to meet his desires.

And life insurance has grown in strength and security because people have insisted on these qualities in the companies they have chosen as a means by which their security plans for their families could be fulfilled, even though they might not live to see these plans completed.

This is not yet the end of change and progress. Our business, like all others, must always respond to the people's choice, and if we can be sure of anything, we are sure their demands will change.

Its size, its services and its strength must continue to meet the evolving needs of a thrifty, progressive and responsible people. For a strong bulwark of family security is basic in a democracy. . . .

This regular Monday column is provided by the Institute of Life Insurance to permit its President to speak to America's policy owners. Address inquiries to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

British Arms Plant Bombed, Nazis Say

Bad Weather Slows Raids; Berlin Admits Losing 7 Planes

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 3.—The bombing of an armament factory at Castle Bromwich and "numerous airdromes, barracks and hangars" elsewhere in Britain was claimed today by the German high command in a summary of Saturday's aerial operations.

Nazi bombers, the communique said, were hampered by heavy rains, low clouds and sleet as they approached the besieged island, but despite the poor weather got through to attack "bombing supply centers especially."

Harbors and industrial facilities were attacked, the high command said, and a fighting plane under the command of Maj. Harlinghausen of the general staff sank a 6,000-ton freighter off the British east coast. This was the major's twentieth ship, bringing his total tonnage in sinkings to more than 100,000, the high command declared.

Admits 7 Planes Lost

Speaking of British raids, the communique said the R. A. F. undertook "only single forays" into the Reich, and that two British planes were shot down by antiaircraft fire over the coast of northern France. Two other British planes were destroyed over London, the high command said. It acknowledged the loss of seven German planes.

"Lord Haw Haw," the unidentified English-speaking announcer for Germany, in a broadcast tonight directed to Britain asserted "You cannot hold out," and said British hopes of survival in the war against Germany were built upon the surmise that the United States would come to their aid.

War Lost, 'Haw Haw' Says

"Plane deliveries are not materializing" from the United States, he said. The British Ambassador to Washington, Lord Lothian, had been called to London to report why he had failed to deliver bigger orders, he added.

Approximately a thousand tons of bombs per week were being dropped on Britain and 45 English factories were destroyed in the last week, he told his listeners.

"These words may come as a shock to you," he said "but the war so far as Britain is concerned long has been lost."

ground from the clouds, skimmed the rooftops and gunned people in the streets and a nearby park in one part of the London area early in the afternoon.

London's only alarm was sounded in late afternoon when a sudden burst of antiaircraft fire met a single raiding plane. The fire sent the raider on a rapid climb into the heavens.

The all-clear was sounded at the time the Nazi air raids usually begin. The wailing died away and an unaccustomed quiet hung heavily over the dark city.

The air ministry said one German bomber and one British fighting plane were shot down in air fighting over Britain during the day.

Saturday Raids Light

These sporadic attacks, barely keeping alive the air war, followed a Saturday night in which Nazi raids were among the lightest of the nearly three months of siege.

Gales which whipped the English Channel Saturday night and bad weather otherwise were said by the British Press Association also to have kept Royal Air Force bombers on the ground. No offensive operations were carried out during the night, it was said.

Air war experts, however, also credited Britain's new defenses, the advent of new German pilots on the bombing runs to replace veterans killed off, new problems created in Germany by British attacks, and German preoccupation with the Mediterranean front with slowing the pace of the air war.

Night Fighters In Use

Strictest censorship is applied to the new defense, but it is no secret that the air path which the raiders fly to London, the industrial Midlands and the northern ports is being made increasingly rough by the multiplication of antiaircraft batteries, the addition of guns with a noisy and frightening performance, and use of more and more fighter planes especially designed for night battles.

These new planes are the Defiants, manned by a pilot who does nothing but fly, while an observer sits back in a revolving gun turret and scans the night sky for stray raiders.

Experts also point out that Britain's autumn and winter weather, with its almost continuous rain, mist and fog, made blacker by a smoke pall, cloaks the cities and presents new and difficult conditions for even the most experienced raider pilots.

Lull Is Temporary

British strategists generally are agreed, however, that the lull in the air war on Britain is temporary.

A sweeping success by the Axis in the Mediterranean theater, they say, probably would mean a subsequent smash against Britain which would make the attacks against London of the past weeks seem like love pats by comparison.

Particularly could such a furious attack be expected, they say, if the Nazis and Fascists opened the way to the unlimited oil supplies of Iraq and Iran in the Near East.

Sidelights of the War

Deep Raid Shelters Too Costly, Britons Urged to 'Take Risks'

London, Nov. 3 (AP).—Herbert Morrison, minister of home security, told Britons in a broadcast today that deep air raid shelters for all are "beyond the bounds of practical possibility" and appealed to them to maintain the will to "take risks in freedom's cause."

He outlined this program:

1. Building of more Anderson shelters — inexpensive corrugated iron huts which critics assail because they are not proof against a direct hit.
2. Opening of private basement shelters where feasible.
3. Increasing use of floors above the ground as well as basements in certain types of strong modern buildings.
4. Installation of nearly 1,750,000 bunks now on order for subways and inauguration of a ticket system to abolish queues.

Churchill May Speak On New War Events

London, Nov. 3 (AP).—Informed political circles expect Prime Minister Churchill to make an important statement on recent war developments when Parliament meets again.

Italy's invasion of Greece and Adolf Hitler's interviews with Spanish Generalissimo Franco, French Chief of State Marshal Petain and Benito Mussolini probably will be chief topics, these sources said.

Two domestic problems of considerable urgency—the winter's coal supply and rent liabilities of tenants who have been forced from their homes by German bombs—also are expected to be dealt with by the Prime Minister and later debated.

France to Subsidize Havas News Agency

Vichy, France, Nov. 3 (AP).—Marshal Petain signed a law today authorizing the French state to spend up to 25,000,000 francs for financial participation in Havas news agency.

The agency, a private organization, has been subsidized by French governments and has been considered semiofficial. Today's move is in line with the government's announced intention of obtaining control of press and radio.

England to Grow Vegetables in Parks

London, Nov. 3 (AP).—Cabbages, radishes and onions will decorate England's public parks next spring as part of Britain's wartime food program.

Spain Forms Agency For Latin America

Madrid, Nov. 3 (AP).—Spain has created a "council of Hispanicism" to tighten her ties with Latin America, and the press says it will show Latin Americans "that they are our brothers—by the grace of God."

Little is known about the council, but the Falangist newspaper Arriba says it will represent "Spain's ambitious foreign policy in its most vital sense."

Arriba says Spain "drained herself of her own blood to give blood to America, and it has taken her three centuries to feel her pulse strong again."

Now Spain feels a fatherly love for America, and "in the vast field of Chile, Argentina, Peru and Mexico they understand and love us—sometimes without realizing it."

Italian Submarine Driven Into Tangier

London, Nov. 3 (INS).—An Italian submarine has been driven into Tangier harbor in an effort to escape destruction at the hands of three British destroyers and a seaplane, according to a Reuters (British) dispatch from Tangier tonight.

30 on Britsh Cruiser Killed in Plane Attack

London, Nov. 3 (AP).—The admiralty announced tonight that three officers and 27 noncommissioned officers and men were killed and 33 wounded on the British cruiser Liverpool when it was attacked more than two weeks ago in the Medfterranean by an Italian torpedo-plane.

Another admiralty communique reported that Rear Admiral E. J. G. MacKinnon, 60, holder of the Distinguished Service Order from the World War, was missing, but it gave no details.

Odo's Friends Deny Germans Offered Peace

Refugees Assert Nazi Are Trying To 'Smear' Duke

Reports that Hitler has sent peace terms to the United States for transmission to Britain were labeled a "fabrication" yesterday by friends of the Duke of Wurttemberg, cousin of King George VI, who was said to be the German emissary.

These friends, whose names can not be revealed since they are German refugees who fear retaliation against relatives in Europe, charged that the reports were the work of Nazi agents seeking to "smear" the Duke, himself a German refugee, who has devoted six years to aiding Hitler's victims.

Although it is not clear how, the London press and the British Broadcasting Co. became unwitting accomplices in the "plot," it was said.

The Duke, a Benedictine Father, arrived in the United States by clipper two weeks ago. After his arrival he spent several days here conferring with State Department officials on refugee problems, then returned to New York.

London newspapers Saturday carried reports that he was acting as Hitler's agent in a peace move. The British Broadcasting Co. yesterday repeated the story, stating that the duke, who is known as Father Odo, left the Benedictine Order in 1933 and adopted a pagan faith.

The Benedictine Priory here, where Father Odo stayed during his Washington visit, said these reports would seem to be "a hoax, pure and simple," adding that "as far as we know" the duke is still a member of the order, and has worked in close touch with the Vatican on aid for German refugees.

Dr. Goetz Briefs, professor of economics at Georgetown University, who told The Post yesterday that he had known the duke for years, said he was chairman of the Aide Aux Refugies Catholiques, a refugee relief society with headquarters in Switzerland.

Dr. Briefs, who said that the duke was expelled from Germany in 1934, pointed out that Father Odo took part in the Evian conference on refugees called in 1938 by President Roosevelt.

abroad that the peace "terms" to be suggested by Hitler as a basis for ending hositilities already have been transmitted to this Government, but it was acknowledged that the "rumors" had been received. No official would comment.

An article in the London Sunday Dispatch, transmitted by the Associated Press, said the terms in general provided that the "undefeated and unconquered British Empire" should remain intact and that Germany should assume domination over all of continental Europe.

On these terms, the newspaper reported, Hitler was willing to sign a "10-year nonaggression pact with Great Britain and the United States" and agree to disarmament on the basis of "equality" and the "status quo."

Officials here were entirely uncommittal on possible reaction to such terms. It was clear that they did not intend to place themselves in the position of commenting on any communication not received or on any approach not yet made.

In unofficial circles, however, it was pointed out that British Government officials already, on several occasions, have rejected any suggestion of a peace that would leave "Hitlerism" in control of the European continent.

The American Government has never been called upon to take any stand on such proposals and therefore has never made its position known.

Keen interest, however, was manifested throughout the capital in the possibility that the German dictator may be preparing some type of peace declaration.

The Caribbean situation, with conjecture rife that this country may be contemplating some definite action designed to guard France's American possessions against any threat to their sovereignty, aroused more immediate speculation.

Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador, it was learned, has arranged to call at the State Department today and is expected to present to Secretary Hull Marshal Philippe Petain's reply to President Roosevelt's recent private message. Mr. Roosevelt is believed to have expressed this country's concern lest any change in French sovereignty over the American possessions be contemplated.

At the same time, the Associated Press reported from San Juan, Puerto Rico, that recent arrivals there from Martinique were being quoted as saying residents of the island expect some United States action in the Caribbean after tomorrow's Presidential election.

Three additional destroyers were reported to have sailed into the Caribbean, where eight destroyers and six patrol planes already are known to be cruising, under mysterious circumstances. They reportedly left Balboa, C. Z., yesterday, seemingly in haste. Officials here refused to reveal whether the destroyers had left, or the destination of the vessels.

Speculation centered around possibility that the naval units might visit Martinique, where 100 American-made warplanes have been idling since France capitulated to Germany. Also in the Martinique harbor are strong French naval units. Fate of the French island is of vital concern to this Government for several reasons.

Hull and Welles met Mr. Roosevelt's train when it arrived yesterday morning from Cleveland, where the Chief Executive Saturday night delivered his next-to-the-last major campaign speech.

The State Department chieftains then rode with the President to the White House, where they continued their conference. There was no comment as to the nature of the conversations, but it was assumed they brought Mr. Roosevelt up to date on the tense international situation.

Some observers believed that the Martinique situation undoubtedly was discussed, together with status of Guadalupe and French Guiana, two other French Western Hemisphere territories.

Presence of the eight destroyers and six aircraft in the Caribbean was confirmed Saturday by the Navy Department, which said they "had departed from Key West, Fla., to participate in scheduled exercises in the Guantanamo-San Juan-Culebra area." The department said the units all were "regularly assigned to the patrol force." They left Key West early last week.

Hull later said he understood the cruises of the eight destroyers were merely for training purposes.

Officials refused to say whether any of the ships might visit Martinique, but it was pointed out unofficially that naval vessels engaged in exercises or patrol duties frequently pay "courtesy" calls at various nearby ports.

There were other unofficial reports that some or all of the naval vessels might call at St. Lucia, near Martinique, a British island which has been mentioned as a possible site for a new United States base in connection with the transaction whereby this country acquired base sites from Great Britain in exchange for 50 over-age destroyers.

Vichy Unperturbed

Vichy, France, Nov. 3.—Any fears the Vichy government may have had of a possible American "grab" of Martinique or other French territory in the New World for United States air and naval bases have been relieved by Washington assurnaces, it was reported tonight.

The French possessions in American waters, some quarters said, will be neutralized in event of a possible spread of the European conflict that might involve the United States.

It was said there can be no question of American protective or preventive occupation of the French West Indies colonies because they have not been menaced by Germany or Italy. The Axis nas not voiced a single demand for a share in France's American holdings, it was added.

Since receiving the United States assurances, it was said that the French government feels "not the slightest apprehension" when cables report that the American fleet is maneuvering in the Antilles waters within the new defense zone formed by the naval bases obtained by the United States from Britain.

Martinique Expects U. S. to Act

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Nov. 3 (AP). Recent arrivals from Fort de France, Martinique, were quoted tonight as saying residents of that French-owned island expect some American action in the Caribbean after the United States Presidential election.

These sources also said the natives of the French West Indies are looking to the United States for protection now that those islands are cut off from France.

A possibility that the United States Navy officers anticipate possible intervention to protect French West Indies possessions from falling into the hands of other European powers was seen in the frequent inquiries as to actual conditions now in Martinique, the cost of living there, housing conditions and quarters available for immediate occupancy.

However, naval authorities here were reported not to know the exact destination of the destroyers which left Key West, Fla., during the last week.

A naval patrol squadron based at Key West flew here Friday and still is at anchor.

Hatch Act Charges Seen After Election

Only 100 Complaints Filed to Date, but Flood Is Expected

By Edward Ryan

Election day is almost sure to be the signal for a burst of complaints that the Hatch Act has been violated, according to officials in the Civil Service Commission.

Their prediction is based mostly on the dearth of Hatch Act complaints since the second of the twin "clean politics" laws was signed in July.

So far, fewer than 100 complaints have been received, and only about a quarter of them have been thought serious enough to require preliminary investigation. Instead of numerous complaints, there has been a steady flow of inquiries, from individuals and organizations, about Hatch Act interpretations, and possible findings on the finer points in the law.

Bid for "Reserve"

Stacking up the number of straight inquiries against the tiny total of complaints has led officials who will enforce the clean politics rules for Federal, State and local employes into guessing that campaign organizatoins have been keeping the Hatch Act for reserve political ammunition after the election.

In prosecuting Hatch Act violations the commission faces the prospect of reversing its older practice in handilng political activity cases brought up under the civil service rules.

In the civil service cases the commission had discretion in fixing penalties, ranging from a reprimand to dismissal from the service. Legal probing of the Hatch Act in combination with the civil service rules has brought the ruling that any proved violation can have but one penalty. This is dismissal from the service.

Subject to Review

Unlike the civil service political activity cases, the Hatch Act prosecutions are subject to review in the courts. As a result, where the civil service cases could be handled as administrative business without open hearings, the Hatch Act violations will have to be aired in open hearings, with a complete record suitable to take into court.

The time for making public any Hatch Act violation, officials said, probably will be after the complaint has been given a preliminary investigation and is found serious enough for formal prosecution.

The Government has now taken to collecting school and college diplomas to hang on the wall.

Their collection, being shown in the Interior Department art gallery, has examples from schools in 53 countries. They were picked by the comparative education division in the Office of Education, whose employes examined about 10,000 diplomas to get the 320 in the exhibit. Those chosen are in 41 languages, including Icelandic, Georgian, Ruthenian, Siamese, Afghan and Gaelic.

The collection and the experience that went with getting it together are coming in handy now for scores of refugees in this country who need help in establishing proof of their education in order to enroll in American schools to get jobs.

The refugee can apply to the division and get from it a questionnaire that the agency can use to determine his educational background. In 1918, its first year, the division handled six of these requests; last year it took care of 1,200.

St. Margaret's Hears Rector's First Sermon

Christian discipleship means registering for selective service in Christlikeness, the Rev. Armand T. Eyler said yesterday in his inaugural sermon as rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Connecticut Avenue and Bancroft Place Northwest.

Addressing more than 600 parishioners, the former St. Augustine (Fla.), rector referred to the "spiritual hunger" in human souls today, declaring:

"We are looking for the heart and soul behind the universe—the human soul that will unify this complex, complicated, worried world, so that we can spend our days, not with the trivial and tinsel, but be caught up in the eternal purpose fashioned by the infinite mind.

Mr. Eyler, successor to Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, who recently retired after more than 40 years as rector, was presented by the Rev. William Mayo, who has been serving as minister-in-charge in the interim.

Regardless of Tuesday's election results, no human power can prevent America's entry into the war abroad, the Rev. Thomas Boorde predicted in his sermon yesterday at Anacostia Baptist Church.

"Whether Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected, or Mr. Willkie elected, or even if it were possible for my own choice of candidates, Roger Babson, to be elected, no human power can prevent our entering the war," the clergyman said, adding that "it would not be fair to place the blame on the man who secures the most votes next Tuesday."

In his "Message for Today," published in yesterday's Congregational Bulletin at Union Methodist Church, Dr. John R. Edwards, pastor, said:

"The church must become increasingly a place of inspiration and guidance for our young men awaiting call, and of moral protection for those in training and in service."

Manwhile, he wrote, our prayer should be "Give us peace in our time, O Lord."

McNary Returns To Oregon Farm

Salem, Oreg., Nov. 3 (INS).—The Oregon farm of Senator Charles L. McNary tonight offered a quiet haven to the Republican Vice Presidential nominee as he brought six weeks of strenuous campaigning to a close.

He returned with Mrs. McNary from Sacramento, Calif., where he made his final plea for election of Wendell L. Willkie and himself. A cheering crowd met the Vice Presidential nominee at Salem.

country in the world possesses at the present time.

Henderson said he wanted to "nail a phoney statistical comparison" of rearmament efforts in 1917 and 1940 which he said was made by Col. Leonard P. Ayres, of Cleveland. Ayres said last September that Army expenditures accelerated 28 times faster in the first five war months of 1917 than in the similar period of 1940.

Henderson contended that no "real expenditure figures" existed for 1917 and that what Ayres called expenditures were "merely warrants drawn by disbursing officers" and did not represent payments. He added that it was inaccurate to compare the two periods because the country was at war in April, 1917, and the "extraordinary appropriations for defense did not start in April, 1940, but came much later."

Meanwhile, the Army revealed it is turning over to high speed electric machines the job of keeping individual tab on the million men expected to be in uniform by spring.

Complex punch card machinery already has displaced clerks in the Adjutant General's office, and is to be installed at important military posts.

By means of special cards with holes punched in appropriate positions, this machinery will keep up to the minute records on both personnel and materiel, assuring that the soldier will get his pay, receive mail from home promptly, and be assigned work for which he is best fitted.

Officials said the new system would take from the shoulders of troops in the field a great part of the burden of paper work, which has been an onerous chore to military forces in the past.

In the World War, the Army was almost snowed under by little white and blue pieces of paper recording each change in the status of soldiers. The slips become known as "snowflakes."

The Navy, too, is streamlining its paper work. Secretary Knox has put a force of business efficiency specialists to work on the record system at the Navy Department.

takes any confidential papers away from his office. He described as "too fantastic" the suggestion that the intruder might have been seeking confidential documents.

Nothing was taken from the house, Commander Sherman said.

The intermittent flashing of the burglar's flashlight in the darkened second-floor hall awakened Miss Sherman, who screamed to her father that a man was in the house.

Commander Sherman, after finding that lights could not be turned on and after replacing the fuses, searched the house, while Mrs. Sherman telephoned police from her bedside.

Meanwhile, the intruder escaped, apparently through a first-floor window which was found open. Paint beneath the window bore scrape marks of a man's shoes.

Commander Sherman said he believed the burglar had entered the study on the first floor because it is close to the inside garage entrance. He said the garage sometimes is left open during the day and that it would have been possible for an observer to note the fuse box there without arousing suspicion.

House Chaplain Says U. S. Needs More 'John Smiths'

The world needs fewer geniuses and more plain "John Smiths," Dr. James Shera Montgomery, Chaplain of the House, said yesterday.

He spoke at St. Paul's Methodist Church, Thirteenth and Crittenden Streets Northwest, on "Citizenship Sunday," preliminary to a National Christian Mission.

The "John Smiths," the chaplain said, are the unsung and unseen heroes, who, by their deeds, courage and devotion make like worth while for those about them. They are comparable, he continued, to St. Andrew, the fisherman, who provided the loaves and fishes that fed the multitudes.

Dr. Montgomery is a member of the Methodist Conference. He was presented by the Rev. Charles F. Phillips, pastor.

Biddle Will Greet Paderewski in U.S.

President Roosevelt last night directed Ambassador to Poland Anthony J. Drexel Biddle to meet Ignace Paderewski, famed musician and first president of the Republic of Poland, when Paderewski arrives in this country Wednesday.

Biddle will meet Paderewski as a personal representative of the President when the Polish national hero arrives aboard the American Export liner Excambion.

Paderewski, who was named president when the Republic of Poland was created after the first World War, was in private life when the German army overran his country last year. Biddle was in Warsaw, and escaped with his family after his country home had been damaged by German bombs, fleeing by a circuitous route to Rumania.

naires to registrants. At least one local board, however—No. 1, Jackson Elementary School, Thirtieth and R. Streets Northwest—already has begun distribution.

The board chairman, Francis G. Addison, jr., said yesterday that 75 questionnaires were sent out Saturday. Harlan Wood, chairman, Board No. 10, said his organization expects to send out 30 questionnaires today and 30 on each of the ensuing six days. This board's headquarers are at Cooke Elementary School, Seventeenth and Euclid Streets Northwest.

Wood believed each questionnaire would be classified within five days after being received from the selectee.

Board No. 1 has sent two form notices to registrants. One advises the registrant that he has been sent a questionnaire and notifies him of penalties for failure to return it within five days. It states further:

"Any registrant whose order number is included above and who seeks a deferred classification, may, within five days date from the date hereof, submit proper affidavits in the space provided in his questionnaire or submit them separately. Any other qualified person seeking deferred classification for the registrant shall use form 42 (claim for deferred classification by dependent, employer, or other person), or other applicable forms available at the office of this local board."

The local board, it was said, will each day post at its office a notice of the order numbers of the registrants to whom questionnaires have been mailed that day.

Mailing Constitutes Notice

"Either the mailing of a notice or the entry in the classification record of the date the notice was mailed shall constitute notice to the registrant and all concerned. This is true whether or not the mailed notice is actually received by the person to whom it is addressed," it was stated.

The date when action was taken by the local board will be written in the classification record in each of the following instances:

Whenever a duty is to be performed by a registrant; whenever a period of time begins to run within which a registrant is to perform a duty, and whenever a period of time begins to run within which a registrant may claim a privilege.

The classification record is open to inspection by the public during the board's business hours, it was announced. It should be inspected by registrants and others interested, the Board urged.

Meanwhile the recruiting office of the Fifth Battalion, Marine Corps Reserves will be open today, tomorrow and Wednesday to enlist applicants who have had at least one year's service in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps, that organization announced. No untrained men are being accepted. The office is at [illegible] Indiana Avenue Northwest.

Marine Corps Reservists who have transferred from an organized status to a volunteer status in the Reserve District are also being urged to rejoin that battalion, which leaves for active duty Thursday morning, it was said by Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, U. S. M. C., commanding.

"It's a KARASTAN— and isn't it a beauty"

Jim gave a low whistle and stood up to get a better look.

"Come, come; children, tell Papa. Who left you a million?"

Bob just looked prouder than ever. "That's just it—a Karastan looks like a million, but it isn't. You could afford one too . . . if you only knew it.

"That rug is an excellent copy of one of the finest Persian patterns. The original is worth hundreds of dollars. Sue and I actually compared this Karastan with its original . . . and we couldn't tell the difference. You couldn't either. Magnificent colors, intricate pattern. That's why people call it, 'The Wonder Rug of America.' These Karastans are made right here in this country, and ours cost us exactly $169.50 . . believe it or NOT!"

Six Journalists Forecast Election on Air Forum

Radio Forum Hears Predictions—Three Will Be Wrong

Six nationally known journalists turned soothsayers in a radio broadcast from Washington last night to predict the Presidential election's outcome, and three of them were wrong.

Forecasters of a Roosevelt victory were Ernest Lindley, Washington Post columnist and chief of the Washington Bureau of Newsweek Magazine; Kenneth C. Crawford, Washington chief of the newspaper PM and former president of the American Newspaper Guild, and Gladstone Williams, Washington correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution and other papers.

A Willkie victory was forecast by Boake Carter, radio commentator and newspaper columnist; Emil Hurja, professional political forecaster and publisher of Pathfinder Magazine, and Ray T. Tucker, columnist.

Various methods were employed and various reasons cited for the predictions.

Crawford's System

"What I do," said Crawford in explanation of his conclusions, "is add up the guesses of all the experts, divide by 13½ and take the square root of the result. Then I throw away the answer and do my own wishful guessing. My system may not be scientific, but it produced a closer approximation than the polls got in 1936."

He said "the owners of the United States" are supporting Willkie, "the workers of the United States," Roosevelt.

Declaring the third term issue "has not taken hold," he concluded, "I can see Mr. Willkie with a maximum of 10 States and less than one-third of the electoral vote."

Carter based his prediction of a Willkie landslide, he said, on a tour of the country. "All I know," he said, "is what I feel and see and hear." He said the women of the country and the "middle class" would swing the election for Willkie, but if Roosevelt won it would be by a small majority, resulting in "disunity."

Lindley made a State-by-State survey of the picture and forecast a Roosevelt victory "by a comfortable margin."

"I should be surprised," he said, "if Willkie receives more than 300 electoral votes or if Roosevelt receives more than 500."

Willkie, said Tucker, will get into the White House "through a window, perhaps, instead of the front door." He said Roosevelt had received "most of the bad breaks of the campaign."

The main factors against the President's reelection, he commented, are the chief issues of the campaign—that a third term will mean "a Royal Roosevelt dynasty" and that his reelection will get the country into war.

Sees 350 Votes for Willkie

Williams said the odds were on Roosevelt and, referring to Tucker's prediction of a Willkie success, said "one of us is going to be sick Wednesday, and I feel all right tonight."

Hurja, who is regarded as a wizard at figures on the basis of previous accurate predictions, summed up a mass of arithmetic by forecasting 350 electoral votes for Willkie.

With antithird term sentiment rising, he said, "opinion is on the march." He pointed to a "trend" that he said was taking Roosevelt voters to Willkie "in large degrees" and declared:

"When the trend is rising, you might as well try to stop Niagara."

The prognosticators appeared on Theodore Granik's "American Forum of the Air," broadcast from the Willard Hotel over WOL and a Mutual Broadcasting System network.

Doctor, 78, Seized With Gun At Willkie Rally, Freed in Bail

Was Ardent Supporter Of G.O.P. Candidate; Pistol Found Harmless

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Dr. Union S. Ward, 78, a physician arrested on a gun charge at Madison Square Garden last night during the Republican rally at which Wendell L. Willkie spoke, was released in $500 bail today pending grand jury action.

Charged with violating the Sullivan antifirearms law, Dr. Ward, wearing a large Willkie button on his coat, was arraigned in felony court and waived examination.

He was arrested 20 feet from where Willkie stood on a platform waving to the thousands packed into the garden. In his left pocket was a .32 caliber revolver loaded with five cartridges, but detectives said its firing pin was faulty and that the weapon was harmless. In his apartment police found two other loaded guns which, they said, Dr. Ward admitted owning for his protection.

After questioning the physician, who said he once had been a cadet at the United States Military Academy and later of the New York National Guard, Assistant District Attorney Jacob J. Rosenblum announced that he was convinced Dr. Ward meant no harm. He was an ardent Willkie supporter, the prosecutor said.

Final Gallup Poll Gives Roosevelt 276 Electoral Votes, to 255 for Willkie

President Sure Of 21 States, Survey Finds

Republican Expected To Take New York And Pennsylvania

(Democratic by more than 54 per cent) accounting for 198 electoral votes. Willkie has eight sure States (Republican by more than 54 per cent) accounting for 59 electoral votes.

In between are 19 States with 274 electoral votes, where neither candidate leads by more than 54 per cent. These States hold the key to victory or defeat for the two candidates.

Eyes on the Weather

The survey found Roosevelt holding a slight advantage in nine States with 78 electoral votes, and Willkie holding an advantage in ten States with 196 electoral votes.

Any unusual or dramatic event in international or domestic affairs, or in local situations, occurring on Monday could tip the scales in these close States.

Politicans north of the Mason-Dixon line will be following the United States weather reports with intense interests, as rain in large States like New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois may make a difference in the vote turn-out of the predominantly Republican rural areas. The long-range weather forecast issued Friday predicted rain in New York and several other large States.

The strong Willkie trend in closing days of the campaign provides the big question mark. Will it continue between Sunday noon, when this survey was completed, and Tuesday morning, when the voters go to the polls? Or will Roosevelt's Monday night speech pull the election out of the fires as it did in the famous Lehman-Dewey race in New York in 1938?

In the light of all facts and in view of the margin of error which experience has shown to be present in sampling operations, the American Institute of Public Opinion does not believe the data here reported justifies a prediction of the outcome of this election.

Following are the divisions of major-party sentiment in each of the 48 States, as indicated in Institute returns up to Sunday:

Sure Democratic States

(Roosevelt Leading by More Than 54 Per Cent Up to Sunday)

South Carolina	97 per cent
Mississippi	94 per cent
Georgia	87 per cent
Alabama	86 per cent
Louisiana	86 per cent
Arkansas	82 per cent
Texas	79 per cent
North Carolina	72 per cent
Florida	72 per cent
Virginia	70 per cent
Tennessee	64 per cent
Arizona	61 per cent
Maryland	59 per cent
West Virginia	59 per cent
California	58 per cent
Montana	57 per cent
Washington	57 per cent
Nevada	56 per cent
Oklahoma	56 per cent
Delaware	56 per cent
Utah	55 per cent

States Leaning Democratic

(Roosevelt Leading With 54 to 50 per cent Up to Sunday.)

Kentucky	54 per cent
Oregon	54 per cent
Rhode Island	54 per cent
Wyoming	53 per cent
New Mexico	53 per cent
Connecticut	53 per cent
New Jersey	52 per cent
Massachusetts	51 per cent
Minnesota	51 per cent

Sure Republican States

(Willkie Leading With More Than 54 Per Cent Up to Sunday)

Nebraska	59 per cent
South Dakota	59 per cent
Vermont	58 per cent
Maine	57 per cent
Kansas	57 per cent
Iowa	55 per cent
Indiana	55 per cent
Colorado	55 per cent

States Leaning Republican

(Willkie Leading With 54 to 50 Per Cent Up to Sunday.)

North Dakota	54 per cent
Illinois	52 per cent
Michigan	52 per cent
Wisconsin	52 per cent
Ohio	51 per cent
New York	51 per cent
Pennsylvania	51 per cent
Missouri	51 per cent
New Hampshire	51 per cent
Idaho	51 per cent

The Democrats have a great advantage in the number of sure States. To win, President Roosevelt has only to get 68 electoral votes more than the 198 electoral votes in sure Democratic States. Willkie, to win, must take all the States sure and leaning Republican, plus 11 electoral votes.

The Republican's chief hope of victory lies in the trend which, since early October, has been toward Willkie, and in the greater zeal or intensity of feeling found by Institute studies among the Willkie followers which may result in a higher proportion of Republicans getting out to vote than Democrats.

From the State-by-State reports of candidate strength listed above, the margin of error in the leaning Democratic and leaning Republican States, it can be seen that Roosevelt's maximum is 472 electoral votes. This result would materialize from his sweeping the leaning Democratic and the leaning Republican States—States definitely within the possible range of sampling error.

Posers for "Prophets"

While the Institute's election studies provide basic material for political forecasters who will attempt to predict the results of the election next Tuesday, there are several cautions which should be kept in mind by those who interpret the Institute's figures for themselves.

First and foremost is the fact that many of the States listed for both Mr. Willkie and President Roosevelt are extremely close. Many of the largest States—with the greatest number of electoral votes—are to be found in the groups where one candidate leads with less than 54 per cent of the popular vote up to Sunday. Such States are within the margin of error which must be taken into account in interpreting sampling studies of this kind.

Second, although President Roosevelt has maintained a popular vote majority throughout the entire campaign, a bare popular majority next Tuesday will not be enough to re-elect him. Because of the surplus Democratic majorities in the South, a Democratic Presidential candidate needs about 52 per cent of the total popular vote in order to give matter of electoral votes.

Unsurveyable Factors

Finally, while surveys can reveal the division of sentiment between candidates at a given time, there are several important factors which may come into play on election day which cannot be measured beforehand by scientific means. There are, in short, "unsurveyable" factors, such as the influence of the weather, the effectiveness of the parties in "getting out the vote" for their candidate, and the presence of political corruption in some cases.

The best test of survey accuracy in a national study of this kind is the average State-by-State deviation from the actual results. In 1936 the Institute had an average error of about 6 percentage points, and its aim this year will be to reduce that figure. In view of the relative closeness of the race this year, the Institute confidently expects its findings will be on the "wrong" side in some States.

Even after the tumult and the shouting have died, the 1940 Presidential election will likely go down in the history books as one of the most dramatic of all time. Political historians will find the record of the campaign outlined step-by-step in eight successive Institute surveys.

While many voters have adhered to their favorite candidates from start to finish of the campaign, the surveys show that there has been an important and volatile group which has shifted with the major events of the past 14 weeks.

Indeed, the institute's surveys show that if the election had been held in early August Wendell Willkie would have been a definite favorite. And on the other hand, they show that if the election had been held a month ago President Roosevelt would likely have received an electoral vote landslide.

Institute studies have shown three major phases in this campaign: (1) an exceptionally close race during the first weeks of the campaign, when President Roosevelt led with 51 per cent of the popular vote but trailed in electoral votes (2) a sharp upswing for Roosevelt beginning in September, and (3) the counter-trend to Wendell Willkie which began in early October and which cut down President Roosevelt's popular vote lead during the last weeks of the race.

The trend of the major-party popular vote, as reported in these eight surveys has been:

	POPULAR VOTE % Roosevelt	% Willkie
Aug. 4 Report	51%	49%
Aug. 25 Report	52	49
Sept. 20 Report	55	45
Oct. 6 Report	56	44
Oct. 18 Report	55	45
Oct. 27 Report	54.5	45.5
Oct. 30 Report	53	47

Questions Remaining

More important than measuring election sentiment, however, is charting the currents of American public opinion on the scores of issues upon which the American electorate never has the chance to voice itself—issues which are never individually presented on the official ballot on election day.

Once Tuesday's election returns have been completed, for instance, there will inevitably arise the question: What did the votes of some 50 million Americans means with regard to American aid to Britain, with regard to domestic policy and so on?

Supported by leading American newspapers of all shades of political belief, the Institute has endeavored for more than five years to measure and clarify the main trends of American opinion on just such issues. These newspapers, numbering more than 130, provide the entire support for the Institute's research.

Experience in Past 5 Years

Obviously the Institute has had an opportunity over these past five years to test all sorts of sampling methods, and throughout the present campaign Institute statisticians have experimented with at least six different procedures for measuring particular aspects of election sentiment.

These have included work with "attitude scales," intensity measurements, studies of voting certainty, examination of special "barometer" areas where the vote in past Presidential years has been an exceptionally good guide to the national results, and experiments with a secret ballot in public opinion sampling.

These studies will permit a more complete analysis of the 1940 Presidential election than has been possible in any past election; hence a full report will be provided on these experimental studies immediately after election day, as well as an analysis of such survey flaws as may be revealed.

Pollers Will Study Meaning of 'Mandate'

The most important part of the Institute's work—far more important than measuring election sentiment—will begin once the election is over. One problem which invariably faces a successful Presidential candidate, and the country itself, is "What does the "mandate" of the voters mean?

Will it be a "mandate" to enforce every single item in the winner's campaign platform, or in the winner's speeches, where these have differed in some way from the platform itself?

Beginning within a few hours of the actual election, new Institue fact-finding studies will be launched to answer the question: "What does the voters' mandate mean—in domestic affairs, with regard to aid to Britain, in labor policy and defense?"

'Bandwagon' Theory Gets Another Jolt

The results of Institute surveys throughout the campaign have dealt a blow to the so-called "bandwagon" theory.

This notion—formerly much cherished by politicians—holds that once a candidate begins to take a commanding lead in an election race, there is a rush of "bandwagon" voters to his side.

If such a bandwagon had existed in the present campaign, then President Roosevelt's majority should have increased steadily after mid-campaign, when it became apparent that the President was ahead. On the contrary, there followed a rise in the strength of Mr. Willkie.

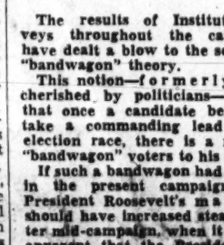
The classic example of the bandwagon that didn't roll was the decline in Gov. Landon's voting strength during the 1936 campaign, despite the presence of the famous Literary Digest poll showing Landon far ahead.

In numerous State and national elections the Institute has never found any evidence that a bandwagon vote actually exists.

The Presidential Campaign

Martin Answers Roosevelt Criticism

Boston, Nov. 3 (AP).—United States Representative Joseph W. Martin (Republican), Massachusetts, whose vote on Administration farm measures was criticized here Wednesday by President Roosevelt, said tonight he would support agricultural bills "which will give some real relief."



MARTIN

"But I won't support measures which will hasten the bankruptcy of the Nation and which at the same time will impoverish millions of farmers and destroy a great industry," he added in an address prepared for a Massachusetts Republican "victory" rally.

The President charged in his Boston speech that the Republican National chairman had voted against every Administration farm measure and suggested:

"Perhaps he will be rewarded for this loyal service to the principle of his party, by being appointed Secretary of Agriculture."

Martin, in reply, declared that "the Roosevelt-Wallace farm program increased foreign crop production. It hiked to tremendous proportions the agricultural surpluses held in stock by the government, stocks which hang like a millstone around the neck of agriculture to depress prices the farmer receives for his crop.

"This tragic failure to solve the farm problem hurts everyone. The merchant, the doctor, the banker, the worker, all are interested in a flourishing agricultural industry. Make the farmer prosperous and we all prosper."

21% of Democrats Claimed by Bolters

New York, Nov. 3.—Indications of a trend of from 21 to 26 per cent of registered Democrats to Willkie were reported today by Alan Valentine, executive director of the National Committee of Democrats for Willkie.

VALENTINE

Other members of the committee are John W. Hanes and Lewis W. Douglas, former Undersecretary of the Treasury and budget director respectively in the Roosevelt Administration; Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson prominent Oklahoma Democrat, and Mrs. Isabella Greenway King, former Democratic Congresswoman from Arizona.

Valentine's statement said: "Final reports from our State and local chairmen in 37 States indicate a trend of from 21 to 26 per cent of registered Democrats to Willkie, with the greatest shift taking place in the large industrial States—New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Ohio, and New Jersey.

"Most of these Democrats will vote the straight Democratic ticket with the exception of the two top names on the ballot. They regard Mr. Willkie as more of a Democrat than Mr. Roosevelt and are shocked by Roosevelt's violation of the historic tradition of the Democratic Party against a third term for any President.

"The reports represent a cross-section of Democratic sentiment everywhere outside of the deep South, and include Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri and Oklahoma, with special emphasis on the industrial States and cities in the North . . ."

LaGuardia Lashes At Willkie Backers

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia charged today that numerous American corporations and their directors who were backing Wendell L. Willkie had "interests" in Germany, and that these firms and individuals "hoped to change the United States of America to United States, Inc."

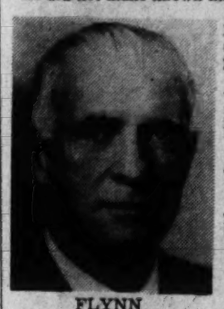
Predicting a "smashing victory" for President Roosevelt, the mayor, declared in a statement:

"Here they are: General Motors, Ford Motor Co., International Telephone & Telegraph Co., Westinghouse, Remington-Rand, Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and Socony Vacuum Oil Co., among others."

Flynn Grows Even More Optimistic

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn said tonight that he had revised upward his forecast that President Roosevelt would be reelected with a minumum of 427 electoral votes.

He did not make known his new estimate.



FLYNN

In a formal statement, Flynn charged the Republicans spent "at least" five times the approximate $2,300,000 he said they had reported.

"My information," Flynn said, "is that their expenditures for billboard advertising, alone, was in excess of this figure. Of course, they have camouflaged to evade a direct conflict with the Hatch Act.

"They are carrying on the same sort of campaign to the end. For example, we have just been advised of instructions to their Western workers to have the newspapers display prominently, early on Election Day, bulletins showing that Willkie is sweeping the East."

During the campaign, Flynn said, there had been "a snowstorm of anonymous statements, regarding the President and his family, fathered by apocryphal leagues and clubs that have no existence, that passed the bounds of decency."

Willkie supporters, Flynn said, had injected religious and racial issues, and had falsely tried to shake confidence in insurance policies, social security policies and pension systems.

"Mr. Willkie himself," Flynn said, "has not hesitated to convey to the people that the reelection of President Roosevelt would mean that we would be immediately plunged into war. . . . He knows that no President could make such commitment without the consent of the Senate, and every authority in the Government has denied the charge."

Farley Drives For Up-State Vote

New York, Nov. 3 ½.—James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, urged up-State party workers today to "put forth every effort" on election day and added:

FARLEY

"There never was a time during the years that have passed in the campaigns in which we have worked together where I have been more deeply concerned than at the present time for the success of the Democratic Party in the State of New York."

Farley said in telegrams that it was of the "greatest importance" to keep down the normal Republican majority up-State "to make certain that New York State will be in the Democratic column on election night." New York City is normally overwhelmingly Democratic.

Farley said his message, sent in line with a custom he inaugurated in 1928, was "extremely urgent and important." In it he said:

" . . . personally urge you to put forth every effort at your command and to work with those associated with you to the end that every possible vote obtainable is brought to the polls on election day in support of President Roosevelt and the entire Democratic ticket."

Roosevelt Speaks At 11 Tonight

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—The radio division of the Democratic National Committee said today that President Roosevelt's election eve broadcast from his home at Hyde Park would be made shortly after 11 p. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow. He will be introduced by Secretary of State Hull, speaking from Washington.

HULL

The President will highlight a two-hour program of speaking and entertainment starting at 10 p. m. It will be carried in its entirety by the Mutual network and both N. B. C. chains. C. B. S. will pick up the second hour.

The length of President Roosevelt's address was not known.

Other speakers scheduled for the program included: Vice Presidential Candidate Henry A. Wallace, speaking from Washington; Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina; Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and Dorothy Thompson, columnist, all from New York; Carl Sandburg, poet, from Chicago.

From Hollywood these film players will speak: Walter Huston, Thomas Mitchell, Joan Bennett, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Melvyn Douglas and Gertrude Niessen.

That portion of the broadcast from Carnegie Hall will include Songwriter Irving Berlin leading the audience in singing "God Bless America;" a song by Marian Anderson, tap dancing by Bill Robinson and music by the Benny Goodman and Count Basie Orchestras.

Garner Is Silent On How He'll Vote

Uvalde, Tex., Nov. 3 (INS).—Vice President Nance Garner tonight refused to disclose whom he would support in the Presidential election Tuesday.

The man who sought the Presidential nomination against President Roosevelt answered questions with an abrupt:

"No comment."

Dr. Townsend Backs Willkie

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 3 (AP).—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the old age pension plan bearing his name, said in a prepared speech today that "we believe the election of Willkie gives the best promise of the realization of our hopes and aims."

TOWNSEND

Explaining his support of Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, over President Roosevelt, Townsend declared at a public meeting "it is our firm belief that the iniquitous Social Security Act was adopted at the President's request to head off the Townsend plan."

He predicted that Mr. Roosevelt would veto any Townsend bill adopted by Congress.

Committee Lauds Thomas' Campaign

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, "is the only candidate who has made an honest campaign," the Washington Independent Committee for Thomas and Krueger said yesterday.

"The campaign between Roosevelt and Willkie is no campaign at all, or it was over months ago," said the committee. "When Roosevelt renominated himself and when the Anglo-American financial axis put Willkie on the Republican ticket the issue of war or democracy was taken out of the campaign, except for the splendid campaign which has been made by Norman Thomas," it was said.

Both major candidates, it was said, are "competing with each other to involve the country deeper and deeper in the European conflict—and now in the scramble to save the Anglo-Dutch imperialists in Asia. Bewildered and betrayed, most voters are either reluctantly for Roosevelt or unwillingly for Willkie," the Socialists said.

whether it is capable of following its own developed and elected leadership, or whether it will accept the temporary leadership of an erratic, warmongering politician.

"The issues are joined. Labor can sustain or cut down its own leadership. I have confidence in the result. Wendell Willkie will be elected.

"The men and women of labor will not let America down in an hour of peril to its free institutions and the future of its citizens.

"At every moment of crisis in the past history of the Nation, the people have acted wisely through their ballot. I am confident they will do the same on Tuesday."

On the other hand, William Green, president of the A. F. L., said in a statement that:

"No executive officer of the American Federation of Labor has presumed to deliver the votes of labor to any political candidate or to any political party. That means that the nonpartisan political policy of the American Federation of Labor has been maintained inviolate during the heated campaign which is now being brought to a close."

He urged all "working men and women" to "vote for those candidates whose election you honestly and sincerely believe will best serve the interests of the masses of the people and the Nation as well."

The wide support of war veterans for Wendell Willkie was exemplified again in a telegram sent to the Republican nominee by the executive committee for the Willkie War Veterans of the District of Columbia, saying, according to the announcement by Chairman Frank L. Peckham:

"On behalf of the Willkie War Veterans of the District of Columbia we send you greetings and best wishes and we look forward with confidence to welcoming you to Washington as the first World War veteran to serve as President of the United States. We pledge you our support and hearty cooperation."

James M. Duffy, president of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, an A. F. of L. affiliate, as chairman of the committee of organized labor for Willkie, also claimed "a preponderant swing of organized labor to the support of Wendell Willkie" and backed up this assertion by citing official reports showing that the third-term candidacy of Mr. Roosevelt has received only 10 per cent as much financial support from labor as his second-term candidacy was given in 1936.

Wheel Chairs Ready For Willkie Voters

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—The Manhattan campaign committee for Willkie and McNary announced today it was ready to transport voters to the polls Tuesday—by motor car or wheelchair.

Fortune Poll Favors Roosevelt But Gives Willkie Slim Chance

President Retains 55.2% of Popular Vote Despite Slight Decline In October, Survey Result Shows

By the United Press

New York, Nov. 3.—Fortune Magazine announced tonight that its eleventh-hour preelection survey shows 55.2 per cent of the Nation's popular vote still in the Roosevelt column, although the President lost popularity slightly in the last three weeks of October.

"The possibilities indicated by the survey figures range from a substantial majority for Mr. Roosevelt—but not a landslide—to a squeak-through for Mr. Willkie in which, although not obtaining a popular majority, he could win the Electoral College," Fortune said in an announcement of the poll results.

President Roosevelt's majority was declining on the Pacific Coast and in the Mountain States, it was said, while the West North Central section showed a "continuing trend toward Mr. Willkie."

John L. Lewis' endorsement of the Republican candidate showed in the poll as having shifted 6.7 per cent of nonfarm labor sentiment from Roosevelt, although 65.9 per cent of labor still supported the President.

Three sets of questions were used, one examining sentiment as to the President, another as to Willkie, and the third asking "For whom do you expect to vote?"

On Mr. Roosevelt, 29.2 per cent of the replies said there was "no question but what the country needs" him; 22.4 considered him "on the whole" better than Willkie; 25.4 per cent said "the country would be better off under Willkie;" 16.5 looked upon possible reelection of the President as "almost a calamity," and 6.5 answered "don't know."

Eliminating the "don't knows," Mr. Roosevelt held 55.2 per cent of the votes.

The Fortune announcement did not reveal the comparative breakdown on questions as to Willkie.

Answers to the "For whom do you expect to vote?" query were: Roosevelt, 44.9 per cent; Willkie, 40.4 per cent; other, .2; no answer, 1.9; won't vote, 7.6; don't know, 5.0.

"Willkie," it was pointed out, "has come up 1.9 percentage points since the early October survey, and Roosevelt has dropped .9 from 45.8 per cent," on the "For whom" question.

"Mr. Willkie is leading in five sections of the country," Fortune commented, "and in these five sections a large number of electoral votes are concentrated. However, it must be remembered that small majorities for either candidate in this or the other section of the country, by no stretch of the imagination mean that the candidate will carry all the States in that section.

"As the final figures were gathered Mr. Roosevelt had the edge in total over-all popular preference, and his election thus seems more probable than his defeat."

Examining poll responses on the basis of occupations, Fortune found that 4.3 per cent of owners of business have turned from President Roosevelt in recent weeks, while "his popularity with owners of farms has increased 3.1 per cent."

Independents Cite New Deal Benefits

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—The National Committee of Independent Voters for Roosevelt and Wallace said today that production, national income, employment, farm prices and farm income were up, and that only by returning President Roosevelt to office can these gains be continued.

NORRIS

The committee declared in a statement that industrial production was at an all-time peak, and quoted Federal Reserve index figures which the committee said placed the September index at 124, as compared to 58 in 1932 and 110 in 1929.

The committee, headed by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, and Mayor LaGuardia of New York, asserted that national income during President Roosevelt's Administration had increased $387 per capita to $536 in 1939, and predicted that the 1940 figure would be higher.

Dictator Charges Nonsense—Pinchot

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Gifford Pinchot, former Republican governor of Pennsylvania, urging the reelection of President Roosevelt, termed "nonsense" today Republican charges that dictatorship might result from New Deal success at the polls.

PINCHOT

"Mr. Willkie says that if Roosevelt is reelected our democratic system will not outlast another four years," said Pinchot in a broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System. "To that I say, nonsense. The people who talk like that show their complete lack of confidence in the American people and the American Constitution. . . .

"The most outrageous and unjustified attack made against Franklin Roosevelt is the charge that he wants to get us into war. More nonsense, and unfair nonsense at that.

"Look at the record. You will see that the man who has done most to keep us out of war by making us strong was Franklin D. Roosevelt. And the very men who call him a warmonger did their best to stop him.

Text of Willkie's Term-Limit Pledge

If Elected, He'll Ask For Amendment, He Says in N. Y.

By the United Press

New York, Nov. 3.—The text of Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell L. Willkie's formal statement replying to President Roosevelt's Cleveland speech follows:

The Saturday night broadcast of the third-term candidate reminds me of the old saying that an acre of performance is worth a whole land of promise.

He echoed my strenuous pleas for unity, but the echo came back thin and garbled by the interference of nearly eight years of discrepancy between his promise and his performance.

No man can bring about unity—or even put it together in a speech—if he follows generalizations about unity by manufacturing discord. Unity is not achieved by classifying as an evil force the millions of people who now support me. He further promises discord by classfying among the evil forces, the leaders of labor, agriculture and industry, the former members of his Administration, and the millions who equally oppose war or any other road to dictatorship, such as the third-term.

Has Faith in People

In opposition to this view, I have faith in the great mass of American people. Whatever the result, I shall maintain that faith even after Election Day, and shall not number imagined evil men by the millions.

I hope the candidate for the third term will renounce this distrust of the people of America after his defeat next Tuesday. Such renunciation should be in more explicit terms than was his reference to a fourth term.

People with however short memories recall that the terms of his prior renunciations of a third term were more definite than his recent obscure promise that he would not seek a fourth term. All of us recall that nearly four years ago, on February 28, 1937, he talked then of the time when he would leave the White House in January, 1941.

But now he talks of leaving the White House at some subsequent and more remote date, and of the condition in which he hopes to leave the country then.

Plans Two-Term Limit

In view of the fact that within three months of his first assumption of power he broke the pledges which he had called "solemn covenants with the people" the fate of a renunciation of a fourth term based only on implication and indirection, is certain.

But one good purpose was partially served by his speech. His apprehensions have brought him at long last to the point where, although in obscure language, he makes a reference to at least one issue of this year's campaign. He would have us believe, though he doesn't expressly say it, that he will be content with just one more term.

But if once our common law against a third term be repealed, there is no further law to restrain him or any of his successors, elected, hereditary or appointed, from an indefinite number of terms. And that repeal of that law will be final. It can never be revoked. Never again can there be a tradition against as many terms as a President can take for himself. Never again can there be a tradition against as many terms as a President can take for himself. The third-term candidate's own future administrations and those of all subsequent Presidents would be directed to a further series of their reelections, and the people would not get the disinterested service to which they are entitled.

When elected, in order to prevent any subsequent demonstration of such ambitious views, in my first message to Congress I shall recommend that they submit a Constitutional amendment limiting the time any one President may serve to eight years or less.

Willkies Take Time Out From Campaign, Attend Their Neighborhood Church

DAY OF REST—Mr. and Mrs. Wendell L. Willkie spent a quiet Sunday in New York. They are shown being greeted by admirers after services at the Episcopal Church of Heavenly Rest near their home. Ed Willkie, the candidate's brother, is behind Mrs. Willkie

Mrs. Willkie Won't Predict Election Outcome

By Inez Robb

International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 3.—The cool, calm and collected wife of the Republican Presidential nominee is no prophetess. Mrs. Willkie said as much today when she refused to predict the outcome of the most dramatic and portentous Presidential election in a quarter of a century.

"I have the greatest confidence and faith in my husband and in the American people. He has appealed to their intelligence, and I know they will not let him down. But I refused to predict!" she said with her wide and ready smile this afternoon in the restful quiet of her own drawing room on upper Fifth Avenue.

But no matter what the outcome of Tuesday's election, Mrs. Willkie is certain that the stubborn, tireless and exhausting fight waged by her husband has been eminently worth while.

"A Great Fight"

"Wendell has made a great fight," she said in a voice that rang with sincerity and admiration for her husband. "He has given everything of himself to this campaign. He has presented the real issues to the country. I truly believe that he has roused the interest of the people in effects of the political and national situation as no other public figure in many years.

"If he has made the people think more seriously on the future of our country and of their own personal future in the country, then he has made a fine and worthy contribution to America no matter what the outcome of Tuesday's election."

Although Mrs. Willkie has accompanied her husband throughout the longest and most concentrated campaign ever undertaken by a Presidential candidate, she had never once thought of herself as a potential First Lady.

She Thinks He's Great

"Godness no! I have never even let myself think of such a possibility," she chuckled. "I only cross my bridges when I come to them."

Neither, she confessed, has she ever permitted herself to visualize her husband as the Nation's next Chief Executive.

"But," she added with vigor and promptitude, "I think he'd make a great President!"

In the midst of all the hullabaloo attendant upon the loudest and noisiest campaign in many years, the Willkie apartment seemed an oasis of incredible quiet and peace this afternoon. Only Mrs. Willkie, her son, Philip, and the maid, Betty, were at home. Neither phones nor doorbells rang, and it might have been any ordinary American household on a placid Sabbath afternoon.

No Signs of Hurry

The apartment was in spotless order. There were no signs of hurry, or bustle or pre-election confustion. Mrs. Willkie, just home from heroic campaigning with her husband, looked a bit pale. But she still retained that quality of freshness which distinguishes her.

And, as usual, she was pretty as a picture in a slim black dress with a pale blue yoke embroidered in bright pastels, and, as always, she was pleasant and witty.

"We went to church this morning," Mrs. Willkie explained, "but it has been a positive treat to be able to stay home this afternoon with nothing to do but read."

Determined On Vacation

Mrs. Willkie has only one post-election plan. No matter who wins, she is determined to take her husband away for a real rest and vacation.

"I'm going to get Wendell away on a vacation if I have to kidnap him!" she said grimly. "He can pick the spot, but that's all. No matter what the outcome of the election, we're going away and rest."

Although she would prefer always to be a private citizen rather a public personage, Mrs. Willkie said she had genuinely enjoyed the campaign.

"Even the scattered boos!" she said with a grin. "When I heard those boos, I used to say 'good for whoever's doing it. He's an American citizen and that's his inalienable privilege.' It used to make me feel pround that this was the one country in the world where a man could boo a political figure without fear of anyone or anything.

third term be repealed, there is no further law to restrain him or any of his successors, elected, hereditary, or appointed, from an indefinite number of terms.

And that repeal of that law will be final. It can never be revoked. Never again can there be a tradition against as many terms as a President can take for himself."

Attends Church

After attending church with his family, the candidate spent the afternoon and early evening conferring with campaign associates and drafting his statement.

He asserted that President Roosevelt's radio speech last night "reminds me of the old saying, that an acre of performance is worth a whole land of promise."

The Chief Executive, he said, "echoed my very strenuous pleas for unity, but the echo came back thin and garbled by the interference of nearly eight years of discrepancy between his promise and his performance."

Willkie said that "within three months of his first assumption of power he (President Roosevelt) broke the pledges which he had called 'solemn covenants with the people.'"

Willkie asserted that in view of this the "act of a renunciation of a fourth term based only on implication and indirection was certain."

Three Talks Scheduled

"But one good purpose was partially served by his speech," Willkie continued. "His apprehensions have brought him at long last to the point where, although in obscure language, he makes a reference to at least one issue of this year's campaign."

Expressing hope that President Roosevelt would "renounce this distrust of the people of America after his defeat next Tuesday," Willkie said that "such renuncition should be in more explicit terms than was his reference to a fourth term."

Although Willkie has concluded his major political rally addresses, he still has scheduled three more radio talks.

Tomorrow at 3:15 p. m., E. S. T., he is to make his final speech to the women of America, speaking over CBS under the auspices of the Associated Willkie Clubs of America on the Kathleen Norris program, sponsored by the clubs for the last three weeks.

Over the same radio chain, and under sponsorship of the Republican National Committee, the nominee will join his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, and Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Republican National Committee chairman, in a program from 10:15 to 11 p. m., E. S. T., tomorrow.

The candidate will close his campaign in a program sponsored by the associated Willkie Clubs over all four major radio networks from 12 midnight, E. S. T., Monday until 1 a. m., election morning.

This final broadcast will originate from a broadway theater, where Mr. and Mrs. Willkie will lead a group of Republican Party leaders and independent groups which have been working for his election, in a series of brief speeches.

Accompanying Willkie to church today were Mrs. Willkie, his brother, Ed, and his son, Philip. They attended the Episcopal Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue and Ninetieth Street, a few blocks from the Willkie apartment.

"Great Privilege"

The Rev. Henry Darlington, rector, told the congregation it was the duty of all to vote Tuesday.

"I hope you will make your vote a matter of soul searching, for the voting booth is holy ground," Dr. Darlington said.

"Our citizenship is not only a great privilege, but a great responsibility. It is your responsibility to keep it a privilege. Remember that it is your bounden duty to vote."

After the service, Willkie lunched with his family at his apartment and read last minute reports from supporters over the country regarding his chances of election.

Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., of the Republican National Committee, and other party leaders expressed optimism last night regarding the Tuesday balloting.

Willkie's aides made public a letter from the nominee to Michael J. Collins, chairman of the Irish Committee of the Manhattan campaign, saying that Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican Vice Presidential candidate, "did an invaluable service to the Irish race" as a member of the committee of 150 on conditions in Ireland.

Willkie said he wanted to thank Collins and Charles F. Connelly, editor of the Irish Echo, "for the wholehearted support which you have given me in this campaign."

The candidate added that McNary "has always been a firm believer in the independence of Erie" and added that his running mate had voted in 1919 for a resolution asking the American Peace Commission at Versailles to give Irish leaders a hearing.

"A year later," Willkie continued, "Senator McNary voted for resolution No. 15, calling for expressions of sympathy and justice for the Irish people.

Radio Time Reserved

"Above all, Senator McNary was a prominent member of the famous 'committee of 150 on conditions in Ireland.' This was a group composed of all walks of life in America. Senator McNary did an invaluable service to the Irish race as a member of that committee."

Willkie concluded his letter with the statement that "in our mutual crusade to preserve democracy in America, we are truly fortified by the knowledge that the liberty-loving Irish Americans are fighting with us."

Associates said Willkie was feeling extremely well.

Greek Pastor Says God Will Punish Italy

Hellenic Colony Prays for Native Land at Mass Here

Members of Washington's Hellenic colony yesterday prayed for their war-smitten country, and heard Italy condemned for "cruel and murderous bombings of civilians."

Preaching at solemn high mass in SS. Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church, Sixth and C Streets Southwest, the Rev. Thomas Daniels, pastor, told worshipers that the bombings were an "outrage," for which "God would certainly punish Italy."

Greece, he said, is not fighting just for herself, but for the preservation throughout the world of democracy and culture.

Father Daniels read a reply to a cablegram of encouragement he had sent to Premier Metaxes of Greece, in which the latter expresed gratitude for the interest and sympathy of fellow-countrymen here.

George Pappas, president of the congregation, took part in yesterday's services, at which special prayers were said in response to a request sent by Archbishop Spyrou Athenagoras, head of the Greek Church in the Americas.

While the Greek Minister, Cimon Diamantopoulos, Mme. Diamantopoulos and other Legation staff members were in New York yesterday and unable to attend the services, they expect to worship there next Sunday, it was said.

'Fantastic' Armed Power Seen for U. S. in 6 Months

Mexico City, Nov. 3 (AP).—Within six months the United States will be a "military power of fantastic strength, one of the strongest in the world," Gen. Nicolas Delgado, of the Paraguayan army, told Mexican army officers today.

Delgado and Maj. Bernardo Aranda changed planes here on their return flight to Asuncion after inspecting, with other Latin-American military missions, Army, Navy and aviation bases in the United States as guests of the U. S. War Department.

Washington also is prepared to assist, wherever and however possible, in strengthening the political, economic and military solidarity of the American continents, Delgado asserted.

Mrs. Borah Pleads for Willkie, Envoys' Wives Urge Roosevelt

Mrs. W. E. Borah Mrs. J. P. Kennedy Mrs. A. J. D. Biddle

ENTER CAMPAIGNS—Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Biddle, wives of Ambassadors to Britain and Poland, respectively, asked support for President Roosevelt in a broadcast last night. Mrs. Borah, the Senator's widow, appealed for votes for Wendell Willkie in a statement

Women picked up the political torches last night, while major candidates and their lieutenants rested, and appeals were made for both President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie.

Mrs. Joseph Patrick Kennedy, wife of the Ambassador to London, and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, wife of the Ambassador to Poland, spoke for the reeletcion of Mr. Roosevelt.

Mrs. William E. Borah, widow of the stanch isolationist Senator from Idaho, appealed for votes for Willkie.

Mrs. Borah said in a statement: my wish would be that every Republican and, while I am wishing,

"If I could rub the magic stone every Democrat would place an 'X' at the top of the Republican column next Tuesday, for I know that were my husband here that is what he would do.

"He would support Wendell Willkie and Charles L. McNary because they alone can check our present drift toward war.

"He was opposed to a third term for any President; I recall that he said in the Senate, speaking in 1928 of the resolution against a third term, 'The Democrats would be strikingly inconsistent if they did not vote for this resolution. It is a democratic doctrine; it originated with Thomas Jefferson.' It has been one of the cardinal principles of the Democratic Party from its origin to this time.'

"I hope that Americans who believe in the same things for which Senator Borah stood so vigorously will vote for Wendell Willkie."

Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Biddle spoke on an N. B. C. broadcast for the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee.

Mrs. Kennedy, pointing out that she is the mother of nine children, four of them boys, said:

"As an American mother, I have a solemn duty to my sons and to all the sons of all mothers of America, to vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt and the road to peace.

"For Mr. Roosevelt's words during these troubled times are never hysterical, political promises, and his actions are consistent, patriotic, pledges that we shall stay at peace.

"I have been in war-torn England and I will never forget it. Nor will I ever forget the gallantry of those English lads, who so bravely made up for their lack of training by their devotion to their country. American youth, too, has devotion and gallantry and bravery. It, too, is entitled to the best defense training in the world.

"My second son, John, had his number called in the draft last Tuesday. I repeat, and I repeat it proudly, that is one more reason why I am going to vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Mrs. Biddle said:

"I saw what happened in Poland. I arrived in France, a country already at war. The French felt it 'can't happen here.' I saw it 'happen' in France all over again. I arrive in America—I hear again 'it can't happen here.' We mustn't think the Atlantic Ocean can protect us from this menace which is running wild in Europe. . . .

"Besides giving England every possible aid, we must prepare ourselves. . . .

Urges Strong Defense

"While we are on the subject, don't let political fights overshadow our defense program. Why argue as to which party will bring greater prosperity? For what good would all the prosperity in the world do America if we, through lack of preparedness, were forced to change our American dollars for German marks. At this time we must stand united behind a man who is dominated by one thought alone—America first, America safe, America independent.

"That one man is Franklin Delano Roosevelt—the peacetime President in a war-torn world. The patriot who had the personal courage to dare to recommend the Selective Service Act on the eve of a national election—because he knew that this act was a national necessity, an immediate insurance for our boys' safety—our country's security."

Youth Council Opposes War Aid to Europe

District Group Favors 'Genuine Aid to China,' However; Session Ends

Participation in the European war, either through sending of troops or "economic aid to the belligerent powers," was opposed in a report adopted at the closing session of the Washington Youth Council's annual conference yesterday afternoon.

The same report called for a "policy of genuine aid to China, without military intervention," and "a consistent embargo on imports from and exports to Japan."

Hudson Wells, of the United Construction Workers of America, chairman of the council's foreign policy sub-committee, which presented the report, was questioned from the floor about the difference in the two points. He said the subcommittee "recognized a difference in character between the wars in Europe and Asia."

Opposition to acquisition of military bases in Latin America "through deals with other powers or through armed seizure" was expressed in a statement on improvement of cultural relations with Latin America.

Ask Tax Curb on War Profits

The adopted report also called for a steeply graduated progressive tax on personal and corporate incomes to prevent war profits and to finance the defense program; protection of the rights of labor to bargain collectively and to strike, under the defense program.

Morris Tepping of the United Federal Workers, who served as conference chairman, was unanimously elected president of the council for the coming year. Other officers were Sheila Katz, secretary; Reba Gibson, organizational secretary, a newly created post; Reba Lauren, treasurer. The vice president's office will be filled later.

The following representatives were named to the executive committee: Trade unions, Hudson Wells and Bernard Fonoroff; church, Frances Humphrey and Julian Wyche; students, Peter Margolies and one other, to be named; Negro, Thelma Dale and Wilbert Poland; miscellaneous, Leon Bick and one other to be named.

Continue Fight For Vote

Points adopted in several other reports included: Continance of the fight for suffrage in the District; condemnation of segregation of Negroes in the District school system; active work for "equalization" of opportunities in the schools.

The council voted to establish a commission on religion to coordinate interfaith and interdenominational action among youth. Commissions on social welfare and on civil liberties also were provided in the adopted reports.

At the three-day conference, which drew 106 delegates from 54 organizations, closing addresses were made by Cecil Owen, president of the Washington Industrial Council, on "Labor and Youth," and by Joseph Cadden, executive secretary of the American Youth Congress.

The conference reaffirmed the council's trust in the American Youth Congress. Sessions were held at the Y. W. C. A. on Seventeenth Street Northwest.

Foolproof Intoxication Test Is Claimed

By the Associated Press

Madison, Wis., Nov. 3.—Dr. Frank L. Kozelka, University of Wisconsin toxicologist, says he has developed a "virtually errorless" method of determining the amount of alcohol in a person's blood.

The chemical process, which he said make spossible isolation of ethyl alcohol from "interfering" substances, has been utilized since 1936 in blood analyses submitted by Dr. Kozelka as evidence in court cases involving a question of intoxication.

The procedure was described in an article prepared for publicatoin in the analytical edition of the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

The chance of error in other procedure, Dr. Kozelka said, arises from substances in the blood which "interfere" with isolation of ethyl alcohol. One such substance, he added, is methenamine, sometimes used in treating kidney and bladder disorders.

Presence of methenamine, Dr. Kozelka said, might result in other chemical tests showing a person to be under the influence of liquor when in fact he had not taken a drink.

"We do not run into any interfering substances in the normal individual," he said. "But it happens occasionally and from the medical-legal point of view it becomes necessary to eliminate the possibility of error so that blood and urine analyses cannot be challenged in the courts."

THE ROAR OF THE CROWD will resound in every night spot in town tomorrow eve as the election returns roll in by radio and wire. United Press bulletins will be flashed on a big screen in the Shoreham Blue Room. NBC wires will sizzle the news into the Metronome Room and Wardman cocktail lounge. The Neptune Room will have a special CBS service. Voting returns will be spotted into the "music by wire" of the Rainbow Room, Burt's Trans-Lux and the Anchor Room. The new WINX radio station will bring flashes to the Lounge Riviera. Election flashes will cut into the music at Hi Hat, the Cafe Caprice, Mayflower Lounge and any other place you can name. Dick Koons, canny young maestro of the Mayflower Lounge, has provided himself with appropriate tunes, no matter which way the tide turns. Here's hoping that you and you will be among those who will be singing high, not those who'll have to moan low at the wind-up of the most exciting Presidential race of a generation.

The Casino Royal will present the new "Dancing Cavalcade Revue" tonight. Heading the show are Maurine and Norba, who pranced at Atlantic City all summer. Bob Preble, many-talented emcee, and "Jivin' Jack" Schafer will pop new tricks in honor of those candidates.

AN ELECTION NIGHT PARTY EXTRAORDINARY will be celebrated at Del Rio tomorrow, when the Fiesta Room will be taken over by the Democratic Women's Club of Bladensburg Precinct. Sumner Welles, Undesecretary of State; Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, M. Hampton Magruder and District Attorney H. Winship Wheatley will be among the many Democratic bigwigs present. It's probable that Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor and Senator George L. Radcliffe will also be there. Del Rio's Manager Herbert Sacha has generously donated the Fiesta Room, Ray Bradford's orchestra and the full floor show to the Democratic ladies. P. S.: Important. George Beattie, notable vaudeville star, will head the new Del Rio floor show beginning Thursday. Other fine acts, too. This gives you mighty little time to say good-by to Don Rice and his wacky Little Theater. Don goes directly to Chicago's Oriental Theater, where he'll be featured with Woody Herman's band.

MAYFAIR ECHOES. This seems to be the day for hearing from Mayfair's former stars. Handsome Burt Raeburn, now on RCA television, dropped in to say hello-aloha. And the mail brought a letter from Maria Karson, who enlarged her Musicales group, now plays for dancing in the Silver Forest of the Hotel Miami, in Akron, Ohio.

FASCINATING PROSPECTS. If you can't wait to find out which way the election will go, why not go up and ask the Trioka's new "Talking Teakettle?" . . . Hi Hat's Carmela Lazeri will sing songs for you in six languages, but she warns that she knows only one Russian song . . . Ben Young's Cosmos Room orchestra will be back on the radio right after election week . . . You can hear Spanish danzons in La Salle Versailles. But please don't ask Maestro Burrus Williams how to dance a danzon. He doesn't know.

After hearing Milton Davis run through a score of new tunes, we went off the deep and for the brand new "Take Care of You For Me," are practically certain it will be the next Rainbow Room "tune-of-the-week." The "tune-of-the-week" party goes on tonight, y'know. P. S.: Look out for the Rainbow Room band on the new WINX broadcasts.

POLITICAL PETE. Riviera's Pete Macias probably knows more about politics than any maestro in town. He leaps from "boogie woogie" piano to the more abstruse angles of Mr. Walter Lippmann with nary a quiver; has recently spent all his interlude time listening to political speeches on which he makes extremely un-Lippmannlike comment. In fact, Senor Macias' phraseology is of the "Iron Pants" Johnson variety when speaking of certain politicos.

ROBIN HOOD CAUCUS. Sometimes the Robin Hood diners look like a political gathering. Dining there we saw Sen. Richard B. Russell and Rep. Paul Brown, of Georgia; Rep. James F. O'Connor, of Utah, Dennis Chavez, Dennis Chavez, jr., who's secretary for his father, Senator Chavez, of New Mexico.

TOP RHYTHM BOYS. Gerson Kaufman, who makes those glittery arrangements for Al Spieldock's orchestra in Paul Young's Romany Room. Gerson also plays the sax, clarinet, vibraphone, bass, piano and accordion . . . The Nightingale's Oliver Wilson (also known as "Li'l Abner"), who alternates between tremendous tromboning and such comedy vocals as "Rhum-boogie" . . . George Macdonald, of Bert Stevens' trio in Cafe Caprice. His stories are as good as his clarinet-ing. Both are altitudinous . . . The Mayflower Lounge's own indispensable "Ha-Cha" Gardner, who makes a saxophone chatter like a canary.

Lotus' "Broadway Capers" goes into another week today with the Naval Cadets and the Broadway Girls continuing in that stunning production number to Noel Coward music, clowning Harry Reso, graceful Andre and Michel, Virginia Vaughan dancing on her xylophone.

BABY DEPARTMENT. Harvey Lenderman, bassist of the Shoreham orchestra, is the popsy of a new and chipper baby daughter . . . Our absent-minded operative tells us that one of the New Bavarian's Heintze Brothers will be a daddy soon. He couldn't remember whether it was Oscar or Gustave . . . Anna Therese, year-old daughter of Dick Ashby, of Dick's Grill, walked when she was 9 months old. Smart, like her daddy, huh? . . . A bystander remarks that Beverly Stull, of Burt's Trans-Lux, is a beautiful baby, too. But that's not news.

'Hyena' Role Played By Italy, Turks Feel

Mussolini Made Grave Mistake, Newspaper Says

By G. E. R. Gedye.

Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Nov. 2 (Delayed)—German propagandists here continue assiduously to suggest that Greece can have peace at the cost of "slight" sacrifices, which include the surrender of a slice of the Aegean coast to Bulgaria.

They made the further suggestion, believed to be wishful thinking, that Turkey could be placated by the receipt of the tiny strip of Greek territory through which the Istanbul-Adrianople Railway passes.

The only effect of this Nazi propaganda on public opinion is to confirm the feeling that Italy is again playing the "hyena" role, as when she declared war on beaten France to obtain through German pressure a share in the spoils of a battlefield upon which she did not desire to fight.

This view is indicated in press and public opinion here. Among others, the newspaper Sonposta suggests that the Italians believe that Greece would be bullied into submission and that Italy's hopes have been dashed by Greek resistance.

Strategical Mistake

The newspaper Aksham believes that Italy has made a grave strategical mistake in pursuing her expansionist dreams at the cost of facilitating British operations against Italy and against the Rumanian oil wells. Like the Sonposta, it considers the Italian progress totally inadequate.

"It is the duty of the Balkan peoples, by violent resistance, to see that the Balkans become the grave of Italy's aggressive aspirations and to drive Italy once and for all from this part of the continent," is the call to arms issued in the newspaper Yenissabah. It asserts that there must be collective resistance "to this odious aggressive effort to seize eventually the whole Balkans."

Bulgaria's apparent indifference is explained by the statement that "Bulgaria has many adepts in the policy of falling on one's knees. If this is not the case, Bulgaria's policy must be at once to take her place by the side of Greece."

The paper warns Yugoslavia likewise that "one night her foreign minister may also be awakened by the Italian minister to receive an ultimatum dictated by Fascist cupidity," unless she seizes the opportunity offered by the gallant Greek resistance.

"Following the Italian example in Egypt," the paper continues, Britain, without making war on Rumania, could destroy from the air the Rumanian oil wells. It would be simple to render impossible the German and Italian transportation on the Danube which would be a terrible blow to the Axis. The gravest hour in their history has sounded for the Balkan peoples. Their victory and their independence depend upon the road they now choose."

In reviews of the military situation in Greece it is again emphasized here that the Italian advance is likely to continue to be slow for some days because of the Greek determination to defend the native soil.

In the Turkish view, the Greek covering troops are likely to hold the Italians for some time along the line of the river Kalamas, which protects Janina from the north. Italian aerial bombardments of Metzovo in the Pindus range and also of the station of Malakas on the railway from Thessaly are taken to indicate that the Greeks are reinforcing the Janina garrison by these routes.

Assuming a prolonged Italian hold-up before the Pindus range, it is considered that if the Italians can capture their first objective, Janina, they will attempt to drive southward toward the Gulf of Arta with a view to seizing Preveza. Only thereafter, the Turkish military experts believe, can they hope to tackle the great barrier of the Pindus in their effort to reach the plains of Thessaly.

Both geography and weather are held to be powerful allies of the Greeks.

British Support Assured

Particularly in view of reliable news that Syria is to be placed under joint Italian-French control, it is believed Britain will decide not to weaken the defenses of the Suez, of Egypt and of Palestine by the dispatch of land forces. But strong air support by bombers and fighters and the dispatch of airplanes, guns, trucks and tanks, as well as naval support from the Mediterranean fleet is confidently expected.

It is believed Britain will not divide the Mediterranean fleet by stationing a part of it permanently in Greek waters, except for a number of submarines, destroyers and lighter craft based on the islands of Xante, Cephalolia and Corfu, unless the latter are first seized by the Italians. From auxiliary bases thus created the British air force should be able to patrol the Aegean, Ionian and Tyrrhenian Seas and subject Italian territory from Rome to Sicily to continual air raids.

Donald C. Fithian, Veteran of War With Spain, Dies

Donald C. Fithian, one of the first volunteers from the District of Columbia in the Spanish-American War, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital after an illness of almost a year. He was 63 years old and resided at 1501 Colonial Terrace, Arlington.

He was a private in Company G, which comprised the first volunteers, and was present at the bombing and surrender of Santiago, Cuba. During the World War he was a captain in the Air Corps and was stationed at Garden City, Long Island. From 1900 to 1902 he was engaged in military service in the Philippine Islands.

After the World War he was a stock broker in Buffalo. For several years prior to his illness he was in the Interior Department. He was a member of the American Legion.

He leaves a widow, Mrs. Isabella Edelin Fithian; two sons, Donald C. Fithian, jr., and William M. Fithian, of Washington; a daughter, Mrs. Calvin Carter, of Baltimore, and a sister, Mrs. Lucienne Lear, of Westchester, Pa.

Military funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at Arlington Cemetery Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington.

British Land Force at Crete To Aid Greece

Striking Bases Sought On Isles for Battle Of the Mediterranean

By the United Press

London (Monday), Nov. 4.—British forces have landed at the Greek island of Crete and naval officers also have reached Athens, according to press reports today which authoritative quarters believed correct.

This landing appeared to be highly significant and was believed to foreshadow establishment of British striking bases at Crete and possibly other Greek islands for the battle of the Mediterranean.

A striking base at Crete apparently would:

1. Lay the foundation for a destructive aerial war against Italy similar to that being waged against Germany from bases in Britain.

Would Aid Turks

2. Serve to support the Turks if an Italo-German thrust is attempted into Asia Minor.

3. Lay any Balkan territory under Axis control open to air attack.

4. Provide a base for the Greek navy in event the Greek mainland is overrun.

5. Give the British a most formidable base from which to dominate Aegean waters.

6. Facilitate British attacks on supplies going to Italian troops in Africa.

This base also would, if Greece lost most of her territory to the enemy, give the Greeks a place to hold out with British naval and aerial aid at Crete.

Authoritative quarters pointed out that the Italian invasion of Greece has automatically provided the British navy with a number of "magnificent harbors" on the Greek islands and mainland, which are closer to Fascist bases than anything they have been able to use heretofore.

"Having regard to the importance of maintaining communications through the Aegean, Crete from its geographical position obviously is of great strategic importance," these quarters said.

They added that Corfu is not among the British objectives and said that it is of little strategic importance either to the British or Italians.

Makes Up French Loss

These quarters said that the Italians have Durazzo and other ports which already fulfill any purpose which Corfu might serve.

"If the Italians attempt to capture Corfu," they said, "it will only be to bolster their prestige."

Stressing the importance of Crete, they emphasized that the loss and support of the French naval and air forces operating from Tunisia lessened British control of communications between Sicily and Africa.

"Crete," these quarters said, "has made up some of the lost margin and further strengthens our control of the Red Sea, which is most important regarding maintenance of supplies for our forces in the Middle East, Malta and now Greece which largely go by the cape owing to the possibility of air attack in the Mediterranean."

The authoritative quarters, indicating that the British operating from Crete will attempt to occupy many islands of the Aegean, stressed that these bases "offer us positions from which we can fuel light craft while the Ionian Islands are similarly valuable with strategic possibilities."

deed been abducted, McLachlen got in touch with police, and under their guidance, arranged to carry out instructions detailed in the note for payment of the ransom.

A package, containing some money but mostly wads of paper, was dropped to a street curb at the precise moment demanded by the extorter. In a minute it was picked up by a woman, who was seized by waiting detectives. She was later released, however, when she proved to the satisfaction of investigators that she was merely a passerby and had been attracted by the package on the sidewalk.

Neither McLachlen nor police were aware that Mrs. McLachlen was safe until after the attempt to trap the self-styled kidnaper. She had merely been shopping, but had failed to mention it to anyone. The extortionist apparently knew the situation and made a quick attempt to take advantage of it.

Members of the McLachlen family, as well as police, believe that the threatening note was not the activity of a practical joker. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been called into the case, it was stated, and a special detail of detectives, under Lieut. Clement Cox, has been assigned to the task of uncovering the note's author.

Investigators have several clues, among these a description of the message sender. The note had been left with a Western Union clerk at Union Station.

McLachen, a banker here for more than 20 years, is president of the District Bankers Association, an official of the Washington Investment Co. and Brookland Building Association, and a Red Cross Roll Call leader. Mrs. McLachlen is the former Josephine Baughman. They have a son, Lanier P. McLachlen, a brother of Archibald McLachlen, is president of the banking firm.

Trapped 49 Hours, Miner Saves Self

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 3 (AP).—Exhausted but uninjured, Julius Yankowski staggered weakly out of a West Mountain coal mine drift late tonight after 49 hours imprisonment behind tons of rock and earth.

Only excellent ventilation in the dark shaft kept Yankowski alive, rescue officials said.

Earlier today rescuers found the body of his friend, James Long, 44, also of North Scranton. The men were trapped by the cave-in at 6 p. m., E. S. T., Friday at the Penn-Ann mine. Forty others reached safety.

Ex-WPA Medical Head Will Vote for Willkie

Westport, Conn., Nov. 3.—Dr. William T. Casterphen, of Westport, who, in 1936, was head of the Works Project Administration medical section, said today he would vote for Wendell Willkie for President.

"If the WPA is any index of the type of work the Administration is doing in the other, more vital field of national preparedness," he said, "I fear we will never be prepared, or if we are the preparation will come too late. Therefore, though I have always supported the Democarts before, I . . . feel that as a patriotic American I must cast my ballot for Wendell Willkie."

Virginia Cave Discoveries Reported Here

Room Found as Big As Constitution Hall Auditorium

Discovery of a room as large as Constitution Hall Auditorium with a ceiling of innumerable pure white stalactites and the conclusion that the Endless Caverns in Virginia extend all the way into Tennessee, were announced by members of the Explorers Club here yesterday upon return from the caverns.

The great room, according to Leland S. Reid, Labor Department employe and member of the exploring party, is situated on a level directly above one of the Endless Cavern rooms that long has been opened to the public.

Reid said the caverns stretch off bewilderingly in a south southwesterly direction, obviously following the limestone strata into Tennessee.

Like Mountain Climbing

The explorers, led by Capt. H. T. Cowling, 808 S. Ode Street, Arlington, photographer and Labor Department employe, went into the caverns at 10 a. m. Wednesday and emerged at 4:30 p. m. Friday. The going underground was described as akin mostly to mountain climbing.

At one point, the explorers dived through a stream to enter a cavernous room.

The course of an underground river was partially traced by use of soluble dyes. The dyes were traced to surfaces Springs, indicating distances of from 8 to 12 miles from points within the caverns.

Members of Party

The party included Seward S. Cramer, editor of Explorers Journal, who has explored trade routes in the interior of China and over the West China mountain ranges; John S. Vhay, assistant geologist with the United States Geological Survey; Wallace D. Barlow, first lieutenant with the office of the Assistant Secretary of War in connection with the strategic minerals aspect of industrial mobilization.

Others were Leland S. Reid who has made extensive excavations in the Bluff Dweller communities of the White River Valley in Arkansas; Richard O. Marsh, engineer and explorer, who has made scientific and mining explorations in many parts of the world; and W. G. Grove, U. S. Bureau of Mines representative from Pittsburgh.

Training resulting in a private pilot's certificate will soon be offered the youth of Washington not enrolled in colleges and universities, through the noncollege unit of the Civil Pilot Training program, which starts November 12 at Columbus University Junior College under the sponsorship of the Junior Board of Commerce in cooperation with the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

The number of competitive students enrolled will be limited to 96 and upon completion of their course these students will take the C. A. A. written examination for a private pilot certificate. Those receiving the ten highest marks will be awarded flight scholarships by the C. A. A., which will consist of 35 to 50 hours of flying and instruction free.

Applicants to be eligible for this classification must have attained their nineteenth but not their twenty-sixth birthday on October 1, 1940, be citizens of the United States, and residents of the District, not enralled in an institution of higher learning and not employes of the C. A. A.. They must be physically qualified and not now hold a certificate of private pilot. Also they must pledge themselves if selected for flight scholarships to apply for further flight training in the Army or Navy of the United States when needed and if qualified.

8 Midwestern States Democratic, Says Lucas

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—United States Senator Scott W. Lucas, Midwest director of the Democratic Presidential campaign, said today that eight of the 13 States in his territory were "safely Democratic."

"I definitely place Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri as safely Democratic," Senator Lucas said in a statement.

"The other States (Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas and Nebraska) are battlegrounds, and it wouldn't surprise me at all that with the swing that has set in for the President in the last week to see Roosevelt carry all 13 States."

Footpads Rob 2 Men of $15, Gypsies 'Bless' Woman's Cash

Ancient Trick Costs Victim Total of $20; Church Office of St. Patrick's Chapel Broken Into, Money and Keys Taken

Two men yesterday reported they were yoked and robbed, one woman was tricked and fleeced by two Gypsies, and $3 was stolen from a church office.

Mano P. Mattroli, 28, of 214 John Marshal Place Northwest, told police he was seized by three colored men as he walked in front of 729 Fourth Street Northwest and robbed of seven $1 bills. By a similar procedure three colored men deprived him of $8, Walter Anderson, 9 Patterson Street Northeast, reported to police. The robbery occurred in front of 1234 North Capitol Street.

Victim of the old-time money-blessing trick was Elizabeth Johnson, 1213 Division Avenue Northeast, who told police two women described as Gypsies came to her home to demonstrate how four $5 bills could be doubled with the help of a little hocus-pocus. Her money was wrapped in a piece of cloth and blessed as the Gypsies departed. Later the victim found the cloth contained only a piece of newspaper.

Rev. Fred E. Warren, of St. Patrick's Chapel, Foxhall and Greenwich Parkway, reported to police that the church office had been entered some time yesterday. Missing were $3 in cash and a set of keys to the church.

Fleming Clarifies New Ruling on Overtime Pay

Col. Philip B. Fleming, wage-hour administrator, said in a statement yesterday that employers who paid their workers the same salary for a 42-hour week now that they paid prior to October 24 were violating the Labor Standards Act even though they made "a show of compliance through bookkeeping manipulations."

The standard week for workers employed in interstate commerce was reduced on October 24 from 42 to 40 hours, with time and one-half pay required for all hours worked above the 40-hour limit.

Time and one-half, Fleming said, must be paid "upon the rate at which the employe is actually employed and paid, and not upon a fictitious rate which the employer adopts solely for bookkeeping purposes."

Carol Seeks Right To Go to Portugal

Madrid, Nov. 3 (AP).—Former King Carol of Rumania, who has an appointment to see Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner tomorrow afternoon to ask for permission to go to Portugal, arrived tonight from Seville.

Mme. Magda Lupescu and Ernest Urdarenu, former minister of the palace, accompanied him. The Rumanian government is seeking to have Mme. Lupescu and Urdarenu extradited.

Six Warships Leave Coast for Hawaii

San Pedro, Calif., Nov. 3 (AP).—Three battleships and three cruisers sailed last night for Hawaii after a two-week stay to give enlisted men and officers shore leave and to take on recruits.

The vessels were the battleships West Virginia, Colorado and Maryland, and the cruisers Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Honolulu.

This was the second detachment of warships stationed in the Hawaiian area to visit here during the last 30 days.

Traffic Kills Two District Men

collided with two other automobiles at Eighth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. Three persons in addition to Tompkins were hurt.

Another mishap, on the Rockville-Norbeck pike near Norbeck, Md., resulted in hospital treatment for a father and son, Robert P. Soper, sr. and jr., proprietors of the general store at Olney, Md. While the Sopers were fixing a flat tire, their car was struck by a car which police said was operated by Walter Johnson, colored, of Lincoln Park, Md.

The father, 65, was admitted to the Montgomery County General Hospital with hip injuries, but the son, 40, was treated for scalp wounds and sent home.

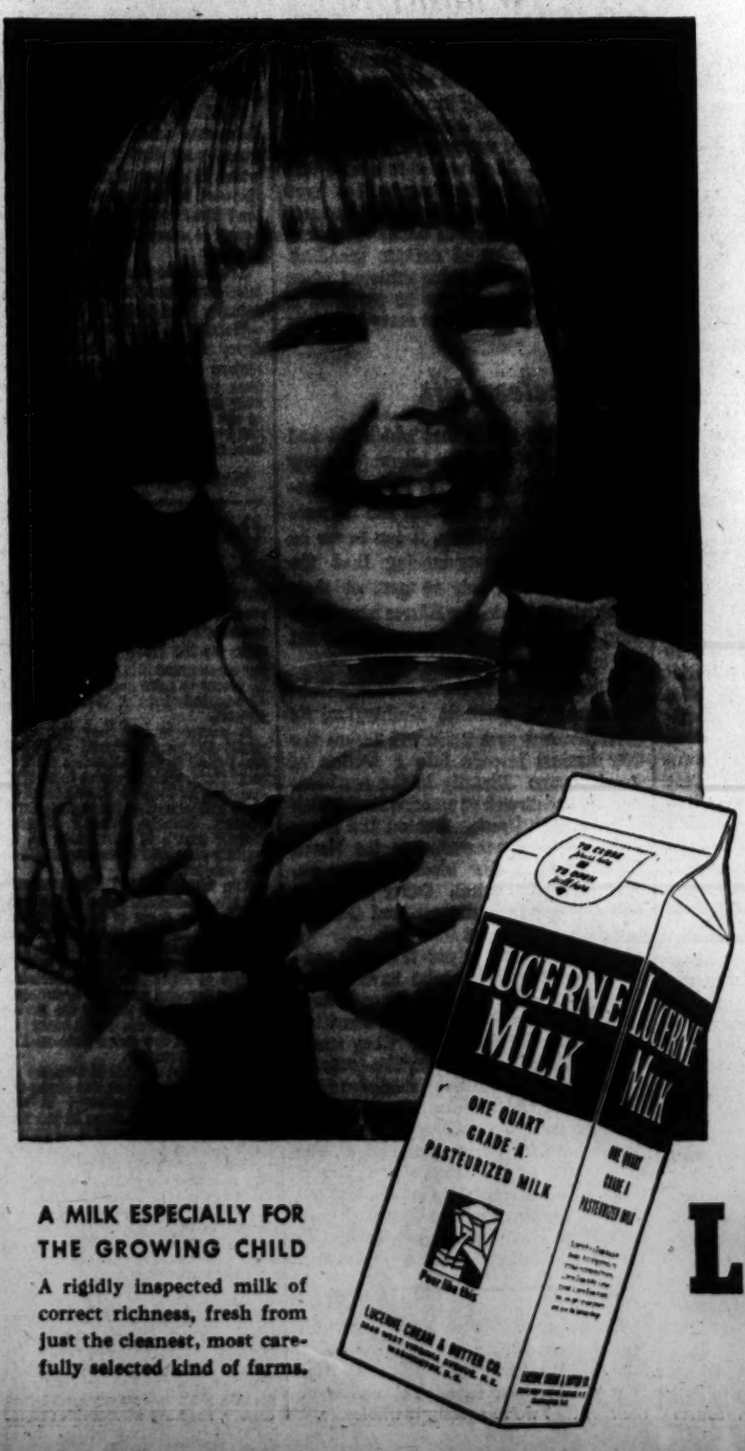
Many Mothers have asked us—
Why is it that my children like Lucerne better than any milk they ever had before?



IT'S BECAUSE of the special care we take with Lucerne every step of the way from farm to you. And children are quick to notice the difference in richness and flavor.

We start by getting milk only from the finest, cleanest Virginia and Maryland herds. Herds that are approved by the District of Columbia Health Authorities. This fine milk is rushed daily to our model new plant — the most modern milk plant in this whole area.

Here the milk is pasteurized and packaged quickly to protect its freshness and flavor. Then it is hurried to stores in refrigerated trucks. Daily tests make sure it is always high in butterfat (always higher than the law requires for Grade A) and in healthful milk solids.

We thought of mother too in our planning. We package Lucerne in a modern light-weight container that is easier to carry, easier to use and that eliminates all the bother of washing and returning bottles. Each Lucerne quart is a pound and a quarter lighter than a bottle quart of milk.

You pay no deposit and there is nothing to return when you buy Lucerne. More, you save on every quart because no home delivery charge is included in the price.

We think you and your children will prefer Lucerne. Put Lucerne on your shopping list and try it today.

A MILK ESPECIALLY FOR THE GROWING CHILD

In The Balkans

On the surface the diplomatic situation in the Balkans has undergone no change in the week that has elapsed since Italy invaded Greece. Neither Bulgaria nor Yugoslavia, neither Turkey nor Russia, has shown any disposition to exchange its role of non-belligerent for that of active participant in the struggle. All of them want peace.

Whether they will be allowed to remain at peace is problematical, however. Pressures in the Balkan peninsula continue to rise. Indeed, the failure of the Italians to bring a speedy end to Greek resistance may hasten rather than retard the spread of the conflict.

On the one hand, it appears to have stiffened the determination of such countries as Turkey and Yugoslavia to prevent their territory from being used as bases of operation in a German-Italian drive to the east. On the other hand, by revealing Italy's weakness and vulnerability it may force Germany to come to the aid of her ally in the Greek theater of war. She might do so, of course, by sending troops to the Italian peninsula, across the Adriatic to Albania and from there to the Greek battlefields. A more likely possibility is a German thrust through Bulgaria to the Aegean.

In this connection the statement on foreign affairs made by President Ismet Inonu of Turkey is of prime importance. The chief executive of the Ankara government emphasized Turkey's determination to continue a policy of non-belligerence. But he coupled this with a warning that Turkey would not permit any infringement of its independence or territorial integrity and a strong reaffirmation of the Turkish alliance with Great Britain and her friendship with the Soviet Union.

"We shall continue faithful to our friendships and alliances," he said, and he ended on a note of warm praise for the "heroic struggle" being waged by England for her existence.

Should Germany find it necessary to help her ally in the Greek struggle, the Balkan powder keg may be ignited. In the meantime the fact that the British have landed in Crete and are actively supporting Greece on land, at sea and in the air creates new difficulties for Mussolini. In invading Greece, a nation greatly inferior in numbers of trained men, equipment and industrial power to his own, the Duce may have created more problems for Italy than his move was designed to solve.

Standing Together

In an address before the Foreign Policy Association last week Laurence Duggan, political adviser to the Secretary of State, reviewed the political and economic measures which have been taken to strengthen defense of the Western Hemisphere and create a feeling of solidarity among the American republics. Special attention was given to the efforts being made to expand trade and diversify production in the countries to the south of us.

In discussing the development of new industries in Latin America, Mr. Duggan stressed the importance of direct participation by the people of the countries concerned. Moreover, he believes that citizens of the United States "must be ready to throw their lot in with the future destinies of the countries where their enterprises are located." They must be prepared to migrate with their families with the intention of staying away indefinitely.

The progress made by such methods might appear disappointingly slow to those who think of South America as a field for large-scale exploitation by absentee owners. But it would be based upon a solid foundation that would be lacking under a system of strictly absentee ownership.

It is reassuring to have a representative of the Department of State take such a positive and advanced stand in favor of shared responsibility in managing new Latin American enterprises developed with the aid of American capital. Absentee ownership and management in the past have certainly been the cause of much friction and mutual suspicion militating against effective political cooperation. As Mr. Duggan notes, the hemispheric solidarity at which we are aiming "could be lost overnight if the United States were to revert to the policy of the big stick, dollar diplomacy and intervention."

No Fourth Term?

President Roosevelt waited until the conclusion of his last major campaign address to touch upon the third-term issue. And then he did little more than pay his respects, in an off-handed way, to the Jeffersonian principle of rotation in office.

The President did not say that, if reelected, he would refuse a fourth term. He gave no pledge that he would not repeat the tactics of the Chicago convention and thus permit himself to be "drafted" once more. His statement to the effect that when the third term he is now seeking is over "there will be another President" is even less conclusive than Calvin Coolidge's "I do not choose to run."

More significant than these vague words is the line of reasoning which the President used in his Cleveland address to justify his bid for a third term. "There is a great storm raging now . . ." he said. "And that storm . . . is the true reason that I would like to stick by these people of ours until we reach the clear, sure footing ahead. We will make it—make it before the next term is over."

In other words, the President seems to make his willingness to retire from office contingent upon the attainment of his objectives. He wants to stick by the people until there is "sure footing ahead." If there is no "sure footing" in sight in 1944, the President could simply point to the new emergency and explain to the people that it had not been anticipated when he assumed, in the 1940 campaign, that three terms would be enough.

According to Mr. Roosevelt's acceptance speech, he had no intention of running for a third term until a world crisis developed. Now he has no intention of running for a fourth term. By 1944 his plans might again be altered. So his passing comment that "another President" will take over the reins of office in January 1945 might prove to mean even less than did his promise in 1932 to reduce the cost of Government by 25 per cent.

One other note in the President's address has a bearing upon this issue. He spoke of the march toward "real freedom, real prosperity, real peace." Then he said: "I want that march to continue for four more years. And for that purpose, I ask your vote of confidence."

The plain implication is that the United States cannot progress toward freedom, prosperity and peace without Mr. Roosevelt at the helm. If he believes himself to be thus indispensable to progress in these vital particulars, could he be expected to retire voluntarily four years hence?

Regardless of who is President, the next four years are likely to be troublous times. If the war goes on, the United States will continue to face grave dangers. If peace can be achieved, staggering problems of adjustment will arise. Within our own country an enormous public debt and the necessity of spending billions of dollars on our inadequate defenses tend to cast a shadow over the "open fields" and the "glowing light" which the President visualizes. A Chief Executive who believes himself to be indispensable now is not likely to lose that illusion in the next four critical years.

It can scarcely be said, then, that the Cleveland speech has minimized the dangers of a third term. Its real significance lies in the fact that the President has at last recognized those dangers. In effect, he admits that his tenure in the Presidency should be limited. In effect, he suggests that the unwritten rule forbidding any Chief Executive more than eight years in office now be amended to permit 12 years.

But the weight of history, tradition and public approval now supporting the two-term rule cannot automatically be transferred to a three-term rule. Unless he is thwarted by the electorate, Mr. Roosevelt will break down the custom which has heretofore prevented any ambitious President from perpetuating himself in office. But he cannot possibly establish a new tradition to take effect in 1944.

So the third-term issue has been sharpened instead of being disposed of. Even if the record of the Administration were far more impressive than it is, this threat to the American concept of limited and restricted governmental powers will put Mr. Roosevelt under a real handicap when the voters go to the polls tomorrow.

Crime Of Carelessness

In the conviction of a reckless driver on a charge of second degree murder, the District Court has applied a time-honored principle of law to modern conditions. The driver, who had been drinking, fled from the scene of a fatal accident and in his wild ride killed a second person. On this additional death, which the Government argued resulted from wanton disregard of the public's safety, was based the murder charge.

The indictment and the verdict recognize the likelihood that ordinary machines, if used with willful carelessness, may become instruments of death.

For the layman to understand this legal attitude toward death by automobile, it is necessary for him to know that before the law murder can be committed even if the one responsible for it had no specific intent to kill. Murder is killing with malice aforethought. But courts have held, as one did in this case, that a state of heart and mind wnich moves a man to act with wanton disregard of the safety of others can constitute malice.

Finally, as the United States Court of Appeals ruled this year, intoxication is no defense against a charge of second degree murder.

Many of the States have prosecuted drivers for second degree murder, rather than manslaughter, after fatal accidents. This is the District's first case of that sort but the new weapon against the crime of carelessness will not be abandoned. Assistant District Attorney Arthur B. Caldwell, whose painstaking and alert preparation won this initial battle, has indicated the same procedure will be considered against drivers whenever it can be proved that death resulted from wanton disregard of other persons' right to live.

Spreading Activity

In a report on the business outlook based on October data, the Secretary of Commerce notes that industrial production has passed the previous record high of last December. Moreover, a sharp increase in new orders provides assurance that further industrial expansion is ahead.

This does not mean that business activity as a whole is at a peak point. For the physical volume of output from our factories and mines is a far from accurate gauge of the state of general business. Indeed, the reliability of the Federal Reserve Board's recently revised index of industrial production has been challenged on the ground that it is impossible to believe that per capita industrial production is higher now than it was in the twenties when per capita income was much greater and unemployment much lower.

The Reserve Board's experts have returned convincing answers to such critics. They point out that output per person has increased since the twenties so that it is possible for the same or fewer workers to produce more goods. Hence the phenomenon of peak industrial cutput accompanied by an abnormally large volume of unemployment. A lower level of national income measured in terms of dollars instead of goods is likewise not inconsistent with a higher level of physical production in view of the present lower level of prices. Rising productivity for the great mass of industry is, furthermore, compatible with depression in particular industries, notably the construction industry, and with unsatisfactory conditions in various lines of trade.

Realizing the inadequacy of industrial production indices, no doubt, the Department of Commerce has called attention to a number of other important factors that should be taken into account in judging the business outlook. It notes, for example, that activity in the construction industry is at a ten-year peak, employment and pay rolls are showing substantial increases, and consumer purchasing power is steadily rising.

Capacity operations and new production records in steel and other industries are to be expected as a result of the defense program. But evidence that the upturn is spreading from active to depressed industries and making inroads on the army of unemployed is definitely encouraging. It gives rise to a hope that some of the maladjustments that have heretofore prevented a balanced business recovery will disappear under the extraordinary stimulus of defense spending.

How to hold the gains achieved when defense spending has to be curtailed is a problem which calls for early consideration.

A Priceless Gift

A priceless gift is that which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss intend to bestow on the District. Land for parks in long-settled urban areas seldom can be purchased. Once built up, it can never be reclaimed. By announcing that the public will fall heir to part of their Georgetown estate, the Blisses have made sure that it will not at any time be cut up into building sites.

Whatever part of the Dumbarton Oaks tract may be given to Washington, its establishment as a park will insure the city against inroads into a section of great beauty. Directly to the northeast lies the fine stretch of wooded land which follows Rock Creek. Behind the property, on the northwest, are the Naval Observatory, a few blocks farther on, Washington Cathedral. Other parks are close by on the southwest, and Georgetown University is on the south.

But the setting is not the only consideration. The many who have visited Dumbarton Oaks, when the grounds have been opened for the benefit of charities, attest to its unique charm. They speak of the orangery, the brook, the orchard, the box, the yew walk, the rhododendron, the wistaria and the carefully preserved building with the reverence thoughtful people have for things of the past. The atmosphere of old Georgetown lingers there. The preservation of Dumbarton Oaks in the form of a public park will be a legacy of charm and beauty to future generations of Washingtonians.

"Crime costs the average American family about $200 a year."—Newspaper filler. This seems an awfully steep price to pay for crime, especially in view of the fact that we're getting it wholesale.

The Final Round

For Willkie

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How long are the American people going to tolerate gross deception and dishonesty? The Chief Executive of our Nation has reached the state of par excellence in both. He has deceived the people as to the Nation's preparedness.

Now, by the hasty return of Joseph P. Kennedy, who grew financially fat on Wall Street and whom the President at Boston last night characterized as "my" Ambassador to Great Britain, the President seeks to have the American people believe that conditions in Europe justify the wiping out of the third-term tradition, which Mr. Kennedy brands as the least important issue in the campaign, although Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and all the other Presidents, with two exceptions, throughout 150 years of American history, treated it as settled law.

If title by prescription is made indefensible after the lapse of 20 years, why then is not a custom which is almost eight times as old likewise to be accepted as settled law? The answer is that cupidity for power is rampant in the New Deal group.

Let the people, therefore, elect a tried executive, a lawyer who has actually been tested in legal battles—Wendell L. Willkie—to the Presidency of the United States and thus restore sound government, rather than reelect a man who was not only an abject failure as Governor of the State of New York, but who has been a colossal failure as President of the United States.

AN AMERICAN CITIZEN.

Lewis Ultimatum

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of your city and of mine have long been asking for peace between the two big labor groups of the Nation. Unity between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. is important to every businessman in the country. They have long been urging such a move to help labor and industry alike.

Labor peace is important to every worker in the country, and to the man and woman in the street—the general public, many of whom have been alienated by labor's internal squabbles.

Such labor peace, long desired, is possible now! John L. Lewis has been the biggest stumbling block to labor unity. Mr. Lewis threatens to resign as head of the C. I. O. if President Roosevelt is reelected. I think we should all get together and take Lewis up on that threat. And I think that the business leaders of your community and of mine should be the first to act, for they have declared that labor peace is essential for the prosperity of business.

First, to safeguard the gains of the New Deal; and second, to achieve peace in the labor movement. I believe that we should answer Mr. Lewis' ultimatum with a victory for the President on election day.

In The Back Room

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There lived years ago in my home town in the Middle West, one Jack Slade. In a bone-dry God fearing community his establishment down near the depot was a civic pain. You could go onto the ground floor with a dime and get a slug of liquor that would inspire the baby's Easter bunny to commit first degree mayhem on an English pit bull dog. There was a crooked faro game just up one flight, and above this Jack's ornate apartment was presided over by a dizzy blond whose precise social status was a mystery.

Came one day to our town the Rev. Gypsy Smith. Jack and some of his gang visited one of his meetings with the avowed intent of breaking it up. But the services ended with Jack sobbing at the mourner's bench.

From that day to his death he became a devout churchman, a respected citizen and family man and I recall was finally elected superintendent of the Sunday school. At the time most folks were surprised at Jack's sudden conversion—and certainly none more so than the boys who hung around the back room, when he closed up shop and rented the place out to a wholesale grocery house. They never expected Jack to do anything like that to them.

Now I think most of us are a bit surprised at Mr. Willkie's fervid interest in social uplift. Perhaps unfairly we associated his name with a branch of business that did not appear to be taking its ethics from the Sabbath School Weekly or fretting about the folks on the other side of the tracks. Preferring President Roosevelt's experience and proved quality of heart and mind, I for one am convinced of the Republican candidate's sincerity. Political conversions are not without historical precedent.

Many historians believe that something in the silver tongued Bryan's repeated indictments of the sinful corporations during the 1900 and 1904 campaigns struck a vibrant chord in the soul of Theodore Roosevelt. And when T. R. began to flail out at "malefactors of great wealth" with an ardor none could doubt—Tom Platt, Marc Hanna and Matt Quay who had been hanging around the back room when Teddy took over, did nothing to conceal their pained chagrin.

Should he become President do not be surprised if Wendell Willkie sticks to his newly espoused faith and strikes out lustily for the working man. But gentle reader drop, I beg of you, a tear for the old gang now hanging around his back room. The surprised grief of Joe Pew, Tom Girdler and Bob Weir will be pitiful to behold.

Postoffices

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been much said, in recent years about the "New Deal's" squandering of the hard-earned money of the taxpayer of these United States but we have heard nothing said of the way a great deal of those funds have been squandered in building large "city" postoffices in the very small country towns.

The writer has had occasion to visit, or pass through some of the small towns, in recent months, and on inquiring about these imposing edifices, has been told "that is our new postoffice." Now, in the writer's home town, there was a postoffice which was not new, or imposing, but it was surely large enough, and if it had been redecorated and kept in a fair state of cleanliness, we think it would have served adequately, for many years to come, but a large new one was built recently, and we wonder how many years it will be, before this town, and many others of scant population, will ever "grow to" these palatial "city" postoffices.

On Building Up The Navy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been astonished to find even among opponents of President Roosevelt a tacit admission that insofar as the Navy is concerned he has done great things for it. In fact, he seems to have acquired some sort of reputation as a creator in this respect.

It seems to me that this claim ought to be punctured forthwith, and I shall in the following set forth some facts, which I claim to be quite accurate, as they are taken from the most authoritative source on naval matters, namely, "Jane's Fighting Ships," which is recognized as the world's standard reference book on the subject.

The two Administrations preceding Mr. Roosevelt, those of Coolidge and Hoover, were of course limited by treaty, as were the governments of other countries. Battleships were out, and inasmuch as there was no enemy in sight there was certainly not the forceful need for armaments as there has been during the Roosevelt Administration, which came into power about the same time as Hitler did in Germany.

In the light of this it became interesting to see what the three adminstrations of Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt have done in the way of building cruisers, which, of course, next to the battleships, are the backbone of the fighting strength. Not to slight the present incumbent let us start by stating that Mr. Roosevelt's most important contribution to heavy naval construction is the so-called Brooklyn class of light cruisers.

A light cruiser is a ship mounting guns of 6 inches. The whole Brooklyn class carries 135 such guns, firing an aggregate broadside of about 14,715 pounds. Giving Mr. Roosevelt further credit for the heavy cruisers Wichita, Quincy and Vincennes, we add to the above aggregate a further 27 guns of 8-inch caliber, shooting a broadside of 6,750 pounds, which, with the Brooklyn class, gives a grand total of 21,465 pounds.

Mr. Hoover was only in there for four years, but during that time he built, in spite of his Quaker persuasion, heavy cruisers with an aggregate broadside of 16,750 pounds. During the Hoover Administration we built no light cruisers, but in the heavy class it may be truly said that Mr. Hoover went to town.

The Coolidge Administration built both light and heavy cruisers during the two terms, and the aggregate broadside of both 6 and 8-inch guns is 29,000 pounds.

I feel that these figures completely explode the notion that Mr. Roosevelt has done so well for the Navy. As a matter of fact, he has neglected it sorely, except that he has continued the modernization of our stock of destroyers, which was started by Hoover, and, of course, the above mentioned Brooklyn class.

So as not to leave any misunderstanding let me say that Mr. Roosevelt has finished two 19,900-ton aircraft carriers, the Enterprise and the Yorktown, with the 14,700-ton Wasp coming up. Against this Hoover laid down the Ranger of 14,500 tons and Coolidge the two enormous 33,000-ton Lexington and Saratoga (displacement at full load 40,000 tons).

It can surely be said that in view of the much more ominous times from 1933 on the Coolidge and Hoover Administrations did much better than did Mr. Roosevelt. As a matter of fact, the appropriations for both the Navy and the Army fell off as soon as Mr. Roosevelt took office. This is not commonly known, presumably because people thought that with the tremendous squandering of money some would certainly go to the defenses. Mr. Roosevelt's capacity for spending money without tangible results has not yet been fully realized by all of the American people.

How Readers Size It Up

"Wake Up!"

New Deal Party: That from an authorized speaker for that party! Wake up from your slumbers, Democrats of 1940, for this you will be given the slow poison of dictatorship.—A Seventh Generation American, Washington.

Yes But

Mr. Willkie, I believe that you are sincere, but I do not trust some of the rich men that are shouting for you. I have a sneaking idea that Roosevelt saved us from a dictatorship.—C. R. Bartel, Washington.

How About Stalin?

Perhaps those who are so well versed in foreign affairs as to be able to tell us whom Hitler wants for President of the United States could also tell us whom Stalin wants for President here. I have got to find that out before I can make up my mind how to vote.—Information, Please, Mount Rainier, Md.

Asking For Freedom

When a man asks for employment he is asking for more than employment; he is asking for freedom which comes through employment alone.—Harry Damiels, Washington.

Not To Set Precedent

Thus it will be seen he (George Washington) refused the third term, because of ill health and the exhaustion of long service to his country, and not to set a precedent that would be as unchangeable as the laws of the Medes and Persians.—Sincere; Arlington, Va.

Eases His Conscience

As we near election day, the most important day in our history, my conscience troubles me for not speaking out for our champion, Wendell Willkie, who is so faithfully crusading throughout the United States to save us from the oblivion that confronts us with the continuance in power of the New Deal.—P. F. Skinner, Anacostia, D. C.

'New Deal' Slogan

Mr. Wallace speaks with so much pride about the New Deal's great help to the farmer. Being a farmer myself, I know he certainly can't mean those depending on present prices for their income. I refer you to the present hog market—not what the consumer pays—oh, no. What we get on the open market. So he obviously means they have helped those to whom the Government has handed gratis checks for what they did not do and for which somebody somewhere has to pay. It all seems to be a game of rob-Peter to pay Paul and haul in votes. All this prompts me to offer what seems to be a very appropriate New Deal slogan: I earn my living by the sweat of your brow.—Maryland Farmer.

Miss Thompson's Change

Now Dorothy Thompson has changed her politics. Can Willkie-Hoover-Dewey-Smith be right after all? Has Dorothy Thompson joined the party which she believes will send our boys to foreign shores, the course she has defended and plead for in her column? Truly Mark Sullivan is right in presuming that her mind and sympathies are more enmeshed with the fortunes of Great Britain than they are concerned with the destiny of our own boys and our own America. She wants war. She said so.—A Mother of Sons, Washington.

Family Vote

I hope I won't see any war and I hope no one else in this country sees it either, because I have sons and sons-in-law that will have to go. I don't think there is any father who wants to see his children go over there and go through what we went through in 1918. I am glad to say I have about 20 in the family who will vote the Democratic ticket and as for my wife and me, we will vote the same with great pleasure. I am wishing Franklin D. Roosevelt all the luck in the world on his third term and if he is elected, congratulations.—Fred G. Hall, Washington.

Pilot Roosevelt

So now Mr. Roosevelt comes along and tells us that in critical times such as these (when he and his followers set the whole world afire), nobody can understand how to pull us through the fires. What a leader! He navigates the ship of nation, day and night in control, all by himself. Has anyone ever heard of such a ship that only one man in the whole world can navigate it?—P. G. Moskios, Washington.

Biblical Analogy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On October 24 you published my letter in which attention was called to the grave danger that Mr. Wallace might become President. With regard to the effect upon business and industry, if not to the whole country, of such a calamity, my brother has called attention to a Biblical passage quite in point.

In I Kings xii:1-11, we read that Rehoboam, son and "heir apparent" of King Solomon, succeeded to the throne on the death of his father. He consulted with the "old men" who had stood before Solomon and said, "How do ye advise that I may answer this people?" They said: "If thou wilt be servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants forever."

"But he forsook the counsel of the old men . . . and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him . . . who spake unto him, saying . . . thus shalt thou say unto them, my little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins. And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions."

It appears from the following verses, 12-20, that this sage advice of the "young men" (presumably the "New Dealers" of the day) was followed and that the result was a revolution. Perhaps the "old men" know a thing or two even now.

The First Ten

By Dorothy Thompson

Diverse Defenders Of America

I LOOKED with fascination at the names of the first ten Americans drafted for the new Army in Manhattan. The very first one was Chinese. Yuen Chong-Chan. Three Italians. A Pole. Five Jews. Seven men whose defense of democracy in America is at the same time defense of freedom for the lands or the race of their national origins. Three who know that the collapse of America would bring no happiness to any of the people in Italy, but only suffering and privation.

It is a strange country, America, Walt Whitman said, "It is the greatest poem." "Realists" always said it never could last . . . one could never hold so conglomerate a people together with a book, a constitution, an idea. The nature of our composition demands that we be a Nation of idealists. For out of ideas and ideals we were created. Neither out of blood, nor soil.

Out of ideals, and out of a common program, a common goal, a common desire. To be free; to own one's own home; to bring up one's children in an atmosphere of equality; to be without servility; without the tipping of the hat, except to those one admires; without hand-kissing. To escape military service—how often they have come here for that, from all the countries in the world. To escape military service for a king, for a caste, for a way of life that seemed not worth fighting for, a way of life in which they were without property and outcast.

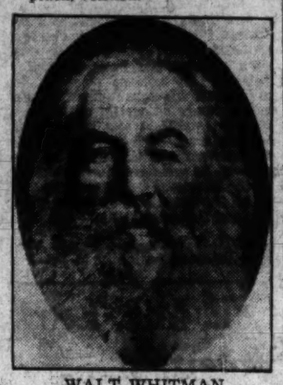
WHAT WILL MEN fight for, if they are called upon to fight?

They will fight for a revolutionary idea that made America. Life, Liberty, Happiness. They fought again for the Union of the States. The United States of America. The boy from the Berkshire Hills shouldered his rifle for Michigan, Iowa, Ohio, Wisconsin. He had never been in any of them. How did they look? He had an uncle who went out to Ohio once. Wrote sometimes for a while and afterward you didn't hear from him. Said the land out there was better. Not like the stony Berkshire Hills. Like to go there once on a visit. Maybe settle down.

There were no automobiles and no broad roads, no moving pictures, no radios. The modern Berkshire Hills boy knows more about London from the news reels than he knew about Michigan when he shouldered his rifle. But it was for the United States; the United States, that went on, and on, and if you had the gumption you could pick up and follow along out there, follow the uncle who has stopped writing. It was a lot of land, all open, all together, and some people were going to shut off some of it and go off by themselves. Be another country, all off by themselves. With slavery. Black slaves.

The father of the boy in the Berkshire Hills had never seen a Negro. But that men's bodies should be sold at auction was horror to a New England freeman. He had read a poem by an odd chap named Walt Whitman. People. People said he ran around with a low lot of fellows, but he certainly did know how to write. He'd seen a man sold once, down South, in that part that wanted to pull off and make a separate country and live on its own. He'd described it, in that odd way he had, of seeing things and commenting on what he saw.

A man's body at auction
(For before the war I go often to the slave mart and watch the sale),
I help the auctioneer, the sloven does not half know his business.
Gentlemen, look on this wonder.
Whatever the bids of the bidders, they cannot be high enough for it.
For it the globe lay preparing quintillions of years without one animal or plant.
For it the revolving cycles truly and steadily roll'd.
In this head the all-baffling brain,
In it and below it the makings of heroes.
Examine these limbs—red, black, or white, they are cunning in tendon and nerve—
They shall be stript that you may see them.
Exquisite senses, life-lit eyes, pluck, volition.



WALT WHITMAN
"It is the greatest poem"

Flakes of breast-muscle, pliant backbone and neck, flesh not flabby, good-sized arms and legs,
And wonders within there yet.
Within there runs blood,
The same old blood, the same red-running blood!
There swells and jets a heart, there all passions, desires, reachings, aspirations . . .

This is not only one man, this is the father of those who shall be fathers in their turns,
In him the start of populous states and rich republics,
Of him countless immortal lives, with countless embodiments and enjoyments.

How do you know who shall come from the offspring of his offspring through the centuries?
(Who might you find you had come from yourself, if you could trace back through the centuries?)

The Berkshire farmer read the lines, and painted his chimney white—white with a black line around the top. That secret code telegraphed to refugee slaves: Station of the Underground Railroad.

The union of the States. And the union of humanity within the States.

That was seventy years ago. How far have we gone from there . . .

From there, to the first ten names on the Manhattan draft?

More Excerpts From Letters

Song Hit

If the first few lines of the current song hit "Only Forever" weren't written by the third-term candidate, they at least should be dedicated to him:

"Do I want to be with you
As the years come and go?
Only forever,
If you care to know."
—Albert J. Engel, Washington.

New Dealers In Office

We know that the world has changed in recent years. It is always changing, but the fundamental principles of decency, honesty and the rights of minorities are not dead. They will live forever in spite of the New Dealers who recognize no law, written or unwritten, in their determination to perpetuate themselves in office.—V. C. H., Washington.

Not Thrice Mistaken

Few men are criticized for making one mistake and in good many cases the same mistake is overlooked when made a second time. But there is absolutely no excuse for anyone making the same mistake three times. Therefore, I am voting for Willkie.—A Democrat, Washington.

None Of Our Business

It is not how the abandonment of the third term tradition will offset democracy at large—those of other democratic countries, but how it will affect American democracy—those personal liberties at home and not of those of the people abroad. If the people of other democracies have relinquished their personal liberties, rights and prerogatives to their rulers it is none of our concern here.—Isabelle Frigill, Washington.

New Deal Policy

Has not the discussion whether Roosevelt or Willkie will best defend this Nation ignored the question whether we will get waste or defense for the back-breaking billions spent? First and last the New Deal policy has been to waste and this established policy will hold regardless of our danger.—J. Hale Greer, Washington.

Changes Her Friends

In re Dorothy Thompson's change of mind, certainly the lady can change her mind. But when she does that she changes her friends. She can't take them with her—not many of them.—F. F. Weston, Forest Glen, Md.

Senate Prestige

ADVOCATING the exclusion of disreputable journalists from the press galleries of Congress, Senator Burt Wheeler, of Montana, uttered a remark which deserves more than the momentary notice which it received in the heat of the campaign.

"People must have respect for members of the Senate and the House, especially in these times when there is a trend toward totalitarianism throughout the country," said Senator Wheeler.

Now, to this the obvious reply is that the Senators and Representatives bear the first and greatest responsibility in this matter. Senator Wheeler was referring to a newspaper report which Senator Barkley denounced as scurrilous and contemptible, and it may be that in this instance they were on solid ground, for there is no denying that in the last few years Washington journalism, which is the best in the country having the best journalism in the world has been degraded by the rise to prominence of numerous disciples of the Samuel Pepys of the gents' room.

IT IS BAD ENOUGH that such evil should be permitted to make print when it is confined to the affairs of worthless tosspots whose lives are spent in New York saloons, but it is unpardonable that newspapers should patronize the product of individuals so poor in professional pride and ability as to imitate this foul offense against the freedom and the future of the American press in covering the Washington scene.

Mere gossip is not news, and there is nothing more dangerous to the press than the publication of gossip in the guise of news concerning men and matters of national importance. The newspapers certainly have a great responsibility and an important self-interest to serve here.

But when Senator Wheeler says that "people must have respect for members of the Senate and the House" he should look about him. Surely it is not the duty of an honest press to attempt to manufacture respect for the egregious Joe Guffey, of Pennsylvania, whose very presence in the body which Senator Wheeler adorns flagrantly offends the dignity which he upholds.

SENATOR GUFFEY gets $10,000 a year and certain perquisites from the public treasury; he contributes to the campaign funds of the New Deal, of which he is a tawdry political menial. He lives in rich style, and he still owes the United States $4,165, plus interest, for 15 years, on an old income tax bill which has been outlawed by the statute of limitations. Other citizens outside the Senate are required to pay their taxes and endure every year the punitive political harassment by which the Treasury, under the New Deal, attempts to discipline dissenters, and it is futile to command them to respect Senator Guffey. In fact, the Senate as a whole suffers to some extent in the esteem of conscientious citizens from the presence there of a deadhead and deadbeat citizen.

Senator Truman, of Missouri, the political servant of the old Pendergast gang, is another colleague of Senator Wheeler who will be respected no more than the people respect his old boss, Tom Pendergast, and perhaps a little less, in view of the fact that Pendergast had no official responsibility. He was just a free-style crook in general practice, but Truman permitted Pendergast to elect him to the Senate, and the Senate welcomed Truman without question.

SENATOR PEPPER, of Florida, and Senator Downey, of California, are two more statesmen of the Upper House who, for reasons less odious but equally important, will receive less than a full measure of respect from intelligent and conscientious Americans, and the same must be said of every other Senator who paltered with the pathetic but dangerous Townsend or ham 'n' eggs vote to win his certificate of election.

Senator Slattery, of Illinois, will receive exactly the respect which his record deserves, and of any Senator who owes his presence in the Upper House to the late Huey Long or Huey's political heirs it may be said, in paraphrase of Samuel Seabury, that it is impossible to elevate him to the level of any decent man's contempt. It is tragic, too, from the standpoint of civic morality that such a Senator has the privilege of selecting men to serve on the Federal bench, a fact to which Senator Wheeler had better address his solicitude for the Nation's sacred institutions next time the mood is on him.

The press is human, fallible and in spots contemptible, and offenders against good men and journalistic honor deserve the very punishment that Senator Wheeler recommends. But bad journalism is less dangerous to the prestige of the Senate than the character and political background of its members.

Election Outcome

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Probabilities Favor Roosevelt

POLL-TAKERS and election forecasters are on tenterhooks this year. Twenty-one States, accounting in themselves for a majority of the Electoral College, seem doubtful. If anyone puts every one of them in its proper column before the votes have been tallied it will be by sheer guesswork.

Week-end reports to Democratic headquarters indicate that the trend to Willkie, which set in late in September or early in October, has been arrested. The Republicans assert that it has not been. Experienced politicians and newspapermen who usually know how their own States are going to vote are making conflicting guesses or admitting their uncertainty. Newsweek's poll of 50 Washington newspaper correspondents shows 27 forecasting a Roosevelt victory and 22 forecasting a Willkie victory, and one refusing to venture even a guess.

The first prediction that can be made with reasonable confidence is that Roosevelt will receive a majority of the popular vote. Judging from past experience he will need, however, from 52 to 53 per cent of the popular vote to win a majority of the Electoral College. This is because of the heavy popular pluralities he will run up in the South and in a few other sure Roosevelt States. Roosevelt could get as much as 53 or even 54 per cent of the popular vote and still lose the election. Past experience indicates, however, that a shade less than 53 per cent would put him across.

ROOSEVELT COMES UP to election day with one concrete advantage over Willkie. He has a bigger backlog of electoral votes which he is almost certain to get. Not only the polls, but reports from competent political observers examined by this correspondent, indicate that Roosevelt is reasonably certain of at least 206 electoral votes. These are:

Ten Southern States	113
Oklahoma	11
Kentucky	11
Tennessee	11
West Virginia	8
Maryland	8
California	22
Washington	8
Arizona	3
Nevada	3
Utah	4
Montana	4
	206

Willkie seems to be correspondingly certain of only five States, with 32 electoral votes:

North Dakota	4
South Dakota	4
Nebraska	7
Kansas	9
Vermont	3
	32

This leaves 21 States with 293 electoral votes shrouded in more or less doubt. Some, like Missouri, New Mexico and New Jersey, are reported to lean definitely toward Roosevelt. Others, like Iowa, Wisconsin and New Hampshire, are reported to lean definitely toward Willkie. New York, which has been carefully polled, and several other States, appear to be on the hair-line.

ON THE BASIS of this evidence, a victory for Willkie is possible, but the probabilities favor Roosevelt. Willkie must get nearly all the doubtful States. Roosevelt can win by any of a dozen or more combinations of more or less doubtful States.

Roosevelt could lose New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Massachusetts—and still win. On top of his reasonably certain 206, the following States could elect him: Missouri, 15; New Mexico, 3; Oregon, 5; Idaho, 4; Wyoming, 3; Delaware, 3; Rhode Island, 4; New Jersey, 16, and Connecticut, 8. Total, 61. If he carries any one of the big Middle Atlantic or Central States—New York, or Pennsylvania, or Ohio, or Illinois, or Michigan—he can hardly fail of election.

The Republicans will have one great advantage on election: plenty of money. It may be decisive in States that now seem highly doubtful. There are only two important spots where the Democrats have an offset in high-powered political machines: Chicago and Jersey City. Tammany is relatively inactive, and some of its leaders may be covertly working for Willkie—as the distant onlooker might infer from the fact that Willkie has not attacked Tammany.

Nothing between a narrow victory for Willkie and an electoral landslide for Roosevelt would be astonishing.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

But yesterday he romped about at play,
His laughter stirring sunshine in my heart—
A curly-headed youngster, ever gay,
So eager for each bright, new day to start!
My constant prayer was "Dear God, keep him whole!"—
And long I watched beside the garden gate . . .
And now a wrinkled hand explores a bowl
To make my boy a number . . . One-Five-Eight!

II.

But yesterday he was a barefoot boy
Of blessed summer memory and song;
To him life was a thing of fluid joy . . .
He seemed so far from evil and from wrong!
He played at soldier games his fancy made,
And pressed to mimic warfare with a zeal;
A Christmas gun he carried as he played . . .
And now a morning dawns . . . and it is real!

III.

A merry schoolboy trotting off each morn—
The little room where all his books were piled . . .
Then graduation day and new hopes born
As he stood there and seemed no more a child;
Our chuckles as he talked about "my girl" . . .
The dance they did and told us it was "swing" . . .
Now do blindfolded men a slip uncurl
To bring him close to war and suffering.

IV.

The days I held him closely to my breast
And thanked my God all warlike times were o'er . . .
That by a lasting peace our times were blest
That unlike dad, he'd ne'er be touched by war . . .
The Christmas morning and my son's first tree . . .
The light that shone upon his infant face . . .
Can it be, after all this, Fate's decree
That he must guard some far disputed place?

V.

The Yuletide days he had those soldier toys . . .
The cannon and the miniature tanks . . .
The fun he had with all those other boys
At charges, mass attacks and turning flanks . . .
How do those memories about me close
When all that was seems broken, twisted, gone—
As into pots of war a lean hand goes
And One-Five-Eight leads all the numbers drawn!

VI.

Full manhood now is just ahead we thought . . .
And so it is, and so it is indeed!
For in his eyes we see a vision caught,
And sense an inner something has been freed . . .
At first the tidings left us sad and gruff—
They seemed so far apart from any plan,
But he is of us, and he has the stuff—
And he will serve his country like a man!

A Turning Point?

By Barnet Nover

As The Greeks Resist

IT IS TOO early to speak with any measure of certainty regarding the present course of the fighting in Greece, let alone its ultimate outcome. But enough has happened in the seven days since that conflict began to suggest that the Italo-Greek struggle may mark a second major turning point in the European war. The first turning point was, of course, the failure of Hitler's aerial assault on Great Britain.

The last few months have witnessed a perceptible decline in the prestige of the Axis, a rise in the prestige of Great Britain. As a result, some of the nations lying athwart the new drang nach osten are not as willing as they might otherwise have been to submit to Axis domination. That is clearly true of Greece, which chose to fight rather than submit to Italian demands for Greek territory. It appears to be equally true of Turkey and may also be true of Yugoslavia.

A. V. ALEXANDER
The First Lord dispelled the mystery of the fleet's whereabouts

IN A NOTABLE address to the National Assembly at Ankara last Friday, President Ismet Inonu declared that the European war had "gone into a new phase" as a result of England's "obstinate resistance."

He went on to say that Turkey's foreign policy was unchanged; that her "attitude of non-belligerence does not need to constitute an obstacle to normal relations with all other countries which show the same good will"; but that she will not permit her territory to be trespassed upon. He spoke of the "solid and unbreakable" bonds of alliance with Great Britain and the "relations of confidence with the Soviet Union."

His address was a clear warning to Germany and incidentally, but not less pointedly, to Bulgaria, that any attempt spread the war to Thrace and the Dardanelles would meet with Turkish resistance.

THERE ARE REASONS to believe that the Turkish attitude is paralleled in some measure by the attitude of Yugoslavia. The latter country has proclaimed her neutrality in the Italo-Greek struggle. Surrounded by the Axis she would unquestionably prefer to remain at peace. But she has shown no willingness to serve as a corridor for Germany and Italy in their drive to the Mediterranean and the Near East. In other words, any further military moves by Germany and Italy in the Balkans may lead to a spread of the conflagration in that area, a development that would not be to their long-run advantage.

In the meantime the mystery concerning British activities in the Greek theater of war has partially been cleared up by the statement of A. V. Alexander, the first lord of the Admiralty. He has revealed that the British have landed in Crete and are otherwise cooperating on land, sea and in the air with their Greek allies.

THE IMPORTANCE of Britain's action in coming promptly to the support of Greece can prove decisive. The effect it may have on the military aspects of the struggle may not be great. It is doubtful if Great Britain is in a position to send any large number of troops or planes to help her ally. But by establishing herself at certain strategic points on Greek soil, notably in Crete, she will be in a position to negate the gains which Italy may derive from the occupation of Greek territory.

With Crete in their possession, the British will be able more effectively to attack Italian supply lines in the Mediterranean and also be much closer than she has been to Italian bases in Albania, the German-held oil wells in Rumania and German military concentrations in that country.

FROM A STRATEGIC point of view the Italian attack on Greece is the counterpart, in the Mediterranean area, of Germany's invasion of Norway. Germany needed Norway to protect her Baltic flank while she was engaged in her campaign against the Low Countries and France and as a future base of operations against Great Britain. The Axis needs Greece as a stepping stone toward the Near East.

The German assault on Norway was carried out with remarkable skill and incredible rapidity. Within 24 hours after the attack began, partly through the use of Trojan Horse tactics, partly by means of the unlimited use of air power, all the major ports on the Norwegian coast, from Narvik to Oslo had been occupied. By the time the British got around to opposing the Germans the latter were so thoroughly entrenched as to make it impossible to dislodge them.

IN CONTRAST, the Italian invasion of Greece has moved at a snail's pace. Air power has been used but not in sufficient force or with sufficient effectiveness to prevent the mobilization of the Greek army or even to keep the small Greek air force from getting off the ground. Now, with Great Britain established at Crete and perhaps other strategic Greek islands, Italy's position is considerably worsened. By sheer weight of numbers and superiority in air power she is still likely to succeed in overrunning the Greek mainland although the campaign may prove costly both in men and material and eat into Italy's dwindling war supplies. But unless the tide now begins to move rapidly in her favor the losses of the venture may greatly exceed the gains. This time, in contrast to last April, Great Britain has not been caught napping.

Smart Set Sees Boxer Show at Merrill Home

More Than 45 Bluebloods of Dogdom Parade at Their Best at First Show Of Its Kind to Be Held in Capital Area

By Elizabeth Henney

All Washington was in the doghouse yesterday (at least those of the smart set were) and, believe it or not, they loved it. The event was a combination boxer show and cocktail party which took place in the gardens of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill on Belmont Road, with Mr. and Mrs. Merrill and Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse as co-hosts. Under a brilliant marquee the dogs were benched for the afternoon and over 45 of them were shown in a ring in the garden.

To an audience of more than 200 the dogs paraded in their most elegant fashion. The first boxer show to be held in Washington, it brought entries from New York, Long Island, Connecticut, Baltimore, Annapolis, Washington and Middleburg, to meet and exchange barks during the afternoon.

After the show was over and while the entries munched happily on puppy bones and doggy food, the guests moved on into the Merrill dining room for liquid and solid refreshments. The cocktail party was officially in honor of Frederick I. Hamm, of New York, President of the American Boxer Club. Mr. Hamm came down to Washington especially to judge yesterday's show.

Mrs. Merrill, incidentally, came to town over the week-end also, especially to put her house in order for the show, and is already on her way back to her other home at Pride's Crossing, Mass. The Merrill house here adjoins the Potomac Boxer Club, of which Mr. Merrill was the founder and of which Mrs. Shouse is now president.

Mme. Procope's Entries Take Blue Ribbons

Among entries which walked off with blue ribbons for events of the afternoon were boxers owned by Mme. Procope, wife of the Finnish Minister; Miss Elizabeth Lemon, Mme. Gilbo, Mrs. Jouett Shouse and R. G. Barton, who was manager of the show. Coquette, famous dog owned by Glenn V. Studebaker, won the blue ribbon in the obedience test at the end of the show.

Being welcomed by their many friends in town during the afternoon were the Merrills' house guests, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Palmedo, of New Milford, Conn., and Mrs. Palmedo's mother, Mrs. Gaertner.

Mrs. Emil Ludwig Brings Noted Animals

Mrs. Emil Ludwig, of Long Island, whose entries are famous in dog lover circles, came to the Capital especially for the show, and from Annapolis came Commander and Mrs. R. J. Jondreau.

Among those noted during the afternoon were the new Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard G. Casey, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Rudolf Kauffmann, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Breckenridge Bayne and many more.

Senora de Espil To Entertain Tomorrow

Tea Will Be Given At Embassy in Honor Of Argentinians

Senora de Espil, wife of the Ambassador of the Argentine, will entertain at tea tomorrow afternoon at the embassy in honor of Senora de Martinez Guerrero, her 17-year-old daughter, Senorita Anna Rosa de Guerrero, and the two young women who recently accompanied Senora de Guerrero to this country from Argentina, Senorita Fernandez Beiro and Senorita Pena Salas.

Assisting the hostess at the tea table will be Senora de Pardo, wife of the new First Secretary of the Embassy, who has just come to this country from Geneva, Switzerland; Senora de Zanni, wife of the Military Attache of the embassy; Senora de Godoy, wife of the Argentine Naval Attache; Senora de Scilingo and the hostess' daughter, Miss Louise Stillwell.

Senora de Guerrero, who is chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, came here for the convention which will open next Monday. Senorita Fernandez Beiro, a well known artist in the Argentine, will represent the "Amigas del Arte" of Argentina; Senorita Pena Salas is a young lowyer. Both young women are acting as assistants to Senora de Guerrero.

The guest list for the afternoon will include the official and personal friends of Senora de Espil, and the women of the press. A feminine affair entirely, it is for the purpose of acquainting the hostess's honor guests with the women of Washington and their interests.

The former Miss Bette Brooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Brooke, of Washington, and Capt. Hall, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. Antoine Hall, of St. Louis, Mo., were married Saturday in the Chapel of the Church of the Covenant. The Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney officiated at the 5 o'clock ceremony.

Crisis or None, Army Keeps Eye On Football

Mrs. Marshall Goes To Notre Dame Game; Aronlds Aslo There

No matter what turmoil swirls about those in the Army, there are two events in the year that draw all those who can come from far or near—the Army-Notre Dame football game (played usually in New York) and the Army-Navy game, which has been for the past several years in Philadelphia.

This year, in spite of the sudden service expansion program, many of the high ranking officers and their families found time to break away over Saturday to dash to New York for the Army-Notre Dame game.

Heading the list was Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Chief of Staff. At the last minute Gen. Marshall couldn't go, but Mrs. Marshall took with her a party of relatives and guests from New York, and attended some of the festivities which followed the game. She will return to Washington tomorrow.

Maj. Gen. Arnold Attends Game

Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Corps and Acting Deputy Chief of Staff, attended the game accompanied by Mrs. Arnold. They, too, were feted at several parties following the game and returned to Washington late yesterday evening.

Down from West Point came Maj. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, Superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point, and he among many others entertained at the annual gridiron dinner at the Astor Hotel which followed the game.

For so long that it is almost tradition, the Astor has been headquarters for Army people in New York, and a look at the lobby over the week-end was practically a cross section of the service.

Many Are Present From Washington

Among those who were guests were Brig. Gen. A. Owen Seaman, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Robert C. Garrett, Brig. Gen. G. C. Shaw, Col. and Mrs. D. C. Cordiner and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Ernest Dupuy.

Those from Washington included Col. and Mrs. George L. Prentiss, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. C. B. Busbee, Col. and Mrs. C. M. Adams, Lieut. Col. J. B. Machado and Maj. and Mrs. P. W. Timberlake.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

IT HAS BEEN interesting to watch the foreign diplomats here, especially the newer ones, warm to the excitement of the Presidential campaign. Of course, by law and by custom, they must maintain the strictest "hands off" attitude in regard to all internal political questions in this country, especially the election to the Presidency, but, being human, they cannot help being interested. After all, they have heard practically nothing else for weeks at every dinner party or other social gathering they have attended.

The older heads who have been here for many years and have seen this country weather many political storms—veterans such as Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, the Peruvian Ambassador, and Don Felipe Espil, the Argentine Ambassador—smile indulgently at the confusion of their newer colleagues. They and their contemporaries have excellent means of forming their own estimates of political trends and their guesses, if they would only make them known to their friends, are probably as good as or better than the guesses which we all have been making these last days.

Mr. Richard G. Casey, the Australian Minister, who is a veteran and successful politician in his own country, has been especially intrigued by a close view of the American electoral process. He understands as well as the next one the political strategems and maneuvers used by all candidates in democratic nations, but he has note quite mastered the intricacies of the Electoral College—a state of mind that puts him on a par with most of the American citizenry.

THE OTHER NIGHT, I saw him listening patiently to the not too clear explanations of an American friend. The minister resolved to get some charts showing the electoral votes of the various States and practice up for taking tomorrow night's returns by entering, from memory, the predictions his tutor was only too glad to make to him. For the sake of the American prophet, it is to be hoped that Mr. Casey does not keep his practice sheet to compare with the actual results which come over the radio tomorrow night.

Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr., the attractive wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, created a welcome diversion for the doormen at Dumbarton Oaks when she drove a station wagon up to the door the night of the private view of the Byzantine library and collection, parked it smartly alongside the huge limousine chaperoned by their chauffeurs and stepped out in a most becoming evening dress to walk unconcernedly up the steps.

The explanation was that her husband had been called away on a speech-making expedition at the last moment and she had decided to come alone. The arrangement had its practical sides for, when the guests were leaving in the downpour of rain, Mrs. Berle took a wagonload of her friends to their cars which were parked at some distance from the house and some of them to their homes.

MR. AND MRS. Armistead Peter, who are here on a brief visit, have promised their friends that they will open Tudor Place around Thanksgiving time and remain in residence until the middle of January, at least. Their homecoming and the opening of one of the loveliest old houses left in Washington are always high spots of the social season.

Col., Mrs. Lee Entertain

Col. and Mrs. William F. Lee entertained yesterday afternoon at a cocktail party at their home on Woodland Terrace, Jefferson Park, Alexandria.

Receiving in the drawing room of the house, Mrs. Lee was gowned in a dark red crepe floor-length tea gown, with touches of gold at the belt line and a pair of antique gold earrings as her only jewelry. The house was decorated throughout with chrysanthemums and fall leaves and the dining table was centered with a crystal tree, flanked by candelabra holding tall ivory tapers.

Ranking guests were the Adjutant General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Emory S. Adams, and Mrs. Adams, and the Chief of Infantry, Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch, and Mrs. Lynch. Other guests noted during the afternoon included Col. and Mrs. Warren Fales, Col. and Mrs. Norman Randolph, Col. and Mrs. O. H. Saunders, Maj. and Mrs. William Dean and many more.

Thailand Minister To Address Club Today

The Minister of Thailand, Mom Rajawongse Seni Pramoj, will address the International Outlook Section of the Twentieth Century Club this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Perkins Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Amory Perkins entertained yesterday at one of her usual Sunday luncheons at her estate, "Journey's End" near Middleburg, Va. Guests who came down from Washington and New York lingered on during the afternoon to play tennis on the courts at the estate.

Included among the guests were the Countess Roberti, Count and Countess Lasocka of the Polish Embassy, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Coffin, Mr. and Mrs. George Harrison who came down from New York (Mrs. Harrison is the former Mrs. Cary Grayson), Mrs. Chauncey Parker and Mrs. Donald Ryerson, of Chicago, who is a house guest of Mrs. Perkins.

Panama Envoy Holds Reception

The Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Boyd entertained at a reception yesterday afternoon at the Panamanian Embassy at 5 o'clock.

The event was arranged in celebraton of Panama's Independence Day, and guests were limited to members of that country's colony in Washington.

Arlington Club to Meet

The Women's Club of Arlington will have a luncheon meeting this afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Parish Hall of the Arlington Methodist Church, Columbia Pike and Fillmore Street. Edward Rowan, of the F. W. A., will speak.

Sometimes Agreeable Husband Is Other Times Rude In Public or Glum in Private; Wife Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 27 years old and my husband is 28. We have been married seven years and have one child. We were very much in love and I think we still are, but my husband gets moody spells and goes for two or three days without speaking to me. Sometimes I don't even know what he's mad about. I don't want to quarrel with him, so I don't say anything, either. But when he gets over these spells he's as nice as anybody could be.

He wants more children, although we are not financially able to take care of any more at this time. Also, in view of the way things are with me, I think we should wait. Sometimes he says mean things to me in the presence of others, and that really gets me down, so that I feel the marriage cannot go on. Do you think I should humor him when he gets these spells? Or should I just let him pull himself out of them? I shall appreciate any help. MOLLIE.

DEAR MOLLIE: The surface treatment of "humoring" your husband when he lapses into one of his "moody spells" isn't calculated to help the situation much. This seems to be a case of "temperamental incompatability," of deep seated emotional conflict, rising out of the fact that neither of you has any real understanding of, or sympathy with, the other's viewpoint and social objectives.

When a man is moved to make disparaging remarks about his wife (even in the privacy of their home; not to mention in the presence of others), usually it means he is smarting from wifely wounds to his self-love, and trying to retaliate in kind. However, the business of being thus "wounded" is psychologically a childish manifestation, just as is sulking. So I suspect the truth of the matter is that your husband hasn't yet grown up, emotionally, to the point where he can adjust, philosophically and generously, to the "give-and-take" so necessary for living harmoniously with another.

In urging production of a larger family, when he isn't in a position to finance the ambitious undertaking, he gives further evidence of childish illogic. An undefined desire to prove his manly competence via the biological medium (because subconsciously he doubts his social competence), may be at the root of it. Or it may be a distorted expression of hostility toward you.

It might please him to burden you with offspring to the point where your independence of spirit would be broken—to the point where you would be, of necessity, meekly dependent upon his resources and subservient to his will. Yet again, it could be conscious contrariness; a deliberately chosen subject for argument; an insistence designed to put you on the defensive and, presumably, in the wrong as a selfish creature.

It seems to me you have just about a 50-50 chance of saving your marriage. Your disagreements on the vital subject of children are a serious matter; as are your periodic silent quarrels. But on the favorable side, there is your belief that mutual love still survives, and the fact that your husband is "as nice as anybody could be," when his better nature is in the ascendancy.

It seems to me what the marriage needs most, and currently lacks, is mutual understanding—which can only be developed between persons of differing temperaments by absolutely honest (yet kindly) discussion of issues as they arise. Thus, when your husband is glum, you should courteously yet firmly insist upon knowing what makes him that way—the purpose of your inquiry being to cooperate with him in correcting the difficulty, if that contribution is within your power.

To pet him or fawn upon him or pointedly ignore him, while remaining in timid or indifferent ignorance of what ails him, is to behave in a less-than-adult manner. If, in explaining himself, he should name you as the offender, don't lose your temper. Let him get his grievance off his chest before stating your reactions or your side of the story, in a poised and friendly and intelligent manner. This is your only means of educating him to your viewpoint (supposing it is the better one), and of demonstrating (indirectly) your imperishable wifely devotion, as well as the fineness and loveability of your character.

It is possible for one partner in marriage to help the other grow, in psychological stature, by setting him an invariably good (but not self-righteous) example. Since, as I have said, your husband seems somewhat immature as yet, it is to be hoped you can and will behave so maturely in your dealings with him that, all unconsciously, he will rise gradually to your level of outlook and performance.

Handmade Gifts for Christmas

THE PERFECT gift, fun to make and fun to receive—lovely bag and matching belt. And right in step with fashion in its gay Tyrolean color scheme of brilliant red flowers appliqued on green felt or flannel.

For the bag you first cut paper patterns. Fold paper in half; cut a piece for the back and front and a strip for the top and ends, following the outlines in a diagram. Then cut a straight piece for the bottom.

Now use your paper patterns to cut the bag from felt and also cut a stiffening for each piece from buckram. Next cut flower petals from red felt and applique to front of bag. Outline center with black wool, and make black stems in backstitch.

Now you're ready to sew the bag together. Baste buckram to felt and stitch facings to tops of front and back. Sew a slide fastener to center of top and end section, sew this sectoin between front and back of bag, and add the bottom strip.

As the final touch, outline the edges of sides and top with stitching and line the bag with silk. The handle is made of a straight piece of felt which you attach to the zipper tab with a small brass curtain ring. Then easily you make the smart belt, covernig buckram with felt.

You can as quickly and inexpensively make other pretty Christmas gifts. How would you like to make a chintz footstool, using bread-cutting boards as the base—or a knitting bag from an oatmeal box?

Full directions for these and other stunning gifts are included in our new 40-page booklet, "New Ideas for Hand-Made Gifts." Tells how to make dainty Southern Belle doorstop, attractive butterfly bedroom slippers, smart smoking set, fragrant pomander ball and needlepoint book ends. Altogether, 31 charming presents you'd be proud to give.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "New Ideas for Hand-Made Gifts," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name and address and the name of booklet.

Ethel Hueston Had Never Heard of Willkie When She Wrote About 'Wilkie,' She Says

TWO YEARS AGO, when Ethel Hueston was casting about for a name to give the Republican Presidential candidate in her political satire, "The Honorable Uncle Lancy," she happened to hit on "Wilkie." "People have accused me of doing it purposely," she says. "The truth is I'd never heard of Willkie at that time. It's just another of those coincidences. The first happened with a character named Carol in my first book; a little later I was introduced to a man by that name and we have been close friends ever since—in fact, I dedicated a book to him. Another time I named a Maine character "Randolph;" not long afterward I met a Randolph in Maine and later married him. So you see, I have to be careful about the names I pick!"

Ethel Hueston

Miss Hueston (in real life, Mrs. Randolph Blinn, of 3100 Connecticut Avenue) has written a book a year for 29 years. Her first, "Prudence of the Parsonage," can still be found in libraries all over the world. Her most recent, "Calamnity Jane of Deadwood Gulch," soon will be produced on the screen by Warner Brothers, with Bette Davis in the title role.

A Government home economist inherited, at her marriage, a capable cook named Amanda, who had served her husband for years and looked somewhat askance at her new mistress' efforts at household management. Amanda later left her job to become an elevator operator in the same building as that where her erstwhile mistress works. The two encountered each other there one day and Amanda asked just what her job was. "Oh, I tell women how to budget and market, and that sort of thing," she explained. At that Amanda's laughter reverberated down the corridor. "Miss Jane," she said, shaking from top to toe, "I'm going to 'XPOSE you!"

That imposing 54-inch bronze tablet bearing the Ten Commandments which is displayed in the window of Lamb's sign shop on Thirteenth street is destined for the Montgomery County Court House at Rockville. The gift of the county's churchwomen, it represents donations from 16 denominations. "We felt we'd like to have the Commandments in the courthouse," says Mrs. J. Frank Wilson, general chairman of the committee; "we hope they'll spread a good influence all over the county."

A lady who thought she successfully concealed the fact that she is growing out her bleach received a setback at Murphy's lunch counter recently. She sat next to a young woman who apparently had just taken the D. C. Cosmetology Board examination and was telling her girl friend all about it. After mentioning facials and permanents, she happened to cast a professional glance at her neighbor. "Oh, yes," she remarked audibly, "and another question was about methods of bleaching hair." Then, realizing she'd pulled a boner, she gulped and finished her sandwich in horrified silence.

Wood-Fiber Shampoo

THERE'S a time in every woman's life when she wants a good shampoo more than a sable coat. What wouldn't she give to have her hair soft, clean and glossy at that time? Yet, a bad cold, touch of influenza, sore throat or some other more or less serious ailment makes it necessary for her to postpone the weekly soap and water shampoo.

Luckily science now offers a good solution to this problem in the form of dry shampoos. Within the last six months a variety of different types—from powder to liquid forms—have been made available. The newest and most efficient dry shampoo to appear is one of wood fiber. One of the big local department stores has just brought it to Washington. Here's how it works:

Part the hair in small sections. A tube that produces a small current of air from an electric cabinet goes over the head, loosens the dandruff, whips up scalp circulation. Then the beauty operator applies the soft wood fiber to the hair and scalp. Manipulating it back and forth with the hands, cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. Then the operator again runs the tube of air over every part of the scalp and hair. This removes every bit of the wood fiber, polishes the hair and leaves it glossy and clean.

Learn Rumba And Forget You're Wed

New Dances Make One Lose That 'Settled Down' Feeling

By Ida Jean Kain

NOTHING makes a married couple feel so "married and settled down" as to go out for a gay evening of dancing and to discover that everyone else is doing the rumba or polishing off the conga!

If the head of the house should happen to cast inhibition to the air-conditioned breeze, it will only add fuel to the fire of his spouse's resolve that they are both going to take dancing lessons, come next Monday!

But usually that is as far as it goes. Every time she broaches the subject, he is fairly certain to retreat to the masculine safety of the sports section of the evening paper with a noncommittal "Harrump! hmph! Too busy right now!"

Everybody Dances—Even Husbands

In one community, however, the wives clanned together and purchased a complete set of those new dance instruction records. And as soon as they had caught on, they gave a party and someone—casually, of course—just happened to play the records! And before the husbands, who had been discussing golf scores, realized what they were doing, they had practiced dancing for two solid hours! Since then it has turned into a very dashing neighborhood. Instead of dancing less and less, all the coupies are dancing more and more!

One set of the instruction records is made under the direction of Arthur Murray, the famous dance instructor, and includes everything from the rumba to the tango. By practicing at home, you can shine in public.

The rumba, Mr. Murray declares, is the greatest of the dance sensations, and when done correcty and without exaggeration—he promises that it is eay to learn—"it is fascniating to do."

Here is a general idea of the way to go about it. The dancers stand about 8 inches from each other. The main trick is to master the horizontal hip action—a light roll, which is the result of a graceful shifting of the weight from one foot to the other.

Weight Shift A Fundamental

It is necessary to learn this fundamental weight shift before any of the steps are attempted. Try it: it's fun!! Stand erect, with heels together and with the weight relaxed on the heel of the left foot. Now, relax the weight on the heel of the right foot, then back to the left foot. Try it again. Left foot, right, then left, pausing on the third count. That is all, when dancing to rumba music you always make your pause after the count of three—this way: One, two, three, pause! One, two, three, pause!

Mrs. Spurt—I'm so glad you folks came over—wait, I'll turn off the radio!

Mrs. Boom—Oh, no, really we'd like to listen.

Mr. Boom—What's on?

Mr. Spurt—Roosevelt!

Mr. Boom—Some more hot air, eh?

Mr. Spurt—Well, if you can show me any bigger windbag than Willkie——

Mrs. Spurt—Oh, say! Was it raining when you people came in?

Mr. Boom—Say, listen! Willkie's giving the American people the cold facts, and I'll tell you why——

Mrs. Boom—George! Did you forget the umbrella?

Mr. Boom—Umbrella! Why the moon was shining!

Mrs. Spurt—Oh, by the way, haven't we been having the most MARVELOUS weather!

Mr. Boom—Well, of course, we've had a good deal of rain——

Mrs. Spurt—Well, what I mean is the rain's been so wonderful for the corn—I mean the wheat—well, what I really mean it will do so much for the lawns——

Mrs. Boom—We simply can't get anybody to rake our leaves.

Mr. Boom—That's labor for you under Roosevelt!

Mr. Spurt—Under John L. Lewis, you mean! Now if you want to hear a real bag of wind——

Mrs. Spurt—Oh, say! That reminds me! I wanted to ask you people something—if I could think what it was——

Mr. Boom—Well, now, John L. Lewis is not so bad. He's a man who's been misunderstood a lot——

Mr. Spurt—Say, do you want to know what I think of John L. Lewis?

Mrs. Spurt—Oh, I know what I wanted to ask you! Did you hear that Harmony Trio the other night?

Mrs. Boom—No, George wanted to stay home to hear Al Smith—I—I mean he wanted to listen on the radio.

Mr. Boom—Say, you oughta heard Al Smith the other night! Al certainly told 'em off!

Mr. Spurt—Al's just a case of sour grapes——

Mrs. Spurt—Say, was that the doorbell?

Mr. Boom—Al's got a lot of good hard sense——

Mrs. Boom—Oh, what a perfectly lovely little figurine on your mantel! George I WISH you'd look!

Mr. Spurt—What makes me laugh is the way these fellows who used to think Al had horns have gotten so chummy with him now——

Mrs. Spurt—Listen! Was that the telephone?

Mr. Boom—Well, now, I tell you—Al's changed a lot.

Mrs. Boom—It sounded as if someone were at the door.

Mr. Spurt—Now, the trouble with these Willkie Democrats——

Mrs. Spurt—Wouldn't you all like to hear some radio music? It's about time for Carrington Croon—wait a minute . . . and let's see—no that's a woman . . .

Mrs. Boom—It sounds like Dorothy Thompson—no, what I mean is it sounds like—well, like somebody——

Mr. Boom—Dorothy Thompson! Say, that woman ought to be in a sanitarium!

Mr. Spurt—I wouldn't say that! Now, Dorothy's turned into a pretty sound woman.

Mr. Boom—Sound!

Mrs. Boom—Oh, say, did you folks see "Love Me Again?"

Mrs. Spurt—No, but I'm dying to see "The Dictator."

Mr. Boom—Dictator! That's what we've already got in this country!

Mr. Spurt—Say, if Willkie gets in, we'll have Wall Street for a dictator.

Mr. Boom—That's just Communist propaganda!

Mrs. Spurt—Oh, that reminds me! . . . Now, what was it I was going to tell?

Mr. Spurt—Roosevelt's the only man that'll save this country from Hitler.

Mr. Boom—That's just British propaganda to get us to pluck their chestnuts——

Mrs. Spurt—Oh, I remember what I wanted to tell! It was something about the club!

Mrs. Boom—We're having a tea next week.

Mrs. Spurt—We're having an institute and a tea and guess who's coming? Mrs. Roosevelt!

Mr. Boom—MRS. ROOSEVELT!

Mrs. Spurt—Oh, say! Why don't we have a little game of bridge?

Adm. G. C. Day, World War Hero, Is Dead

Awarded Navy Cross For Troop Escort; 47 Years in Service

Rear Admiral George Calvin Day, U. S. Navy, retired, who commanded two ships transporting troops and supplies to Europe during the World War, died yesterday at Naval Hospital at the age of 69.

ADMR. DAY

He was president of the Board of Inspection and Survey, Navy Department, when he retired December 1, 1935, after 47 years' service in the Navy, including service in the Spanish-American War.

During his four years as head of the board, he conducted acceptance trials of 18 new vessels before they joined the fleet, and of five battleships after modernization, and of two dirigibles, Akron and Macon.

Awarded Navy Cross

For his service in the World War he was awarded the Navy Cross with the citation: "For distinguished service in the line of his profession as commanding officer of the U. S. S. America and the U. S. S. Montana, engaged in the important, exacting and hazardous duty of transporting and escorting troops and supplies to European ports through waters infested with enemy submarines and mines." He received several medals for other service.

Rear Admiral Day, a native of Vermont, was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1892. He served on the U. S. S. Yorktown during the Spanish-American War, and was attached to the U. S. S. Newark during the Philippine Insurrection. On his return to the United States in 1901, he served as aide to the commandant, Navy Yard, Boston. He was navigator of the U. S. S. Connecticut from 1907 to 1909 and for the next two years served in destroyers. He was in charge of the Navy Recruiting Bureau, New York, in 1911, then with the rank of commander. In 1917 he was promoted to captain.

Commanded Submarines

He was commander of the submarine division, Pacific Fleet, from September 1, 1923, to July, 1925. In the latter month he was promoted to Rear Admiral, and in August reported for duty as commandant Fifteenth Naval District with additional duty as commandant Naval Operating Base, Balboa, Canal Zone.

Rear Admiral Day, who made his home at 1803 I Street Northwest, had been in the Naval Hospital since last Spring. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery, the time to be announced later. He is survived by a brother, W. F. Day, Lincoln, Nebr.; two sisters, Miss Anna V. Day, Chester, Vt., and Mrs. S. B. Coon, Huntington Park, Calif.

Dancer Says She Has No Assets

Dixie Dunbar, shown in a stage pose, a "baby star" for nearly seven years, declared in a bankruptcy petition filed in New York that she has no assets, and listed liabilities of $2,566. Miss Dunbar is dancing in a Manhattan hotel but she says her 1940 income is less than $2,000. Last year, starring in "Two for the Show," she earned five times that much

Contract Bridge

One of the commonest means of safeguarding a contract is to refuse a finese, and it may have a special meaning if the finesse refused happens to be in the trump suit. Here is a typical situation; East is the declarer at four hearts:

West	East
♠ K 7 5	♠ A 4 3
♡ Q 7 6 4	♡ A J 10 8 3
◇ K 4 3	◇ A 2
♣ A K 3	♣ 6 5 2

South, who bid clubs during the auction, leads the queen of clubs. Dummy's king wins, and the four of trumps is played from dummy; declarer goes right up with the ace, refusing the finesse, which is a safety play to avoid a club ruff.

Declarer knows that South is long in clubs; it is quite likely that he also holds the king of hearts. To take the finesse and lose, allowing South to lead a club and North to trump, will jeopardize the contract, for declarer still must concede a low club and spade trick.

In order to be certain he will not lost four tricks, he must play the heart ace and then a low heart toward dummy's queen. This will either strip North's hand of trumps or will place North with the lead with no way of putting South, his partner, in the lead. Even if North should hold the king and two hearts, the contract is safe, for South can never lead clubs for him to ruff.

71 Per Cent of Aliens In U. S. Registered

The Department of Justice announced yesterday that 2,559,706 aliens had been registered and fingerprinted on November 1, a total which represents about 71 per cent of the estimated 3,600,000 aliens in the United States.

Registration, which began on August 27, will continue until December 26.

Mexico Firm In Democracy, Diplomat Says

Embassy Aide Hits Attacks at Nation In Sermon Here

Mexico is bound with the United States and other countries of the Americas in a belief in democracy, Christianity and the dignity of the individual, Raimundo Cuervo, second secretary of the Mexican Embassy, declared last night at Calvary Methodist Church.

Discussing Mexico at the Calvary Sunday evening forum on South America, the secretary said that 100 years before the first British colony was established in America, the Kingdom of Castille had set up the flag of Christianity in Mexico.

Contrary to reports, he said, there are just a handful of Communists and Fascists in Mexico, as there are bound to be in any democracy. He said so much "garbage has been thrown at Mexico that we ignore the flowers that have been grown."

The speaker was introduced by the Rev. Orris Gravenor Robinson, Calvary pastor. An open forum discussion followed.

Dies Promises Italian Espionage Disclosures

Orange, Tex., Nov. 3 (AP).—Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said tonight "When we uncover the remainder of the Trans-Ocean News Service and World Tourists Affairs, the Italian espionage and propaganda end of the story will be more important than the German end."

Dies, chairman of the House Committee on Unamerican Activities, declared Communists, in order to get candidates on the election ballot, were getting up petitions on which two-thirds of the names were forged.

He said he expected to see at least 500 convictions in connection with such petition within the next month, and more than 3,000 indictments returned in various sections of the country from evidence gathered by his committee.

He said city and State law enforcement agencies were giving him excellent cooperation, "but we are getting absolutely no cooperation from Federal authorities with the exception of the State Department.

"Some of the other national investigation agencies appear angry with us because we aroused them from sleep."

Tablet Honoring Dr. Huddle Unveiled at St. Paul's

Tribute Paid to Pastor of 1904 to 1929; Widow Attends Exercises Featuring Procession and Sermon by Dr. Snyder

Men and women whom the late Dr. John T. Huddle inspired during his 25 year pastorate at St. Paul's Lutheran Church and members of later days yesterday saw a bronze tablet unveiled and dedicated to his memory.

Assembling in the church at Connecticut Avenue and Everett Street Northwest, they watched the services open with a procession of choristers and clergy, led by cross bearers and young men carrying American and Christian flags.

Shortly after the unveiling by R. A. Pence, teacher of the Huddle Bible class, Dr. Henry W. Snyder, present pastor, led the dedicatory ritual. In his sermon, he emphasized that Dr. Huddle's life was well-illustrated by the Biblical text inscribed at the bottom of the tablet: "I have fought the good fight. I've finished the course. I've kept the faith. Henceforth, a crown." (Second Timothy, IV: 7-8).

Dr. Huddle, pastor from 1904 to 1929, and pastor emeritus from then until his death last January in St. Petersburg, Florida, is to be further honored with another memorial when the main church is completed. More than $700 already has been placed in the fund.

Dr. Huddle's widow, of Gettysburg, Pa., was among the guests at the service, in which the Rev. M. J. Bieber, local Lutheran cleric, assisted Dr. Snyder.

Air Plant Union Plans Strike Vote

Los Angeles, Nov. 3 (AP).—L. H. Michener, region director of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers of America, said tonight that Local 683 at the Vultee Aircraft Corporation plant in nearby Downey had voted to hold a "secret strike vote" before Thursday.

Vultee has contracts for hundreds of United States Army Air Corps basic training planes and employs 5,200 persons.

Michener said wage negotiations of seven weeks had failed. The local charged in a statement that Vultee was paying "a substandard wage" of 50 to 55 cents an hour to 60 per cent of its workers, while making "tremendous profits during this period of national defense."

Record Vote In Nearby Areas Likely

70,000 in Adjoining Maryland, Virginia Counties Expected To Cast Ballots

While disfranchised Washington stands on the sidelines tomorrow, almost 70,000 residents of nearby Maryland and Virginia will go to the polls to choose a President, Senators, Representatives and local officials.

The third-term issue and the threat of war has stirred up intense interest in the election, and a record vote is anticipated in all the nearby counties and the city of Alexandria.

Of widespread interest to Washingtonians and to sports followers everywhere is the Congressional race in the Sixth Maryland District between Representative William Byron, Democrat, and Walter Johnson, Republican, former Big Train of baseball.

Predict Close Race

Political experts predict a close race, with the outcome depending largely on how Johnson's home county of Montgomery votes. The famous pitching star, whose home is near Germantown, Md., is expected to carry the normally Republican counties of Allegany and Garrett in the western tip of the State.

Representative Byron, a World War aviator, is expected to pile up majorities in Frederick and his home county of Washington. In 1938, Montgomery County clinched the district for Byron by giving him a 5,500 majority, but politicans are unwilling to predict how the county will go this time in view of Johnson's large personal following.

Johnson hesitantly ventured into politics two years ago at the behest of Montgomery County Republican leaders. Only a few minutes before the deadline, he was persuaded to become a candidate for the board of county commissioners. The election bore out the confidence Republican leaders had placed in the former baseball star; for he was elected by 2,000 votes, while all other Republican candidates ran several thousand votes behind their Democratic opponents.

Democrats Lead

Recently completed registration figures for Montgomery County show there are 25,674 voters affiliated with the Democratic Party and 9,603 with the Republican Party.

Two Prince Georges County men are seeking the Congressional seat in the Fifth Maryland District, including southern Maryland and a small part of Baltimore. They are Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Upper Marlboro, and Mayor John N. Torvestad, of Colmar Manor.

Although Torvestad may run close to Representative Sasscer in Charles, St. Marys and Calvert Counties, he can't hope to overcome the large Democratic "book" majorities in Prince Georges, Anne Arundel and Baltimore, in the opinion of political observers.

Senator George L. Radcliffe is expected to run well ahead of his Republican rival, former Gov. Harry Nice, in both Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

Third Term Feeling High

As far as the Presidential race is concerned, both Prince Georges and Montgomery are regarded as "in the bag" for Roosevelt, but even the Democrats admit antithird-term feeling is going to cut deeply into the President's 1936 majorities.

In the Eighth Congressional District of Virginia, which includes Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Representative Howard Smith, Democrat, is seeking a sixth term. His Republican opponent is Col. Henry B. Goodloe, of Albemarle County. Representative Smith should be returned with a comfortable majority, barring a political upset.

Considerable local interest has been shown in the race between Leo Lloyd, Democrat, and Fred N. Windridge, Republican, for a seat on the Arlington County Board. Political observers expect a nip-and-tuck battle with a slight edge to the Democrat.

Fairfax Has Local Issue

Overshadowing even the third-term issue in Fairfax County is the debate over a proposal to revise the form of county government. A referendum will be held in connection with the election. Salient features of the proposed plan, known as the executive system, are:

(1) County affairs would be placed in the hands of a county executive named by the board of supervisors.

(2) The offices of commissioner of revenue and treasurer would be combined into a department of finance.

A separate ballot will be distributed for the referendum. Persons in favor of the proposal will be directed to cross out the word "against" and persons opposing the proposal will be directed to cross out the word "for."

President Roosevelt will probably carry the City of Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Counties. Willkie, however, appears to have a strong following in Arlington County, and there is a possibility the Republicans may get a majority there.

Nine Amendments

The ballot in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties will include nine proposed constitutional amendments. The most important provide: For appointment of an additional judge in the Prince Georges circuit; for limiting the Governor to one term; for raising the pay of members of the State Legislature from $500 to $750 for the 90-day biennial session, and for establishment of people's courts throughout the State.

Montgomery County will be using voting machines for the first time. As a result, complete returns are expected to be available at an early hour Tuesday night.

Polls will be open in Montgomery County from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m., in Prince Georges from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., and in the Virginia areas of Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax, from sunrise, 6:40 a. m. to sunset, 5:03 p. m.

Chaplain of Naval Academy Addresses Lutheran Rally

Men being drafted into Selective Service should "take their religion with them" into Army camps, Chaplain Paul W. Dickman, of the United States Naval Academy, said yesterday at Grace Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Varnum Streets Northwest.

Addressing a rally of Lutheran youths under the sponsorship of the Potomac Federation of Luther Leagues of the American Lutheran Church, he said more intelligence in church work would bring more joy out of such activities.

He was introduced by Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, host pastor. Vincent Gingerich, of Takoma Lutheran Church, president of the Potomac Federation, also spoke. A joint Lutheran youth chorus sang under the direction of the Rev. George J. Grewenow, pastor of Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington, Va.

The host Luther League, of which Richard Winkelman is president, sponsored a fellowship hour after the worship service. Young people from the American, United, Missouri, and Augustana Lutheran denominations attended the rally.

Physicians Open Health Seminar At Howard U.

A public health meeting, introducing the first postgraduate seminar for physicians at the Howard University School of Medicine, was held last night in the medical college auditorium, Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools, presiding.

Motion pictures, "They Do Come Back," "With These Weapons" and "Bobby Goes to School," treating various phases of tuberculosis and social hygiene treatments, were presented and discussed by Dr. C. Leon Wilson, Provident Hospital, Chicago; Dr. E. Roderick Brown, Pittsburgh Tuberculosis League; Dr. Edward W. Beasley, pediatrician, Chicago, and Dr. T. K. Lawless, Northwestern University.

Dr. Brown will discuss clinical problems of pulmonary tuberculosis at the seminar this morning, demonstrating technique in the tuberculin test. Dr. Lawless will discuss signs and symptoms of early syphilis. At the afternoon session Dr. Beasley will discuss "Examination of the Child," and Dr. Wilson, "Management of Pregnancy." Sessions of the seminar will continue through Wednesday.

Other Congregations, Presbytery, Ministerial Union Send Greetings

A real spirit of Christian unity prevailed at last night's 160th anniversary service of Georgetown Presbyterian Church, 3115 P Street Northwest.

Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, brought greetings on behalf of the Washington Ministerial Union, of which he is president; the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, spoke for churches of the community, and the Rev. William I. Campbell for the Washington City Presbytery, of which he is president.

St. John's actually had its organization in the old Brick Street Church, forerunner of the present Georgetown Presbyterian Church, recalled the Rev. Mr. Tucker, brother of the Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church in America.

The Rev. Mr. Campbell emphasized the need of carrying on the traditions of Christian forbears.

Dr. Hollister reminded the congregation of the growing spirit of Christian unity demonstrated by increased interdenominational cooperation toward common objectives. Such unity, he said, strengthens the whole Christian cause.

Dr. John Bailey Kelly, president of Emporia College, Emporia, Kans., before becoming Georgetown Presbyterian pastor two years ago, conducted the services in which 11 former members of the choir returned to join with present choristers in an impressive musical program arranged by Miss Nancy Poore, organist-choir director.

Dr. Kelly's father, the late Dr. Joseph T. Kelly, was pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church here for 52 years. One grandfather, John Bailey, served for 30 years as chief clerk of the House, while his other grandfather, Moses Kelly, was once Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Dr. Kelly is a native Washingtonian, and Central High School graduate.

The Rev. Albert Evans, D.D., associate pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, read the Psalter at last night's service, and Dr. Freeley Rohrer, stated clerk of the Washington City Presbytery, gave a prayer.

Hostesses for the first tea included Miss Helen Connelly, Mrs. Joseph J. Kelly, Miss Alberta Sinnott, Mrs. Mae Bleifus, and Mrs. Mary Mitchell. Registrars were Miss Katherine Repetti and Joseph Chicherio.

Heres' a Traveling Salesman With a Dark Story to Relate

But It's Not What You Think; He Just Fell Asleep in a Drug Store Phone Booth And It Took the Police to Get Him Out

Here's a true story about a traveling salesman who spent the night in a phone booth, not at the farmer's house.

Well, he goes into a drug store to make a long distance telephone call. It's Liggett's Drug Store, at Fourteenth and H Streets Northwest. But he has been traveling a lot, and he's tired and sleepy, so he falls asleep in the booth while the operator is putting through a call.

When he wakes up, everything is dark and he doesn't know where he is. He strikes a couple of matches and then remembers, so he calls the police and tells them he's locked in Liggett's Drug Store and can't get out.

The police ask which Liggett's and he says I don't know. Well, look out the door and see if you can read the name of the street on the signpost, the police tell him. He says okay, I'll call you back.

But he can't see any sign post when he looks out. He does see a sign which says Casino Royal. So he calls the police again, and they say we know where you are if that sign is across the street.

It's about 2 a. m. when the police get there, and the traveling salesman's getting tired of the drug store. He's really glad to see them. But they can't get in, and after making signs at him through the glass they go away, and he thinks, my goodness, they've gone away and left me to spend the rest of the night in this place.

So he telephones the police again and asks what the heck they mean by going off and leaving him. Just hold your horses, they tell him, the police have gone to get the manager to unlock the door and everything will be all right.

Well, they finally get him out about 3 a. m. and he says from now on I'll make my phone calls from the hotel.

The Postlude

Metropolitan Opera Quartet Gives Concert

Constitution Hall Audience Cordial And Demonstrative

By Ray C. B. Brown

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents the Metropolitan Quartet (Rose Bampton, Helen Oelheim, Charles Kullman and Julius Huehn) with Stuart Ross as accompanist Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Program of operatic quartets, trios, duets and arias by Beethoven, Bizet, Debussy, Puccini, Verdi, Gounod, Mozart, Mascagni, Giordano and Flotow.

None of the four singers from the Metropolitan Opera Association was in the best of voice yesterday afternoon while appearing as a concert quartet in Constitution Hall, but the reception by an uncritical audience was nevertheless cordial and demonstrative.

Ray C. B. Brown

Rose Bampton was again having trouble with the middle tones which have not become adjusted to the change from contralto to soprano, and her high notes were often strident. Helen Oelheim showed some glowingly warm colors in her tones, but was too often a shade below pitch. Both Charles Kullman and Julius Huehn sang with veiled tones which only occasionally attained clear resonance. It would seem to have been an off-day for them all, and perhaps a jinx of some kind was responsible.

Their program, however, held many enjoyable moments, particularly for those who prefer operatic excerpts to be familiar. Among the favorite numbers were the prison trio, "Alerte! Alerte!" from "Faust;" the spinning wheel quartet from "Martha," the duet for soprano and contralto, "Tutti i fior," from "Madama Butterfly;" the duet of Santuzza and Alfio from "Cavalleria Rusticana," the duet of Rhadames and Amneris from the last act of "Aida," Lia's aria from "L'Enfant Prodigue," Iago's credo from "Otello," and the soprano aria, "Pace, mio Dio," from "La Forza del Destino."

The fervent applause of the audience evoked extra numbers which are also firmly established in popularity. Among these were the toreador's song and the habanera from "Carmen," the tenor and barytone duet, "Solenne in quest' ora," from "La Forza del Destino;" the soprano and alto duet, "Belle Nuit," from "Les Contes d'Hoffmann," and the quartet madrigal from "The Mikado."

But not all the selections were from the tried and true repertory. One cannot say that "Fidelio" has been worn threadbare in American performances, and the program began with one of its finest passages; the quartet, "Mir ist so wunderbar." The second number, too, was a novelty to many of the listeners: the tenor and barytone duet, "Au fond du temple sainte," from Bizet's "The Pearl Fishers," which was produced 12 years before "Carmen." This delightful reverie, in which Nadir and Zurga, rivals for the affection of Leila, recall their first sight of the Brahmin priestess, provided Massenet with more than one hint for the dream aria in "Manon."

Refreshingly unhackneyed was the charming quartet from Mozart's "Così fan Tutte," which seldom gets into the concert hall. Charles Kullman did his best singing of the afternoon in his impassioned reading of "Un di' all'azzuro spazio" from Giordani's "Andrea Chenier." He was lyrically persuasive in the poet's depiction of the misery and poverty of the peasants, and forcefully dramatic in the denunciation of aristocratic indifference to social maladjustments.

Public Welfare And Bus Service Topmost on Agenda Of Associations

Public welfare and bus service in the District top a list of local problems to be examined this week at meetings of 15 citizens' associations and 2 association councils.

Meetings of two citizens' units will be postponed because of the election. Piney Branch will meet November 18 instead of tonight and North Cleveland Park has postponed tomorrow night's meeting to Tuesday, November 12.

Representatives of six associations will attend a public hearing on proposed changes in the East Washington bus service, before the Public Utilities Commission at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday. The associations are Bradbury Heights, Fort Davis, Hillcrest, Summit Park, Randle Highlands and North Randle Community Citizens Associations.

Eight Meetings Tonight

Eight citizens' units will meet tonight. They are Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C.; Dupont Circle, Forest Hills, Kenilworth, Manor Park, Metropolis View, Progressive Citizens of Congress Heights and Progressive Citizens of Georgetown. In spite of the election, two citizens organizations will meet tomorrow night. "Public Welfare as Administered in the District" will be discussed before the Columbia Heights Association by Robert E. Bondy, director of Public Welfare in the District. And the Southeast Council will hold its first meeting of the season in the No. 11 Police Precinct, with presidents of each of the 11 member citizens' bodies expected to attend.

Members of the Friendship Citizens organization will meet Wednesday in the Janney School, at Wisconsin Avenue and Albemarle Street Northwest.

Connecticut Avenue Citizens, at their meeting Thursday evening, will hear a report on the Selective Service Act by Earl Edwards of the District Bar Association. Other citizens associations meeting Thursday include Bradbury Heights, Washington Highlands, and the Northeast Conference.

1,000,000 Aliens Still to Register, Submit Prints

The Department of Justice announced yesterday that alien registration had passed the 2,500,000 mark, leaving an estimated 1,000,000 aliens to be fingerprinted and tabulated before the December 26 deadline.

A total of 8,170 have registered so far in Washington, it was reported.

Earl G. Harrison, director of alien registration, attempting to clear up what he said was some confusion in the minds of some noncitizens subject to the Alien Registration Act, declared the fact that a man served in the World War does not automatically make him a citizen.

Rev. E. G. Latch to Talk At Goodwill Chapel

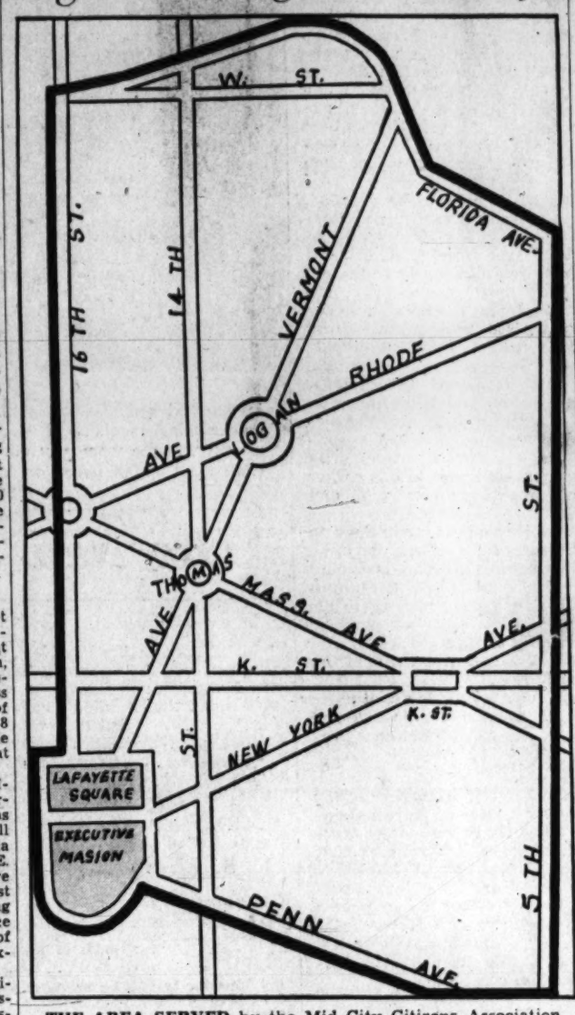
Mid-City Citizens Association Began With Fight on Railway



THE AREA SERVED by the Mid-City Citizens Association is shown on this map

Group Organized 25 Years Ago Has Helped Secure Majority of Downtown Street Improvements Since Then

This is the thirty-sixth article in a series about citizens' associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

Twenty-five years ago a group of determined citizens joined to fight a proposed street railway to run through M Street from Georgetown to Union Station.

DRISCOLL

They succeeded. Since then, as the Mid-City Citizens Association, the organization has aided in procuring a good share of the improvements—especially street improvements—in downtown Washington.

Latest of these improvements will be dedicated next month. It is the new $68,000 Second Precinct Police building. Largely the result of the association's efforts, the precinct station will be at Fifth and New York Avenue Northwest, at the former site of the abandoned Abbott School.

A street parade, talks by the Commissioners and Maj. Ernest Brown, and addresses by co-sponsors in the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association, the Northern Seventh Street Business Men's Association and the Central Business Men's Association will be on the program of the celebration.

Members recall another street celebration held by the association 20 years ago, "biggest one the city ever saw." It was to celebrate completion of a $300,000 project paving Seventh Street Northwest from Pennsylvania to Florida Avenues, the result of Midcity's efforts.

President of the association since the beginning a quarter of a century ago has been A. J. Driscoll. A newspaper reporter, Driscoll has been active in local civic circles for more than 30 years. He is also an authority on District government.

"Washington has the best city government in the country. It is very efficient and totally free from graft," he thinks. Nevertheless, the association favors suffrage for the District and supervised the suffrage plebiscite in the downtown section years ago.

They also favor the proposed underpass at Scott Circle and believe that eventually all of the city's circles should have them. One major worry is the traffic situation in the Public Library area, at Ninth and Seventh Streets, and Massachusetts and New York Avenues. No practical remedy has been suggested as yet, however.

Widening of downtown streets has been one of the principal projects discussed at the association's monthly meetings, held in Thompson School, at Twelfth and L Streets Northwest, on the fourth Mondays.

Officers include besides President Driscoll, Edith L. Grosvenor, vice president; M. E. Salsbury, secretary; John L. C. Sullivan, financial secretary, and Max T. Pimes, treasurer. Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association are George A. Warren and Frank B. Hoffman.

Capital News in Brief

It Didn't Tick, but— They Took No Chances

All this talk about Fifth Columns has given the Police Department the jitters.

Policemen of the Tenth Precinct worried about a bomb last night. They thought it was in a suitcase found on the sidewalk in front of 617 Upshur Street Northwest.

Gingerly, they took the suitcase to the precinct station. Then they called headquarters. The lieutenant told them to put an ear to the satchel and listen for the sound of ticking. They reported they heard none. "For heavens sake, open it," the lieutenant ordered.

Gingerly, they took it into the squad room. Gingerly, they opened it. Out flopped a batch of racing forms.

Now, what the lieutenant wants to know is why in the world they thought the suitcase contained a bomb. Nobody seems to know.

Peace Card Addressed To President-Elect

An oversized postcard, inscribed "This is our vote against the United States going to war in Europe or Asia," will be delivered at the White House on Election Day tomorrow by the Citizens Committee Against War. It will be addressed to the "President-elect" and marked: "Hold if Necessary."

The committee which will send the card, is a local peace organization affiliated to the Keep America Out of War Congress. Seymour Etkin, acting secretary of the committee, said that "it is apparent that our next President, whichever of the two major candidates is elected, will be pro-conscription and in favor of more aid to the British Empire. The overwhelming no-foreign-war sentiment of the American people must be indicated to him."

C. U. Theater Group To Open Wednesday

The University Theater of Catholic University will open its season Wednesday evening with Goldsmith's comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer," first of a subscription series of six plays.

Trinity College, Dunbarton College and Immaculata Seminary are among the sponsors. Heading the list of individual subscribers are Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen; Dr. A. R. McGuire, dean of the graduate school at the university, and Mrs. McGuire; Dr. Robert White, dean of the law school; Dr. Fred V. Murphy, dean of the school of architecture, and Mrs. Murphy.

Marine Unit To Entrain This Week

Fifth Battalion Prepares to Leave for Quantico Base Thursday

Washington's Fifth Marine Battalion moves onto a wartime footing Thursday.

When the outfit moves off the Ellipse for Union Station and the Marine Corps base at Quantico at the close of its final review by the District Commisisoners, its destiny will be bound up with that of the corps just as definitely as any regular Marine unit.

How the absorption of the battalion with the regular corps organization is to be accomplished was disclosed last night by Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, its commanding officer.

At Quantico, Lieut. Col. Miller said, the battalion will be combined with the Seventeenth Battalion from Detroit to bring its nearly 500 men and officers up to full wartime battalion strength. The Washington outfit, known as one of the best Marine Reserve organizations in the country, will be given an opportunity at once to became acquainted with new comrades by being housed with them in Barracks C, Lieut. Col. Miller said.

Will Be First to Reach Base

The battalian will be the first Reserve organization in the United States to reach base. When other Reserves come into Quantico November 12, the Washington organization and others will be given five days of intensive practice on the rifle range, while its officers at the Reserve training center, in command of Lieut. Col. D. E. Campbell, work out a combat training schedule.

After shooting eyes have been sharpened up on the range, the organization will be put through a "shakedown" period, during which it will be uniformed and equipped as a regular unit of the corps. This will involve equipping Company D, commanded by First Lieut. Clifton A. Woodrum, jr., son of the Virginia Representative, with various caliber machine guns and 81 mm. trench mortars. The company already has trained as a machine gun outfit, but has not been issued machine guns because the Reserve armory wat not considered secure against possible theft.

The shakedown period will be spent partly at Quantico and partly at a base not yet decided upon. In a few weeks the organization should be ready for full active duty and is expected to take its place with other Marine organizations somewhere in the West Indies, the vital Panama Canal defense zone.

No Complaints Received

The Fifth Battalion is in the active service for an indefinite period. Unlike the National Guard and units to be created from selectees to be called up shortly, Marine reserves may be on active service for more than a year, "as long as their country needs them," Lieut. Col. Miller said.

Neither from their employers nor from the young men who are leaving civilian jobs has a complaint been heard since the reserves were called to colors, Lieut. Col. Miller declared. In most cases employers have wished the new soldiers good luck and have assured them that their jobs would be kept open.

Col. Miller emphasized that enlistments in the battalion are still open to all men of military age who have had at least one year's experience in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps. He explained that every man in his organization understood when he enlisted that he was subject to active service and what sacrifices that would entail. The average age of enlisted personnel, he pointed out, is below draft age.

Miller, Two Aides Are Veterans

Col. Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, and two of his officers are World War Veterans. They are Maj. William W. Stickney, executive officer, who leaves a position with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Lieut. Comdr. W. L. Schafer, battalion surgeon, who is Alexandria city health officer.

Capt. Justice M. Chambers is personnel director of the Maritime Commission and Capt. Otho L. Rogers heads the philatelic section of the Postoffice Department. Capt. Earl E. Holmes, son of Metropolitan Police Inspector William Holmes, is the battalion mess officer.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Charlie Chaplin Grows Up In 'The Great Dictator'

New Film, Coming to Palace, Is His Best; John Considine, Jr., Plans Important Picture; This, That and the Other About the Theater

SO A LOP-SIDED MAJORITY of the Washington drama desks Dieseled over to Loew's Century Theater in Baltimore Saturday afternoon to view the new Charlie Chaplin picture, "The Great Dictator," opening Thursday at the Palace. What we saw, all things considered, was probably the best picture Charles Spencer ever has made, albeit one that may understandably chagrin the Chaplin adherents who feel that their idol, to beat his best, must at all times be the slapstick comic of the old Sennett Keystone days.

BELL

Even so, they ought to be satisfied. While it is a more thoughtful and more purposeful Chaplin that is revealed in the new film, "The Great Dictator" still is 99 44-100 per cent comedy in the old manner. But underlying many of the Chaplin "gags" and a greater number that are new, is a witheringly faithful satire of the Nazi and Fascist despots now ravaging Europe. The incomparable Chaplin has so fashioned his contribution to the cause of Democracy, freedom and tolerance as to lead inevitably to the serious five minutes that bring the picture to a close. Without this final note, to which so many commentators and critics have objected—because it momentarily makes a Hamlet out of their Pagliacci—it seems to this corner that "The Great Dictator" would have been pretty flat and pointless.

As to Chaplin's talking in this subject, one is constrained to believe that it must have been fear of the effect upon the foreign market that kept the great pantomimist from becoming articulate long ago. Now that there is no foreign market left, in the large view, he proves that voice is no impediment to his superb effectiveness. That final plea for a saner and happier world in which to live is delivered with evangelical fervor and fine dramatic forcefulness, whether it violates the spirit of the earlier scenes of the picture or not.

It will remain for Thursday morning's review to detail more fully why we feel that the Chaplin genius has come to fuller flower than ever before in his latest and most pretentious production.

Speaking of superior pictures, the key-city box offices of the country, as reported in the November 2 issue of Martin Quigley's Motion Picture Herald, nominated six as the money-making champions of September. The half-dozen releases that collected the most shekels were "Boom Town," "Brigham Young," "The Great McGinty," "He Stayed for Breakfast," "Lucky Partners" and "The Sea Hawk." The "majors" got a remarkably even break during September, with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Columbia, RKO-Radio and Warner Brothers tapping the public pocketbook most heavily with one production each.

"The Long Voyage Home," Walter Wanger's much-discussed picturization of the Eugene O'Neill plays of the sea, will follow "Too Many Girls" on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater this Friday, if present plans hold up until then. John Wayne, Ian Hunter, Thomas Mitchell, Wilfred Lawson—the Alfred Doolittle in the filmed version of Shaw's "Pygmalion"—and Barry Fitzgerald have the leading roles.

When Producer John Considine, jr., was in town last week, it was diverting to hear of his plans for "Men of Boys Town," with Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney again in the principal roles of the sequel to the original and enormously successful "Boys Town," but this desk, personally, was more interested in his projected production of "Simon Bolivar," dated a little farther ahead. This enthusiasm of ours doubtless stems from a distant day, when we battled a low ceiling with a cheap kodak trying to get a decent picture of the equestrian statue of Bolivar that stands in the principal plaza in Caracas, Venezuela, without knowing too much of who Bolivar was or why his statue was there. He was, and is, of course, the Napoleon-George Washington-Abraham Lincoln of Latin America. At a remarkably early age, he conquered five Latin-American countries and made them into democracies. To make democracy work, he had to declare himself a dictator and for that was exiled to die on foreign soil. When his aims and accomplishments were realized by his countrymen, his remains were brought back and buried in his native land with worshipful love and respect. His dusky nurse, who had suckled him as a babe, lived through the entire era and died happy at the vindication of her idolatry at the age of 118. "Simon Bolivar" should make a picture of unique appeal and great "good neighbor" value at precisely this juncture in world affairs.

Don't let anxiety over the election returns keep you away from the theater tomorrow night. Every house in town will have them, with many extended schedules for that express purpose.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN

in one of his dual roles in "The Great Dictator," opening Thursday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, oils up "Big Bertha" to do a bit of 100-mile bombarding. It didn't help much, as you will see when you view the picture—which, by the way, is a distinct departure from the Chaplin norm, or format, or whatever you call it. It is a developed and purposeful Chaplin that is revealed here

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 3.

POLITICS: In the President's Boston speech he referred to the great work being accomplished by Knudsen, Stettinius, Nelson, Harriman and Henderson of the Defense Council. Roosevelt added that he didn't know what their politics were, but that they were placing duty to country above politics in accepting their defense jobs and performing them well . . . The next morning when the National Defense Council met, Knudsen was reluctant to tell the members that he was planning to leave Washington so that he could vote Tuesday in Michigan . . . "Gentlemen," the rugged Knudsen pleaded, "may I have Tuesday and Wednesday off—because of my delicate health?"

FINANCE DEPT.: Al Jolson has wagered $20,000 at odds of almost two to one on Roosevelt's re-election . . . Last night Jolson was trying to make the following bet: If he could get 4 to 1 he'd wager $5,000 that Willkie wins in New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Massachusetts—all of them doubtful States . . . This, explains Jolson, is a way of insuring his bet on Roosevelt—because if Willkie fails to win all these five States, then he feels Roosevelt's reelection is assured.

MOVIES DEPT.: Cliff Work, the Universal producer, Thursday night related some of the problems which confronted him in the production of the new John Barrymore movie, "The Invisible Woman" . . . "Throughout the picture," said Work, "the Screen Actors Guild compelled me to employ a stand-by for the Invisible Woman."

AVIATION DEPT.: Billy Rose was describing the new air show he hopes to produce, with hundreds of planes dipping in unison to musical strains played in a nearby zeppelin. "And when I do this show," Rose vowed, "it'll solve the unemployment problem here, because I'll need so many people to work it properly" . . . "It's really fantastic," a listener complimented Billy, "but tell me—with all those planes flying in the sky, how are you going to get paying customers inside the stadium? What's to prevent people for miles around from staying where they are and watching the show?" . . . "That's what I mean about solving the unemployment problem," replied Rose, clenching his fist and extending his index and middle fingers. "I'd have to hire 100,000 men to go around like this—poking the eyes of those who look and won't pay."

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: Valerie Parks, the strip-teaser now at the Eltinge Theater, secured this engagement, when her manager rendered an effective spiel to the producers of the show . . . "Miss Parks is one of the best strip-teasers in the field," was his assurance. "She's famous throughout the land" . . . "But I've never heard of her," the manager was told. "How successful has she been?" . . . "She's worked so steadily," was the answer, "that for the last eight months she hasn't had a stitch of clothes on her back."

TRAVEL DEPT.: Walter Duranty, the author of "I Write As I Please," now is trapped in Sofia, unable to get back to England without risking capture. Duranty gambled and lost . . . Last May Duranty wrote me from Bucharest: "It now looks as if I may get stuck here 'for the duration,' as the boys in charge here are quite sure Italy will come in before the end of the month. I still hae me doots" . . . Duranty, a British subject, was "expelled" from Bucharest by a benevolent Rumanian official shortly before the Nazis took over. He cannot get a Russian visa, and so remains in Bulgaria hoping to find a loophole in the encirclement.

Political Race Tops New Bill

The Presidential campaign furnishes the particular piquancy in the exhilarating news potpourri at the Trans-Lux Theater this week. Enthusiastic partisans have their chance, and exercise it, to express their approval and disapproval of the candidates, with applause at less polite manifestations. President Roosevelt is seen campaigning in Boston, and Candidate Willkie in Baltimore.

The historic draft drama is quite completely covered, as the President is seen announcing No. 158, after it is drawn by Secretary Stimson. Harry Robert Bell, of Washington, and other "first" are pictured and make timely responses.

Other outstanding news shots show Axis diplomats, Japanese, German and Italian, drinking a toast to their new agreement, and the mystery fire in the War Department's Munitions Building.

Among the sport events appear the football games of St. Mary's-Texas-Long Island University, Michigan-Penn., and Cornell-Ohio State.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Philadelphia, Nov. 3 (INS).—Just as we boarded the train for Philadelphia, Alan Curtis was handed a telegram saying it was being arranged for him to be loaned for the male lead in "New Wine," Ilona Massey's new picture for Alexander Korda. The two love birds were delighted for Ilona has been begging Dr. Szekely, her producer, to see if it couldn't be arranged.

PARSONS

You've never seen two people so in love as Ilona and Alan. They have been spending every minute together and he is making the trip with us just to be with her.

Several years ago Para bought an original story called "Air Raid," put it on the shelf and let it gather dust. But last week somebody brushed off the cobwebs and decided that not only was the title timely but that it was a swell story of life in the subways, shelters and basements—just as millions of people are living today in London. Pronto it was handed to Kurt Siodmak and Franz Schulz to whip into script form for Madeleine Carroll.

John Garfield did a little casting on his own picture and suggested Margo for one of the top femme roles in "Fiesta in Manhattan." The idea sounded so good to Warners that they contacted her in Mexico City.

Snapshots collected at random: Our last luncheon in New York was at "21" with Phil Berg, Binnie Barnes, Mike Frankovich and Mrs. Joe E. Brown, who tells me they may adopt little Joe E. Brown, jr.—the 11-month-old orphan sponsored by the Variety Club. She says Joe E. is urging it and the little fellow is so cunning. If they take the baby he will be called Evans since there is already a Joe E. jr., in the family; grand to be in Philadelphia again—but we've been here such a short time we haven't seen the sights;

Damon Runyon has put on weight and it is very becoming; Clarence Lindner, publisher of the San Francisco "Examiner," and his attractive wife, are in the East on a vacation; hear Warner and Winnie Baxter want to sell their Bel Air mansion in favor of leading the simple life in a smaller place; Orson Welles flew into Hollywood to take a final look at "Citizen Kane," then planed right out again to continue his lecture tour;

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

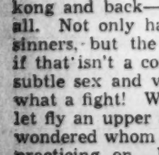
In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Nov. 3.

There were lots of stars envying Marlene Dietrich at the preview of "Seven Sinners"—wishing they had been on that "poison at the box office" list, if they could have come out of it looking and acting like Marlene. Boy, has she got a honey! She's never looked more beautiful or acted as well and there's not a tail feather left in any bird from here to Hongkong and back—she had 'em all. Not only had she seven sinners, but the Navy. And if that isn't a combination of subtle sex and virility! And what a fight! When Marlene let fly an upper cut herself, I wondered whom she had been practicing on. Broderick Crawford let fly at her, and said, "Why not? Whoever got a chance to knock out a Dietrich?—so I gave it my all."



HOPPER

Don't know why John Wayne hasn't gone farther. Some day Oscar Homolka is going to get a part that reaches above his ankle. There's a great actor going to waste in our midst. They say, "He who laughs last laughs best." Well, Marlene can begin laughing.

Since rumors started of a romance between Dennis Morgan and Ginger Rogers, they now rumor a divorce in the Dennis Morgan family. We'll wait and see . . . Glenda Farrell fans will be glad to know that she's doing a play on Broadway called "Separate Rooms."

Walt Disney's having the same kind of labor trouble in New York he had here all summer. nions have nothing against him, but when he opened his new studio, they couldn't decide how to catalogue the men who took care of the cooling system. Walt had to employ two groups. After four months, he let one group go. They're now picketing the place.

In New York last week, when he unloaded the only sound equipment so far perfected for his "Fantasia," in which over a million and a half dollars are tied up, two unions claimed the job. Almost had a riot over it, but they can't set it up until the unions fight it out among themselves as to which union the job belongs to. No, they have nothing against Walt, but if the sound equipment had been broken, it would have thrown his million and a half dollar production into the discard for the present.

They're renaming "Three Girls and a Gob," George Murphy's latest, "A Guy, A Girl, and A Gob." Better, don't you think?

Howard Hughes had had so many delays on filming "The Outlaw" that Metro's trying to get Howard Hawks to direct Bob Taylor in "Billy the Kid," which is the same thing. But he remains loyal to Hughes.

Joan Bennett planes in today to begin "Topper Returns" for Hal Roach, which couldn't be more amusing, considering the threatened suit over his ads for "The Housekeeper's Daughter." Hubby Walter Wanger remains in New York for the opening of Walt Disney's "Fantasia" and the new sound sensation.

Children and teachers file into the new educational building of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church for the first time

Mount Vernon Place Church Opens Educational Building

By Robert Tate Allan

FIVE HUNDRED pupils and teachers flocked into the new $165,000 educational building of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church yesterday morning for the first time.

Representing every department of the Sunday school, they marched to the new building from the church auditorium. There they had joined in a church school recognition program.

First child to enter the new building, on K street, between Ninth and Tenth Streets Northwest, was tiny Laura Ann Hooff, 2½-year-old granddaughter of Dr. Clifton P. Clark, general church school superintendent.

LEADING the recognition service, Dr. Clark had praised departmental superintendents, teachers and other coworkers in the project. These included Arthur E. Martin, chairman of the educational building committee; Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor; Judge Eugene Black, finance committee chairman, and Talma L. Smith, plans committee chairman.

More than 1,000 persons were in the auditorium for the special service. Some had to be placed in the choir space on the rostrum. Others stood along the walls under the stained glass windows.

While most of the adults were at the 11 o'clock worship service in the auditorium, younger groups attended a service in the educational building. This was conducted by the Rev. Wilber H. Wilson, who was welcomed as new associate pastor yesterday.

The celebration also marked the fourth anniversary of Dr. John W. Rustin's pastorate and served as a welcoming for the Rev. Wilber H. Wilson, the new associate pastor who preached his first sermon at the church last night. Shown (from left) are Justice Bolitha J. Laws, teacher of the A. B. Pugh Bible Class, Dr. Rustin, and the Rev. Mr. Wilson

DR. RUSTIN, who began his fifth year as pastor, delivered the sermon at the regular services.

It is significant, Dr. Rustin said, that while millions of youths are marching to the military orders of dictators, millions of others are marching into religious educational buildings to advance the Kingdom of God's work.

Touching briefly on the national elections, Dr. Rustin said he was perplexed over which candidate to favor, but he was "glad to honestly say that there are two great Americans running for President."

HE WENT on to say that when Wendell Willkie was nominated he said "thank God for it" but added that "was no reason why I should damn the other man."

Dr. Rustin said his own experience in once helping to handle relief cases of 17,000 persons in another city had made him sympathetic with Mr. Roosevelt's difficulties with 10,000,000 cases, and lauded Mr. Roosevelt as having done a "grand job" as President.

Judge Black, of the Board of Tax Appeals, presented the church budget for the coming year which totaled $42,000.

Yesterday afternoon guides conducted tours of the new building, while Dr. and Mrs. Rustin and the Rev. and Mrs. Wilson were being honored at a congregational reception in the social hall. Joining with them in the receiving line were members of the official board and others.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson preached last night.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Football Map of U. S.:

THE EAST—High above Cayuga's waters, Cornell is still the No. 1 citadel of Eastern football. The Big Red has turned back every assault with Columbia the latest to feel the lashing of Cornell's superb blockers. That was a 27-0 victory over a team that had been beaten only once, and by this time it is pretty well established that Cornell is no flash in the pan.

POVICH

But a clamor in challenge of Cornell's Eastern superiority is being heard in rising overtones North and South of Ithaca. One team that is moving solidly into contention is Georgetown's blue and gray gang. The other that is conceding nothing to Cornell is from Boston way—Boston College.

Georgetown is stampeding toward recognition in the East, the way paved by Navy's 20-0 downfall at the hands of Penn over the week-end. That Navy team had a voice in the shout for Eastern honors until its passes boomeranged on Franklin Field. Any disposition to under-rate the Hoyas was eliminated when they romped over Syracuse, 28-6, willing the ball game with two touchdowns in the first six minutes. The 1940 Georgetown team doesn't trifle.

Boston College's 25-0 rout of Manhattan was creditable but scarcely rates with Georgetown's defeat of Syracuse. Week by week, the approaching Georgetown-B. C. clash is bulking as the East's game of the year. Penn State and Lafayette round out the group of five unbeaten, untied teams in the East, but their schedules scarcely recommend them for any transcedant honors.

Neatest trick of the week was Penn's. The Quakers bounced back from their two-touchdown defeat by Michigan to beat unbeaten Navy with the identical touchdowns by which Michigan slapped 'em down. Frank Reagan scored on a mild variation of Michigan's old No. 83, and Penn's second touchdown was the same sort of a pass into the corner of the field by which Tommy Harmon scored against the Quakers the week before.

THE MIDWEST—Not Minnesota's 13-12 victory over Northwestern, but Notre Dame's narrow escape against Army highlighted the fortunes of Midwestern clubs over the week-end. Army all but ripped from Notre Dame what had been its aura of invincibility. The Irish seemingly are not the stand-out football team their admirers were acclaiming them. This Army team which they had barely beaten, was licked, 45-0 by Cornell.

Nor is Notre Dame stock booming in another direction. The Georgia Tech team which was able to score 20 points on the Irish earlier in the season, was all but routed off the field in a 41-7 defeat by Duke. The Irish are still unbeaten and untied, but the paradox is that they must reestablish themselves nevertheless.

It's Minnesota and Michigan in the Big Ten. The Wolverines had an off-day over the week-end but they will swing back into their big games starting Saturday. Meanwhile Minnesota has come along. Its victory over Northwestern was a skimpy one-point affair, but any sort of a victory over Northwestern is acceptable. There can never be any quarrel with Bernie Bierman's team as long as it keeps winning. They have already slapped down U. of Washington, Nebraska, Ohio State and Northwestern and have played the toughest schedule in the Nation.

THE SOUTH—Tennessee consolidated its position at top of the Dixie heap with its 28-0 rout of Louisiana State. It was an impressive come back by the Volunteers after their mere 14-0 win over Florida which had dimmed Tennessee's lustre. Bob Foxx and Jim Butler are probably the two best backs to be found on any one college team.

Any challenge Clemson was making for Dixie honors faded with its 13-0 defeat by Tulane. Mississippi State, unbeaten but tied, didn't enhance its claims with a mere 13-0 win over Southwestern. Duke has rebounded nicely, but can scarcely wipe out that early season defeat by Tennessee. Kentucky dropped completely out of it when licked by Alabama, another Duke victim, 25-0. There is the suspicion, though, that Southern football, this year, is not up to recent par.

THE SOUTHWEST—The impression is growing that for the first time in Southwest Conference history, a champion will repeat. Texas A. and M. is the team, and with big John Kimbrough still bulling his way to touchdowns, the Aggies are unbeaten and untied. Texas A. and M. hurdled Arkansas, 17-0, over the week-end, and there is still very much doubt whether Michigan's Tommy Harmon or Texas' Kimbrough is the best back of 1940.

Southern Methodist is still among the unbeaten, but a tie mars the Mustangs' record. Southern Methodist slapped down University of Texas, 21-13, with difficulty, but its only title hope is for A. and M. to come a cropper in November. Texas Tech is tied but unbeaten, but Southwest critics are unenthused about this team.

PACIFIC COAST—Stanford is still it in the Pacific Conference. Week by week, Clark Shaughnessy's team, the floperoo of the 1939 season, is proving its right to the Far West title. Still unbeaten and untied, the Indians slapped down U. C. L. A., 20-14, for its sixth successive victory. That might appear to be a hollow victory inasmuch as it was U. C. L. A.'s sixth straight defeat, but the Uclans are tough nevertheless. Never have they been beaten by more than a touchdown.

Hoyas Tighten Hold on D. C. Grid Honors

With Maryland idle, and George Washington and Catholic University held scoreless in week-end games, Georgetown's rampant Hoyas further tightened their near monopoly on all team and individual scoring records among the District colleges.

Lou Ghecas, Jim Castiglia and Jules Koshlap each tallied one touchdown against Syracuse to press teammate Jack Doolan for the individual leadership. Doolan, however, still retains a six-point advantage with six touchdowns for 30 points. Ghecas, Koshlap, Castiglia and George Washington's Walter Fedora are tied for second place.

Augie Lio, G. U.'s sure-footed 210-pound guard, took a wide lead in the department of kicking extra points, booting three out of three against Syracuse. He now has 10 conversions out of 13 tries. Tackle Dan Snyder, of George Washington, is runner-up with five successful boots.

There is no contest in the team standings. Georgetown, with 206 points scored and only 22 points scored against it in six games, not only overshadows local rivals but is high among the national leaders in both respects. Only Boston College with 240 markers for six contests has proved a better offensive team than Georgetown, and the Eagles have yielded 27 points, or five more than the Hoyas.

Catholic U., St. Vincent Play 0-0 Tie

Record Home Crowd Sees Latrobe Team Threaten to Score In 4th Quarter

Special Dispatch to The Post

Latrobe, Pa., Nov. 3.—Meeting for the first time in the two schools' history, St. Vincent College and Catholic University of Washington, D. C., battled to a scoreless tie here this afternoon before an overcapacity home-coming crowd of 8,200 fans shattering all previous attendance records of the stadium.

The tide of victory swayed precariously on a wave of breaks late in the fourth quarter after Coach Gene Edwards' Bearcats marched 59 yards by passes and running plays to Catholic U.'s 20-yard line. There the visitors of Coach Arthur "Dutch" Bergman received a St. Vincent fumble, only to have a fumbled ball on the next play recovered by St. Vincent on the Catholic 17.

Then a Bearcat pass was intercepted by Catholic U. on its 13 and the ball taken out of dangerous territory.

Popovich Is Star

St. Vincent's bid for a touchdown in the final period was featured by running and passing of Sophomore Johnny Popovich, substitute for Mike Pollack at halfback. Taking the ball on downs on their own 21, St. Vincent marched downfield, Popovich, skirting end for 14 yards, then heaving a pass to End Loncarie for 32 yards gain, and hitting through tackle for 13 more yards. Then came the fumbles, but no score.

In the second half, the battling Bearcats held their foe for downs once on their 26 and again on the 21-yard line.

The visiting club registered 10 first downs to nine for St. Vincent, but the latter made 148 yards net in rushing to 114½ for Catholic U. The visitors, with Pete Sachon doing the booting, held advantage on punts, averaging 46 yards to 39 for Bearcats Mike Pollack.

By virtue of Mike Pollack's 45-yard boot that went out of bounds on Catholic 5-yard line, the Bearcats shoved their opponents into a spot in first quarter following St. Vincent's recovery of a fumble on the Catholic U. 49.

Sachon Kicks Out

The visitors received a further setback on the next play when penalized 4 yards for holding, putting the ball on Catholic 1-yard line. Quarterback Pete Sachon booted the ball from behind his goal line, Pilato returning the punt 14 yards to Catholic 25. Bearcats Pollack and Forys collaborated to gain a first down on Catholic 16, but on first play of the second quarter St. Vincent fumbled with Norris recovering the ball for Catholic U. on his 19, ending the scoring threat by the Bearcats.

St. Vincent got out of a similar spot in the second quarter when Quarterback Sachon, Catholic's great passer and punter, booted the ball out of bounds on the Bearcats' 2-yard stripe. Pollack kicked to St. Vincent 35 where, on next play, the Bearcats recovered a Catholic fumble on their 33 and Pollack punted out of bounds on Catholic 35 to put game back on evenly fought basis.

Although the first half ended scoreless, Catholic U. threatened near close of second quarter when Sachon heaved a short pass to Fullback Norris, who raced 32 yards for first down on the St. Vincent 32.

Pilato of St. Vincent finally broke through Norris five man interference to make the tackle. However, Catholic's passing attack, after one toss good for 4 yards, bogged down, Sachon failing to connect with receivers and alert Bearcats batting the ball down on three heaves, St. Vincent taking ball on it's own 20.

45,434 See Bears Defeat Packers, 14-7

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 3.—The Chicago Bears drove on toward the Western division championship in the National Professional Football League today with a 14 to 7 victory over the Green Bay Packers in a thrilling duel before 45,434 spectators.

The Packers failed in the clutch as their famed passing attack, which has produced five national championships, bogged down in the fourth period against the Bears' inspired defensive stand. The entire period was played in Bear territory and most of it within the shadows of the goal posts, but passes and runs alike failed to produce a tying tally.

The largest crowd ever to see a professional game in Chicago sat amazed in the first two periods at the Bears' crushing offensive that rolled over the Packers almost at will.

Bears Fall Short of Goal

The Bears battered goalward 71 yards early in the first period but fell a foot short of a touchdown. Green Bay punted out and Chicago started again from its own 45, Ray Nolting sparking the march with a 33-yard jaunt. Joe Maniaci cracked right tackle for a touchdown from the 3 and Jack Manders added the placement.

Larry Buhler set up Green Bay's tying touchdown in the second period when he snagged Sid Luckman's pass and returned it 32 yards to the Bear 11. Arnold Herber then rifled a pass to Don Hutson in the end zone, the great Packer end leaping high into the air to make the catch with two bears covering him. Tiny Engebretsen booted the tying point.

Ray McClean returned the subsequent kickoff 55 yards to Green Bay's 41 and then joined with Gary Famiglietti and Harry Clark in running behind a second string line to the 6. Familglietti drove through left guard from that point for the winning touchdown. Manders again place kicked the point.

Gain 52 Yards Rushing

The Packers were never out of their own territory in the first half except for the one scoring thrust, gaining only 52 yards rushing all afternoon. Packers passes and sloppy second half play by both teams left the outcome a toss-up until the final gun, but Green Bay passes were ineffective when the goal line beckoned.

The tide of battle turned toward the Packers midway of the third period when the Bears after driving to midfield were penalized half the distance to the goal for slugging, forcing a punt. The Packers then plowed through the the Bear 21. George McAfee intercepted Cecil Isbell's toss on the 5 and returned 25, but fumbled and Russ Letlow recovered for the Packers on their own 48.

Jim Johnston Scores Twice; Baugh Stars

Washington About Clinches Eastern Championship With Seventh Straight

By Al Hailey

Lack of reserve strength on the part of their opponents and the large quantity of power in the flinging arms of Sammy Baugh and Frank Filchock gave the Redskins their seventh straight victory of the season yesterday—a 37-10 decision over the Pittsburgh Steelers, which just about sews up the National Football League's Eastern division championship for the D. C. lads.

A sadly undermanned squad of 25 Steelers showed up for the kickoff and all but played the Relskins off their feet in the first half as 31,204 witnesses sat agape in the confines of Griffith Stadium.

The game was almost a repetition of the Redskins' 40-10 victory over the Steelers in Pittsburgh, October 6—one which found the Smokey city eleven marching down the field the first time they handled the ball and snatching a 3-0 lead on a 25-yard field goal off the toe of gigantic Armand Niccolai, 6-foot-3, 230-pound tackle.

Jimmy Johnston Scores

That was the signal for the Redskins to spring into action, however, and they plunged down the turf immediately to take a 6-2 lead on a pass from Baugh to Jimmy Johnston that was good for 39 yards.

After that the Redskins were never headed. While the Steelers faded, the Redskins gathered momentum, scoring once in the second quarter, again in the third and punctuating two more in the fourth with a 20-yard field goal by Bob Masterson.

There was a fellow named Todd—Dick Todd—out on the field from time to time, and he was another source of regret to the Steelers. Richard, 163 pounds of fullback, carried a Pittsburgh punt 44 yards back down the field to set up the Redskins' final touchdown and was personally accountable for the third score, which he set up with a 38-yard run and then locked away with a 1-yard leap over the goal line.

Steelers Made Jittery

But it was through the air that the Redskins did most of their damage. They had the Steelers so jittery from passes that their ground attack worked with the greatest of ease—in fact, Filchock pranced through the middle of the Pittsburgh defense 12 yards for the second score after moving the ball 54 yards down field with five passes—all of them direct to their marks.

The Skins' passing attack just missed being 100 per cent perfect. Filchock batted 1,000 with 7 tosses and 7 completions, while Baugh, who's leading the league's passers so far it's a shame to speak of it, completed 7 out of 8 for 116 yards. Leroy Zimmerman, rookie understudy to the duo, hurled one incomplete pass—gaving the Redskins 14 completions out of 16 attempts, for a gain of 194 yards.

As the Steelers fagged out late in the game, the Redskins turned on the power. In all, they outrushed the Steelers on the ground, 167 yards to 95, but they barely shaded Pittsburgh in the first down division, 11 to 10.

Baugh-Johnston Duo Clicks

The Baugh to Johnston passing partnership accounted for two of the Redskins touchdowns, while the Filchock to Todd and almost everybody else on the field eligible at the time accounted for one directly and helped along another.

Their victory put them three full games out in front of their nearest Eastern division competitor, the Brooklyn Dodgers. The Dodgers took a 10-7 defeat at the hands of the New York Giants. With four games left to play, the Giants and the Dodgers have a chance of catching the Skins, but it's a bit remote, and the real story is that the Red-

Rams Finally Click, Rout Lions, 24 to 0

Cleveland Shuns Usual Passing Game, Display Crushing Ground Attack to March 55 And 56 Yards; Drake Leads Winners

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Nov. 3.—The Cleveland Rams, who have been threatening to do impressive things all season in the National League, finally clicked today to wallop a highly favored Detroit team, 24 to0. The victory, witnessed by 18,881 fans, put the Ohioans in a third place tie with the Lions in the league's Western division.

The Rams, usually a strictly passing team, displayed their best running attack of the year in the first half to pile up a 14-to-0 advantage on touchdown marches of 55 and 56 yards. A 58-yard scoring drive and a 23-yard field goal clinched the verdict in the final period.

Pile-driving Johnny Drake, playing with a broken finger, sparked the smashing Cleveland ground game. He plunged 2 yards for the first touchdown on the initial play of the second period and five minutes later caught the Detroit defense napping to flip a 9-yard touchdown pass to Big Jim Benton.

Drake set up the final six-pointer with a brilliant 32-yard dash, Marty Slovak carrying the ball over from the 3. Chet Adams, Cleveland's nominee for a tackle post on the all-league team, booted the field goal.

Whizzer White was the only Detroit back able to make any headway against the Cleveland forward wall. His running and passing moved the Lions to the Cleveland 5 in the second period, but here the Ohioans braced and took the ball on downs. Detroit defended almost entirely on passing in desperate attempts to turn the tide in the second half, but hit on only three out of 12 for 49 yards.

The Rams picked up 177 yards from running against 112 for the losers and held a 16 to 12 edge in first downs. For one of the few times this season, the Rams were edged in passing, Detroit showing 149 yards, 18 more than Cleveland. The winners used tosses conservatively, and hit on 10 in 13.

Coach Dutch Clark shook up his line-up, holding Parker Hall, his ace passer, and Drake out at the start. Adams was shifted to end in an attempt to bolster the blocking.

Chuck Hanneman tried a field goal from the 40 for the Lions, but the try fell far short. Drake and Boyd Clay also attempted three-boots for the Rams.

San Francisco Routed, 27-0, By Santa Clara

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Nov. 3.—Santa Clara's Broncos rode the aerial lanes to a 27-0 football victory over University of San Francisco today behind the bulls-eye marksmanship of Substitute Halfback Ken Casanega, Twenty thousand attended.

The annual clash between the rivals produced the largest score ever rolled up in the series. The Broncos started off to the one-sided victory with a touchdown in the second period, added another in the third and cracked over two more in a wild last quarter that saw the Dons completely demoralized.

Casanega, a lanky Oakland, Calif., youth, was in rare pitching form. He rifled the ball three times on touchdown plays and set the stage for the fourth on a toss that put the oval 1-yard from goal.

New Tie Ruling Gives Baltimore C. C. State Golf Title

Indian Spring Loses After 9-9 Deadlock

Shorey and Peacock, Harrison-Albertus Beaten in Upsets; Losers Outsmarted

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Baltimore Country Club golfers won the Maryland State Golf Association team championship yesterday, defeating the defending champion Indian Spring team over the neutral Rolling Road course, under the new ruling that decides tied matches. The teams battled to a 9-to-9 draw in the finals.

The ruling adopted by the association this year states "In the event of a tie in points the winner will be the team winning he most matches." Out of the six matches, Baltimore C. C. won three, Indian Spring two and one was a 1½-point draw.

The title encounter marked the second time the Baltimoreans profited by the new ruling, as they previously were tied by Chevy Chase, but won the majority of the six two-ball matches.

Accept Decision As Fair

Indian Spring players accepted the decision as being as fair to one team as to the other, but they also felt in case of a tie in the finals, the title match should be played off. Their main objection was to the match being played at Rolling Road, as it was Washington's turn for the finals.

Charles Dunning was the hero for the new champions as he calmly stepped up to a tricky 5-foot putt on the eighteenth green and banged it in the cup to save a half-point for himself and W. S. Pirie against Jim Hunt, who played due to the illness of Team Capt. Dick Melvin, and Art Cross.

Hunt and Cross won the first nine, had the 18 locked up under the Nassau scoring system and stood all square on the back nine on the eighteenth tee. Cross and Pirie took fives on the hole, but Hunt chipped within 6 feet of the cup and dropped an important putt. Dunning was 5 feet away and he had to sink to win the match, and if he missed his team lost. The ball was never in doubt as it dived in the cup.

Harrison-Albertus Duo Loses

The biggest upset of the day found Lou Harrison and Bob Albertus, previously unbeaten in Indian Spring matches, losing all three ponits to Bill Eager, last year's State champ, and A. C. Schauman, despite a subpar best ball on the part of the losers.

Claude Rippy fired a two-under par 68, despite a ball out of bounds, as he and Jock Olmsted swept three points over Edgar Lucas and Harry Parr, 3d, for the losers only shutout victory of the day.

The top match found Roger Peacock and Mel Shorey way off form as they dropped two big points to Jimmy Flattery and R. H. Swindell, of the Baltimoreans, while winning only one. Neither Shorey or Peacock broke 75 over the comparatively easy course as Flattery and Swindell scored one of their few victories in the series of matches.

Buddy Sharkey and Eddie Ault dropped two points to E. W. Brown and Don Miller as the Baltimore duo played perfect partners while Indian Spring's fifth duo of Arthur Urban and Jerry Hart split even with Harris Jones and Charles Nes.

The Baltimore captain clearly outsmarted the Indian Springers in arranging the lineup, and thus gained the tie that proved to be a victory.

Jimmy Flattery and R. H. Swindell (BCC) scored 2 points to 1 for Roger Peacock and Mel Shorey (IS).

Edgar Lucas and Harry Parr 3d (BCC) scored 0 points to 3 for Claude Rippy and Jock Olmsted (IS).

William Eager and A. C. Schauman (BCC) scored 3 points to 0 for Lou Harrison and Bob Albertus (IS).

E. W. Brown and Don Miller (BCC) scored 2 points to 1 for Buddy Sharkey and Eddie Ault (IS).

Harris Jones and Charles Nes, Jr. (BCC) scored 1½ points to 1½ for Jerry Hart and Arthur Urban (IS).

W. S. Pirie, jr., and Charles Dunning (BCC) scored ½ point to 2½ for Art Cross and Jim Hunt (IS).

BEAVER DAM

Jim Gipe, the Federal Government golf champ, was a double winner at Beaver Dam over the week-end, posting low gross scores in both Saturday's handicap tourney and yesterday's sweepstakes. His three over par 75 was low in the latter event, while his other winning score was a single shot higher.

Jess Baggett won low net in class A of the sweeps with a 79—6, 73, 6—4, 7—5.

Breaks Help Gaels Defeat Portland, 25-13

9,000 Fans Witness Coast Battle; Victors Score Twice in First

By the Associated Press

Portland, Ohio, Nov. 3.—St. Mary's Gaels, winding up a two-week transcontinental tour, capitalized on the "breaks" today and trimmed University of Portland, 25-13, before a crowd of 9,000.

Fullback Eddie Detreitas, of Portland, grabbed the opening kickoff on his 6-yard line and galloped through the entire St. Mary's team to the goal. The six-point lead was shortlived, however. St. Mary's marched 60 yards to a touchdown after receiving the kickoff.

St. Mary's scored again in the first on a pass interception and made it 18 points in the second when Center Al Ratto scooped up a blocked punt and ran it across. The Gaels scored their last touchdown in the fourth after a 37-yard pass put them on the Portland 2-yard line.

Portland drove 59 yards to its second score late in the fourth.

Buenos Aires, Nov. 3 (AP).—Donald McNeill, of Oklahoma City, United States Tennis Champion, suffered his first setback of his visit to Argentine today when he was beaten in an exhibition doubles match. Three other members of the visiting team were successful, however, in doubles matches in the Argentine National Championship Tournament.

Continuing an exhibition begun a week ago but postponed because of poor light, McNeill and Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., lost to the Argentines, Alejo Russell and Augusto Ozappa, 1—6, 1—6, 6—3, 6—4, 7—5.

Cuff's Field Goal Wins for Giants

First Period 25-Yard Kick Provides 10-7 Victory Margin Over Dodgers as Each Team Scores Touchdown in Rousing Final Quarter

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 3.—Ward Cuff's 25-yard field goal proved the margin of victory as the New York Giants beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 10 to 7, in a National Professional League game today before 33,000 at Ebbets Field. Each team scored a touchdown in a rousing fourth quarter, the Giants on a 12-yard pass from Len Barnum to Hank Soar and Brooklyn on a plunge by Sam Francis after a 70-yard drive.

The triumph jumped the Giants into second place in the Eastern division of the pro circuit and kept clear their record of never having lost to Brooklyn in 10 years.

The Dodgers threatened to score three or four times before Francis finally counted on a plunge from the 1-foot line at the end of their long last period drive, but fumbles and the lack of a goal-line punch stopped them each time.

Field Goals Fail

Twice Ralph Kercheval, who was out of the line-up with a broken toe, limped on to the field and attempted placement kicks for the Dodgers, but it was no dice. His try from the 33-yard line in the second period scarcely got off the ground, and when he attempted another from the 19 in the third quarter it was batted aside by Johnny Mellus and Jim Poole, of the rushing Giants' line.

The drive that culminated in Cuff's field goal began from the Giants' own 18-yard line late in the opening quarter and had reached Brooklyn's 24, largely on savage runs by big Walter Nielson, when the gun banged. When the Dodgers held for three plays at the start of the second quarter, Cuff stepped back and booted the ball between the bars.

The Giants' touchdown was set up early in the fourth quarter when Bill Leckonby, of the Dodgers, fumbled and Jerry Dennerlin recovered on Brooklyn's 35. Soar plunged off the tackles for two first downs, the second on the 12-yard line, and then raced into the end zone to catch a pass from Barnum. Barnum place-kicked the point to make it 10 to 0.

Cafego Stars

George Cafego, the freshman from Tennessee, sparked the Dodgers' futile toucndown march that followed. He threw one 23-yard pass to Waddy Young and caught a 20-yarder from Leckonby as the Dodgers rolled up four first downs.

In all, the smart new offense that Jock Sutherland has drilled into the Brooklyns accounted for 13 first downs to the Giants' 11. The Dodgers also piled up 190 yards by the aerial route to the Giants' 37, but the Giants led 137 yards to 73 in rushing the ball and they didn't commit the costly fumbles of the Dodgers.

Ace Parker did some brilliant ball toting for the losers, and he completed 8 of 15 passes attempted for 97 yards. Nielson, in 19 attempts, split the Brooklyn defense for 75 yards. Brooklyn's Banks McFadden, who was the league's leading ground gainer up to today, was stopped cold by the Giants.

A. U. Holds First Cage Session Today

Basketball Team Faces Hard Schedule; Workout at 3:30 P. M.

Preparing for an ambitious schedule which includes games with strong local and intersectional rivals, American University will hold its first 1940 basketball practice at 3:30 this afternoon.

Coach Staff Cassell believes he may have his best team in years, one that will be able to hold its own with Georgetown, Penn State, V. P. I., Dickinson, Mexico and other usually powerful fives to be met.

Forming a nucleus for the Eagles court squad will be five veterans, headed by Captain-elect "Dutch" Schulze and including Cal Byham, 6-foot 5 center, Ernie Webb, Bart Reese and Bruce Atchison.

Incoming material never has been so promising. Among freshmen candidates are Gus Frizzell, an All-Maryland State center from Central High in Lonaconing; Bill Blaine, an All-Northern Pennsylvania Conference center from Kane High which sent Emerson Bartlett and Schulze to A. U.; Mac Potter, a guard from Jersey Shore, Pa., and Bill Bosley, a forward from Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

Until football season is over basketball players who also are cavorting on the gridiron will practice on the court three times weekly, taking advantage of free periods during the day.

Texas Golfer Defeats Vines

Mexico City, Nov. 3 (INS).—John Barnum, of Texas, today retained his Mexican golf championship title, defeating Ellsworth Vines, former National and Wimbledon singles tennis champion, three up in a 36-hole final match over the hazardous Mexico City Country Club.

Three down to his California rival at the end of the morning round, Barnum shot a brilliant second-round 67, five under par, to win the honors for the second consecutive year. An estimated crowd of 1,000 followed the players.

Ice Artist Injured

Philadelphia, Nov. 3 (AP).—Frankie Boucher, center, will be lost to the Philadelphia Ramblers of the American Hockey League for three weeks, Coach Herb Gardiner announced tonight. Boucher suffered an injury to his kneecap in the Springfield game last week.

East Football In Tricorner Argument

Cornell, Boston College, Georgetown on Top Of Sectional Roost

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Nov. 3.—Football supremacy in the East still is a three-cornered argument among Cornell, Boston College and Georgetown with plenty of kibitzing from no fewer than 11 other undefeated and untied elevens.

Navy was eliminated from this select company Saturday by once-beaten Penn, 20-0, chiefly through the Middies' own mistakes. Otherwise the week-end wrangling didn't do a great deal to settle the issue of sectional leadership.

The topnotchers for the most part outgunned their opposition so greatly that they had little chance to test their strength.

Cornell, considered the No. 1 combination in the country by the majority of sports writers, moved methodically to a 27-0 triumph over Columbia, which had been unbeaten until the previous week. It was the fifth victory of the season and the seventeenth game without a setback for the Big Reds and Hall McCullough made it easy by tossing three of his team's four touchdown passes.

Eagles Hold Scoring Lead

The Boston College Eagles used their entire squad to maintain their Eastern scoring lead with a 25-0 triumph over outclassed Manhattan, making 240 points the Eagles have scored against 27 for their foes in six victories this season.

Georgetown, which hasn't lost in 22 games stretching back to 1937, crushed Syracuse 28-6 with Julius Koshlap throwing a pass for one touchdown and scoring another himself.

Boston College and Georgetown's Hoyas will collide in two weeks and settle their differences, but since Cornell does not play either, the Big Reds will have to be judged on other merits—which are sufficient.

Penn State's Nittany Lions conquered South Carolina 12-0, La-Fayete larruped Washington and Jefferson 25-0 and Franklin and Marshall overpowered Albright 27-6 to remain with the unbeaten elite.

One of the day's most stirring spectacles from an Eastern viewpoint was Army's holding mighty Notre Dame to a 7-0 verdict before 75,000 surprised spectators in New York's Yankee Stadium. An 81-yard run with an intercepted pass and the Cadets' own poor strategy kept the Army from rocking the football world with a victory.

Early Ram Scores Win

Fordham, beaten only by St. Mary's, scored two early touchdowns to turn back North Carolina's invasion 14 to 0. Harvard and Princeton scrimmaged to a 0-to-0 tie in the rain for the entertainment, so-called, of 15,000 fans. An even smaller turnout, 6,000, saw Brown beat Yale 6 to 2 on a 92-yard run with an intercepted pass by Dick High.

In the other leading games, New York U. was swamped by Missouri 33 to 0 in a venture into the Midwest; Colgate capitalized on a fumble and Joe Hoague scored to beat Holy Cross, 6 to 0, in a rainstorm; Dartmouth downed Sewanee, 26 to 0, with Sophomore Ray Wolfe bagging three touchdowns; Temple tamed Bucknell 10 to 7 on Sid Beshunsky's 25-yard field goal in the final minute of play and Duquesne stopped Marquette, 14 to 0, on two touchdown passes by Phil Ahwesh.

Cincinnati edged out Carnegie Tech, 7 to 6. Rutgers routed Connecticut 45 to 7; Haverford trimmed Lehigh, 18 to 7, and Western Reserve battered Boston University 19 to 0.

Next Saturday's program will be headed by Navy's skirmish with Notre Dame at Baltimore, with Fordham-Purdue, Columbia-Wisconsin, Army-Brown, Holy Cross-Mississippi, Yale-Cornell, Penn-Harvard and other tussles tossed in for good measure.

Gene Brown Wins Bowling Sweepstakes

Gene Brown, a 99-average bowler from the host alleys, won the annual American Legion 5-game handicap sweepstakes over 204 entries yesterday at the Silver Spring Bowling plant.

Brown rolled consecutive games of 118-124-113-114-125 for a 594 effort and added 130 pins handicap allowance for a total of 724 and first prize of $50.

Mrs. Georgia Hays, first winner of the event, finished second by five pins with a 719 total. Mrs. Hays rolled 544 and added 175 pins allowance, rolling games of 100-137-103-96-108.

Mike Avon, whose 712 was the highest set from scratch of the day, added five pins handicap for 717 and a third place tie with E. Anderson. The latter posted a 632-85, 717 score.

Sixth prize went to W. E. Brown with 622-90, 712.

The only entry who rolled from scratch, James Crown, of Brookland, finished with a 578 set while two of the city's leading bowlers, Al Wright and Bill Gartrell, rolled scores of 578 and 621, respectively. Highest women's scratch set was Alma Mehler's 597.

Bockwinkle Faces Newman on Mat

Warren Bockwinkle, conqueror last week of Babe Zaharias, and Eddie Newman, the New York villain, yesterday were matched for a semiwindup bout on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. Headlining the card will be Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, and "Gentleman Lou" Plummer.

Bockwinkle bounced back into the winner's circle with an impressive victory over Zaharias, gaining revenge for a defeat slapped on him by Babe the previous week.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 3.—No sponges having been found in the Notre Dame backfield, and the competent observers of the game having agreed that Army deserved to win, we wish to retract our assertion that Notre Dame deliberately loafs, and therefore Army. The loafing, we hear from a peachable source close to the team, isn't deliberate. It's hereditary.

"Notre Dame just can't get hopped up before it plays Army," our informant told us. "After all the Irish have beaten the Cadets 20 times to Army's five wins. Notre Dame suffers from the same sluggishness before the Northwestern game each year, too. Northwestern has won only two games from Notre Dame since 1902. The boys change from year to year, but each succeeding team comes to believe that these two clubs are setups. Especially Army.

"On the other hand, Army can get more aroused before the Notre Dame game than before any other game, except Navy. Notre Dame is still the greatest team in the country."

Pardon us, but if Notre Dame is the best club in the land, and that was a 100 per cent honest performance it turned in Saturday, then that makes Cornell (which beat Army 45-0) the best team in the universe. It makes Lafayette (which beat Army 19-0) two touchdowns better than the Irish.

Under the same comparative-score system, Notre Dame would shade Williams and Harvard by a single touchdown, and lack the offensive skill of these elevens—inasmuch as Williams and Harvard pierced Army's defense rather well (Williams rolling up 19 points) whereas Notre Dame's could make only three yards against Army during the first half. And the first team was in there 18 of the minutes.

Yet this was the same Notre Dame team that, during its brief appearances in games against College of the Pacific, Carnegie Tech, Georgia Tech and Illinois, scored 11 touchdowns and gained 582 yards in 55 plays. The good old Army fight means a lot, and so did the presence of Yearling Henry Mazur. But could it have meant that much?

Cornell looked great again, playing its last home game at Ithaca before embarking on a three-week invasion of Yale, Dartmouth and Penn. The Big Red, which isn't as big as it is lightning fast and tough, is the awarest college team we've ever seen. It never hesitates, never seems in doubt, pulls off its plays with the clicking perfection of a great pro club. It completed 14 out of 20 passes against Columbia and intercepted four of the Lions' pitches. Its line held Columbia's running attack to minus 2 yards during the second half. That takes more than the white cylinder which Carl Snavely wigwagged nervously throughout the game.

Michigan didn't play. It meets Minnesota next week at Minneapolis in the game that decides the Western Conference title. Minnesota eliminated a lighter, battered but brilliant Northwestern team Saturday by the cruel but sufficient margin of a kick after touchdown. It must have taken something out of Minnesota, which should come as welcome news to a Michigan team that is worrying over the loss of its great blocking back, and Capt. Forest Evashevski. The game should be a bruiser.

As for the other unbeaten teams, Tennessee snapped back to beat L. S. U. by four touchdowns, after a disappointing showing against Florida the week before. Texas A. and M. took advantage of Arkansas' fumbles to score its seventeenth straight victory and advance to the brink of becoming the first team to repeat in the Southwestern Conference for the past 15 years. Boston College banged Manhattan around pitilessly. Georgetown won its twenty-second straight game without a loss, crushing Syracuse under a hard-charging attack that saw the winners score twice in the first five minutes. Georgetown scored on its first play from scrimmage, a touchdown pass from Koshlap to Ghecas.

As for Georgetown's schedule, which has been maligned, we pass along something Jack Hagerty, the team's fine coach, told us at a football dinner at Endicott, N. Y., after the game.

"It's the best schedule we could get," Hagerty said. "I can't understand it. If we lose a lot of games, nobody wants to play us. And if we win a lot nobody wants to play us."

An official of the Georgetown-Syracuse game told us that Georgetown has the hardest hitting line he has seen in years. Incidentally, Georgetown loses the Syracuse and N. Y. U. games next year.

Stanford kept its slate pure, beating U. C. L. A. with the hocus-pocus which Clark Shaughnessy picked up from the Chicago Bears while at the University of Chicago. The Coast has been playing power football for years, with little imagination in its ball throwing. Stanford's style, moderately old hat in the Midwest and East, and certainly in the Southwest, is simple mystifying the Coast.

Sports World Salutes Miller Tonight in Testimonial Dinner

From near and far men outstanding in varied walks of like will come to Washington tonight to salute Lieut.-Col. Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller at a testimonial dinner in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel.

Approximately 400 sports and civic leaders are expected to be on hand to toss a farewell at the District Boxing Commission secretary who leaves Thursday for an indefinite period of activity with his Fifth Battalion Marine Reserve Corps.

"HEINIE" MILLER

Although the affair is strictly informal, the flash of gold braid and polished uniform buttons will embellish the funtion at which District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will be the chief speaker.

Owen Is Toastmaster

Boxing Commission Chairman Claude W. Owen will be toastmaster, and guests at the speakers table will include Thomas P. Morgan jr., junior member of the boxing body; James A. Blake, of Richmond, vice president of the National Boxing Commission; Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; Maj. William B. Onley, U. S. M. C.; Commdr. Ellis Reed-Hill, United States Coast Guard; David A. Rochon, chairman Montreal Athletic Commission, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, member of the boxing commission and superintendent of Metropolitan Police.

The local boxing commission, which has granted Heinie an extended leave of absence, and the Washington fight business in general will come in for a bit of good natured razzing in a skit arranged by dinner officials. The floor show will include girls from the line at one of the downtown theaters.

Military Air at Function

The military atmosphere will be heightened at the dinner, which starts at 8 p. m., by the presence of 42 members of Col. Miller's outfit who will serve under him when he departs for Quantico, Va.

Col. Miller's battalion, which he organized five years ago, probably will remain at the marine station for a month and then be sent to the Caribbean.

From the boxing world will be Ken Overlin, middleweight champion who successfully defended his title last Friday in New York against Steve Belloise; Joe Dundee, former welterweight champion; Edmund LaFond, referee and C. U. boxing coach; Charley Reynolds, well known referee and Washington Boys' Club official; Promoter Joe Turner, Ray Alvis, Goldie Ahearn and a host of others.

Bears' Power Will Beat Redskins, Says Coach of Steelers

By Jack Munhall

Big Walter Kiesling, foreman of the Pittsburgh Steelers and a veteran of 18 years as player and coach in the professional football ranks, was not as much impressed with the Redskins' victory over his team yesterday as you might imagine from the 37-to-10 score.

At least, the massive, bland-faced gentleman did not wax enthusiastic enough over Baugh, Todd, Filchock & Co. to give them much of a chance to lick the Chicago Bears if and when the two elevens meet for the National League championship.

"Sure the Redskins have a pretty good football team," said the big fellow, who is serving out his first year's sentence with the hapless Steelers, "but I'd have to take the Bears every time."

Why, Kiesling was asked in this dressing room parley, would he choose Steve Halas' bruising Bears to trounce our noble Redskins?

"Power, my lad," he replied in the same manner that one would answer a child who had asked a superfluous question.

Kiesling then ducked further questioning as he noted the pain that slowly crept over the apt expressions of his listeners, some of whom cannot imagine anyone being able to whip the noble Redskins.

"How will the Bears stop the Redskins' passing attack?"

FILCHOCK

This question Mr. Kiesling parried with a laconic "If I knew the Redskins would not have completed so many passes against Pittsburgh today."

In passing (no pun intended), Mr. Kiesling conceded the 'Skins the Eastern championship over both the Giants and the Dodgers, only teams with a mathematical chance of overhauling the dashing Washington lads who can clinch the flag by winning two of their remaining four games.

Since Washington will meet both the Giants and the Dodgers and also the weak Philadelphia Eagles in the home stretch, it is difficult to see how the Redskins can lose the Eastern crown, unless Part-Owner Marshall makes more frequent excursions onto the field. The fourth team standing in the path of the Redskins is, of course, Steve Halas' bruising Bears who will be met here two weeks from yesterday in a long-awaited attraction.

"Rock-em, sock-em" Pirro, the former Catholic University fullback-tackle star and an all-District choice at both positions, made his local professional football debut in yesterday's game and, lo and behold, he was stationed at left end.

It seems that with the Pittsburgh Steelers in their present sad condition, what with only 25 able-bodied players available, you're a halfback one day and a tackle the next. Pirro yesterday was playing an end for the first time in his varied career, but as soon as it is possible he will be shifted definitely to center, said Coach Kiesling.

BAUGH

Both the Redskins and the Steelers escaped yesterday's battle without any serious injuries, though if Coach Ray Flaherty could have reached some of his Washington players in that first half there's no telling how many casualties might have resulted.

Mr. Flaherty, the red-thatched, freckle-faced young master-mind whose strategy plays a bigger part than you might think in the success of the Redskins, was, to say the least, not overjoyed with the play of his salaried satellites in that first half.

"It never fails," quoth Mr. Flaherty, "whenever we're up against a team we think we can beat easily, we make it tough for ourselves. Take the game with the Eagles and the last one with Pittsburgh. It was the same way. Not until our fellows got mad did they look like a ball club. I guess it's all right as long as we win, but that kind of stuff is too dangerous. Some day we might slip and not be able to come back."

Asked to single out the outstanding Redskin heroes in yesterday's game, Flaherty said you couldn't overlook Todd, Filchock, Johnston

Roman Favored in Autumn Handicap Sprint at Pimlico

Track Offers Six Stakes This Week

Tomorrow's Card Topped by $10,000 Riggs; Steeplechase Feature Wednesday

By Walter Haight

The Pimlico meeting to a turf fan has become akin to Christmas week to a debutante. There's so much going on that it's bewildering. This week the Maryland Jockey Club will line John Public up against the wall and fire six stake races, one for each racing day.

With the Pimlico Special, the Exterminator Handicap and the Pimlico Futurity (enough bigtime racing for an ordinary meeting) now history, Alfred Vanderbilt and the boys have the following line-up for this week: Today, Baltimore Autumn Handicap; tomorrow, Riggs Handicap ($10,000 added, thank you); Wednesday, Battleship Steeplechase Handicap; Thursday, Heiser Handicap; Friday, Sagamore Handicap; Saturday, the Grayson.

New York closed with the running of last Saturday's card, so Pimlico, without opposition in the East, will have the cream of the horse crop; not only for stakes, by for the run-of-the-mine races as well.

Speed In Sprint

There's speed and more speed in them thar hoofs in the Autumn Handicap today. Despite an assignment of 123 pounds, Roman is the likely favorite in the 6-furlong sprint that is worth approximately $3,000 to the winner. The Joseph E. Widener star has all his foot and will have Jockey Wayne Wright in the saddle. But Roman will have to be at top form because Dr. Whinny, Birch Rod, Thtorn Apple, Jay Jay, Equistar and some nine others are going to try to make him say "uncle."

The Monday program is not trashy otherwise, either. The Fritz Herbert Purse, located fifth on the card, is a sprint drawing noteworthy juveniles, including such fast ones as Ocean Blue, Don Orlan, War Bugle and Hy Cop. Big fields seem assured in all events, with a steeplechase to keep the crowd amused. In fact, the program ends with The Balko Handicap, a race that would be worthy feature booking at an ordinary meeting.

Tomorrow's Riggs Handicap, for 3-year-olds, and over, promises to draw one of the season's most attractive fields in the handicap division. Entries for the mile and three-sixteenths test closed on September 16 with a total of 60 nominations and from the class of candidates enrolled the race gives every indication of seeing one of its most spirited renewals in recent years.

Eagerly Sought Race

With a purse of approximately $10,000 awaiting the winner, the Riggs Handicap has long been considered one of the most sought-after prizes of the fall season. The event has been captured by many top horses in its 14 years history, including such outstanding stakes winners as Crusader in 1926, Bostonian in 1927, Roman Soldier in 1936 and Seabiscuit and Aneroid in the two years following.

Several of the stars invited to the Pimlico Special in past years, such as Seabiscuit, Masked General, Cravat and Burning Star, have gone on to contest the issue a second time in the Riggs, but only the worthy Seabiscuit has ever achieved the distinction of a double in both events.

Shot Put, winner of the Exterminator, will go postward in the Bowie Handicap here on November 15 . . . The race is set at a mile and five-sixteenths . . . The marathon champ will go to Florida this winter . . . Charles Town has so many stall applications for its December meeting that Brother Boyle may have to borrow the War Department's fishbowl and stage a drawing . . . The jockey guild will hold a meeting in Baltimore this week . . . Duke, a Great Dane, is the stable pet of Shot Put and a friend of Joe Stevens, of the concessionaire family . . . Yankees Swamp Buffalo, 17 to 0

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Johnny Urban's interception of a pass and gallop of 25 yards to score, plus his 8-yard run for another touchdown in the last period sparked the New York Yankees to a 17-0 victory over the Buffalo Indians in an American professional football league game today.

Garden Show Draws Local, Nearby Horses

12 to Represent Virginia; Arlington Hall Has Entries

When the National Horse Show opens in Madison Square Garden, New York, Thursday morning, a powerful contingent from the District, Maryland, and Virginia will be on hand to uphold honors for the South in hunter and jumper events.

Longest list of entries is from the Old Dominion, where Fort Myer horses boost the total number of stables represented to 12. The Myer team includes Capt. and Mrs. C. B. McClelland's Smacko, Lieut Fred Hughes, jr.'s, Black Caddy, Maj. and Mrs. F. de L. Comfort's Sampson, Capt. David Wagstaff's Enterprise, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles B. Lyman's Maui Girl, and the Government's Eyes Delight, Clipped Wings, and Mount Carmel.

Other Virginians who will van northward for the show are Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, with Huntley Glen, Cornish Hills and Wisdom's Gate; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Renwick, with Pamuck; Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bryant, and Dr. and Mrs. J. P. McDonough, from Richmond; and Lydia Henderson and Lois Ann Lehman, for the horsemanship events on Saturday afternoon. Roy Alan Van Chief will also go from Esmont.

Arlington Hall College is sending two good representatives in Comanche, former army mount who has developed into one of the school's best fencers; and Nancy Miller's handsome chestnut gelding, Golden Bow, from Chicago, Ill. Miss Miller will ride her own horse in the hunter classes, and Susan Rinehart will take over in the children's classes. Sally Seward is to have the mounts on Comanche.

Lisbeth Stieg, whose Hi-Ho is the only entrant from within the city limits of the District, spent a worried three days last week while her little mare was suffering from the effects of an innoculation for influenza. Although Hi-Ho is still a trifle stiff, her young owner expects her to be feeling in top shape by tomorrow, when she departs for New York.

Young Miss Stieg has entered nearly every open jumping event, but she has highest hopes for the knockdown-and-out sweepstakes, for which there is a class held each evening of the show, and the difficult "Pen" event, with a winding course that should be particularly fitted to Hi-Ho's way of going.

Of tremendous interest to local show followers are the entries of Eleanor Moffett and Candolette, who captivated spectators at the Warrenton and Columbus outings in September. This owner-up combination from Asheville, N. C., will make the New York journey in Miss Moffett's station wagon and trailer, the method they employed to cover most of the Eastern coastline last summer.

Other North Carolina entrants are Inky and Balkonian, from Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill's stable at Rougemont. Susan Fulller, well-known young rider around these parts, will do the riding, along with Delmar Twyman and Dickey Kelley.

Baltimore exhibitors include Dean Bedford, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mahoney, and the McDonough School, which will specialize in horsemanship. The Mahoney mounts will be chiefly saddle horses.

Sandy Spring Beats Md. Park In Soccer, 4-2

Regal Also Wins, Downing Waldorf, 2-1, In League Play

A last half rally that netted four goals in 10 minutes gave Sandy Spring a 4-2 victory over Maryland Park yesterday on the winners' field in the Washington and Suburban Soccer League.

In a local game, Regal Clothiers downed Waldorf, 2-1. A freak twist was applied to the situation, however, as Marlboro, which didn't play at all, was acclaimed the winner of the first half of the league.

The Washington Soccer Club was forced to forfeit to Marlboro. Second half of the league will begin next Sunday with Marlboro meeting Regal, at Rosedale Playground and Maryland Park entertaining Waldorf. Sandy Spring draws a bye.

Bimelech to Make Turf Comeback; Now at Hialeah

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 3 (AP).—Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech, which lost the 1940 Kentucky Derby but won the Preakness, will return to racing competition in Florida this winter, sources close to Bradley's Idle Hour Farm said today.

The last son of Black Toney is reported being prepared for the $50,000 Widener Cup at Hialeah March 1. He has been resting since injuring a forefoot in the Arlington Classic last summer.

If "Bim" performs well in Florida he may be raced throughout his 4-year-old period, these sources said.

On Fishing

A letter from Capt. Stanley Turlington, Chincoteague, Va., saying that fishing is just about over down his way. In the same mail, another from A. H. G. Mears at Wachaprague, just a few miles below, saying the last time out (no date given) 54 trout and croakers were caught; and that fishing should improve until November 15. He adds that the fish stay off their inlet until the last of November.

ACKERMAN

From that it appears this one tiny area is favored beyond the balance of the Virginia shore. Yet, we have never found it so, even during the height of the season. As good as any other place, but no better.

There are trout on the lower Virginia and North Carolina beaches, but they are thinning out fast, while here in bay waters chances of getting any kind of a catch are indeed slim. No doubt, however, a few may be picked up here and there; the big fellows, cleaning the grass beds of creeks and river heads of the last succulent morsels. Try and find them though. It is more of a chance than finding the stripers surfacing.

This bluebird weather cannot last for ever, and the stripers seem to know that a change is due—or is it the gradually lowering temperatures? From almost every section, reports of small catches, but of nice fish. The last was from Capt. C. L. Willoughby down Ridge way, who snagged a good half-dozen, out by himself near Pojnt No Point, weighing up to 10 pounds.

Everyone has probably seen notes, particularly around Fishing Fair time, of anglers coming from Pittsburgh and sections of Ohio in carload lots. Bill Meuse, the angler, is responsible for the inception of the idea, but William E. Meuse, assistant general passenger agent of the Baltimore & Ohio, can be blamed for making it a paying proposition.

We would call it coordination, and it is seldom anyone can make their fun coincide with their job. But that is just what Bill has done—ever since he started up in New England, and with the years working westward, but continuing to bring to our 2,700-square-mile fishing hole every year anglers from every place his job takes him.

He's been here twice this summer, with through cars from Chicago, and both times taking nice catches home, while local anglers fishing the same place (Solomons) weren't doing so well. What's more, these anglers, with the thousands of swell fishing lakes and waters of Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota almost in their backyard, are liking it, and shelling out 45 iron men for the all-expense trip that give them 18 hours fishing, and the same amount of time riding. Ample proof the sporting magazines are missing a big bet in not giving to saltwater fishing the amount of space they give to trout and bass, for any angler who will travel this far for saltwater fishing wants it. Evidence, too, that while fishing is already the greatest participation sport in the world, it is continuing to grow by leaps and bounds.

Bill's plans call for four expeditions to bay fishing ports this coming summer. We hope they continue to grow in size and number.

Owens, of N. C. State, To Be Out for Season

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 3 (AP).—Frank Owens, star North Carolina State end, kept out of the early part of the Wake Forest game because of a leg injury, hurt a ligament in his other leg when he was sent in at the half, and will probably be out for the season. Pat Fehley, regular fullback, suffered a recurrence of a shoulder injury, and may not be able to play against Wake Forest here Saturday.

Canadiens in Tie

Montreal, Nov. 3 (AP).—The rebuilt and rejuvenated Montreal Canadiens, bearing little resemblance to the team that finished at the bottom of the National Hockey League standing last season, opened their 1940-41 campaign tonight by playing a 1-1 tie with the mighty Boston Bruins. A crowd of 11,780, which Tommy Gorman, the forum manager, said was "the biggest in a half dozen seasons" watched the game and about 3,000 more fans were turned away.

Keith Birlem, Former Redskin Player, Now a Flying Cadet

Graduate of San Jose State Stationed at Randolph Field, Tex.

From blocking back on the Washington Redskins to flying cadet at Randolph Field, Tex., "West Point of the Air," is a long step. But for Keith G. Birlem it is the realization of a lifelong ambition.

While a student at San Jose College, in California, where his ability as a blocking back caused him to be chosen for professional football's ranks, Keith tried several times to enter the Flying Cadet Corps. But each time he failed to pass the eye tests. The flight surgeons who conducted the examination tried to find out the defect. Finally it was discovered that Keith was on the swimming team in addition to being a pigskin toter. The medicos diagnosed his trouble as irritation from the chlorine in the swimming tanks.

During his stay with the Redskins, Keith did very little swimming. At the close of the season he returned to California where he studied to obtain his A.B. degree. While at school an Army Air Corps traveling board landed in town to examine prospective military pilots. Keith tried again. This time he passed.

Now he has logged over 70 hours flying time. He received his primary flying training at Ryan School of Aeronautics in California and was advanced to Randolph Field, for his basic training.

KEITH BIRLEM

Now well on his way to "wings" and his commission as a lieutenant in the Air Corps, Keith's only regret in leaving pro football is the Washington fans, and their spontaneous turnout when the Redskins returned home after the final Giant's game last year.

Coaches, Players Rate G. U. Great Eleven

Hoyas Could Lick Cornell, Say Orange

G. W. Mets Bucknell In Homecoming; G.U. Invades Maryland; C. U. Plays Tulsa

By Jack Munhall

After watching Georgetown crush a good Syracuse team Saturday we're hopping on the Hoya bandwagon—but definitely.

Let the critics rave and rant that Georgetown doesn't play a tough enough schedule to warrant recognition as a national title contender.

Let 'em say the Hoyas have been lucky. Lucky that Augie Lio's last-minute field goal beat Temple, and that Lou Ghecas' 73-yard last-minute touchdown run tied Syracuse last year to keep life in the budding Hilltop streak that now has been extended to 22 straight games without defeat.

Let them moan about various and sundry breaks that have enabled Georgetown to keep intact what is one of the best 2½-year records ever compiled by a major college eleven.

Stevens Rates Hoyas

For maybe it'll never be proved whether Georgetown has the great football team many believe they have this season, but off their performances against Temple, New York University and Syracuse the Hoyas are on of the country's greatest college football teams.

Don't take our word for it. Ask Mal Stevens, the N. Y. U. coach who, after Georgetown walloped his Violets, 26-0, while using its regulars only 18 minutes said the Hoyas could play ball with anybody.

Ask Ray Flaherty, the Redskins' coach, who was quoted as saying his money would ride on Georgetown against either Penn or Michigan.

Finally, talk to members of the Syracuse football team who though they nearly had a free-for-all fight with the Hoyas during Saturday's rough game, came to the Georgetown dressing room later to say they thought Georgetown could lick Cornell. Maybe the Syracuse fellows were wrong. But perhaps they knew a little about it, since they played Cornell only the previous week, held the Big Reds to a 13-6 margin at half time.

To some all this hurrah for Georgetown may sound like a press agent's pipe dream. But we're so sick and tired of everybody knocking a great bunch of kids and a great football team that we just had to speak our little piece. And we're the same guy who last year was swamped with pan letters from budding Grantland Rices at the Hilltop for daring to suggest that Georgetown might have been lucky to tie Syracuse and was lucky to beat George Washington, 7-0.

What we said last year still goes. But this year don't sell Georgetown short and if you lose your shirt betting on Boston College, remember this warning.

Now to the accompaniment of Hoya, Hoya, Saxa, let's look back on the week-end games of the local teams, and to their next opponents.

Meet Terps Saturday

Georgetown, over its biggest hump of the season, now is a mortal cinch to be undefeated when it clashes with equally undefeated Boston College two weeks hence in what probably will be the country's leading game of the day. In the meantime Jack Hagerty's smartly drilled Blue and Gray steamroller must on Saturday go through the motions of beating poor Maryland at College Park—much as they may hate the job.

George Washington, still groggy after Friday night's experiences with Wake Forest and the Deacons' Pounding Poles—Messrs. Polaski and Gallovich—will be host to unsuccessful but dangerous little Bucknell in its homecoming game at Griffith Stadium.

Maryland, idle last week, has been mentioned, and American University, beaten by Frank Dobson's Newport News Apprentice eleven Saturday, will rest until November 16 when its homecoming game will feature Juniata College.

C. U. faces the toughest job of all, meeting Tulsa, conqueror of T. C. U. and Detroit, in the Oilers' own ballwick.

If George Washington's thorough drubbing by Wake Forest surprised you, you're not alone. Coach Bill Reinhart also was astonished; not to say chagrined.

Reinhart, never the one to alibi, offered what seemed to be a logical explanation of just how the Deacons were able to so decisively lick the Colonials. Firsts of all, Wake Forest has a good ball club. Not great but good enough to worry Duke. Secondly, Friday night's rain and muddy field threw a wrench into G. W.'s plans for an extensive passing attack which, Reinhart believed, was his only chance to upset the much heavier Southerners. Finally the injury epidemic that has dogged the Colonials all year cropped up again.

Picco Injured

Johnny Picco, the Buff and Blue's best end, was hurt after only 12 minutes of the first quarter, and played no more. Ken Batson, a leading back, and Henry Augusiewicz, the team's outstanding guard, aggravated old injuries and saw but little action.

The thing that hurt George Washington the most was the absence of Picco coupled with the loss of Sam Babich, stellar defensive back who missed the game entirely. With this pair out of the lineup the right side of the Colonials' line was greatly weakened and Wake Forest capitalized on the weakness to the fullest extent.

Milwaukee Tops Boston Bears, 10-0

Milwaukee, Nov. 3 (AP)—Two breaks in the opening period set up a touchdown and a field goal today as the Milwaukee Chiefs defeated the Boston Bears, 10 to 0, in an American Professional Football League game before 8,000 fans.

Bob Eckl booted a field goal from the 16-yard line after a pass interception moved the ball to Boston's 10-yard line. Later the Chiefs recovered a fumble on the Bears' 12 and Obbie Novakofski passed to Sherman Barnes for the touchdown.

Redskins Beat Steelers For Seventh Straight

Undermanned Pittsburgh Squad Fades In Second Half of 37-10 Battle; Baugh and Filchok Star for Locals

In the Western division, the Chicago Bears won their sixth straight victory—a 14-7 count over the Green Bay Packers—and virtually sewed up the title in their circuit. Thus, Washington's November 17 date with the Bears in Griffith Stadium shapes up as a preview of the playoff for the national title in December.

The Redskins' longest sustained drive—which gave them their fourth touchdown—was set in motion by none other than Samuel Adrian Baugh, who could claim one-man team honors almost any day he felt in the mood.

Baugh leaped in the air on the Redskins' 3-yard line to intercept Billy Patterson's pass intended for End George Platukis and toted it back up to the Redskin 17.

From that point, Johnston went into action with a 5-yard sweep around right end and a 7-yard dash on a short reverse. The third quarter ended here and into the game came Filchock's quartet, including Todd, Erny Pinckert and Red Morgan. Todd went through left tackle for 8 on the first play and on the next faked to Filchock, skirted his left end and then cut sharply back to the right, picking up a shield of blockers momentarily and stepping 38 yards down the field to the Steeler 17.

Redskins Score

Filchock and Todd moved the ball up to the 14 running, only to lose 5 on a penalty, but then Filchock, given all the time in the world to pass by a solid front wall, tossed to Todd in the right-hand corner on the 3-yard line, and in two plunges bucked it over for a touchdown. Bo Russell kicked the extra point.

The Redskins' first touchdown followed a beautiful 67-yard quick kick by Baugh which set the Pittsburgh lads back on their 10-yard line and gave the Redskins the ball on their own 40 a few moments later when they forced Pittsburgh to kick out.

The drive was featured by a 14-yard gallop by Jarring Jim Meade through the middle to the Pittsburgh 39. At this point, Johnston went out wide on the left flank, took a perfect toss from Baugh and stepped down a clear field for the score. Masterson's kick was no good.

After an exchange of punts, the Redskins took the ball on their own 34 and then Filchock began his aerial circus.

First he passed to Bob McChesney over the middle for 9 yards, Todd bucked the middle for 2, and then Filchock tossed another one over the middle for 7. The Skins drew a 5-yard penalty for offside, but then Filchock sent Todd out on a flanker and passed to him for 17 yards to the Steeler 34. Then it was Filchock to McChesney for 11 over the middle and Filchock to Masterson, who made a masterly catch and ran down to the Steeler 12.

On the next play, Filchock, who had the Steeler defense completely buffaloed, faked a reverse and went through the middle untouched for the score. Russell's kick was good.

Steelers Come to Life

The Steelers came to life momentarily, after the kick-off, took the ball on the Skins' 47 and, after a 26-yard pass to John Klumb by Patterson, pushed the ball over. Klumb was in the clear, but Steve Andrako, rookie center, came from behind to smear him. Down on the Redskin 31, with just 8 seconds remaining, Patterson ran all the way back to the 50-yard stripe and passed down to Platukis over the head of Rookie Fullback Bob Seymour in the leftfield corner of the end zone for the touchdown. Nicolai's kick was good.

The second half is history and better left unmentioned, for the Redskins cut loose with more tricks than the Earle's Roxyettes.

A bit of razzle-dazzle, performed by Filchock and Todd, stole the show, however.

Late in the fourth quarter, Filchock received Coley McDonough's punt on the Redskin 41 and started directly across the turf, handing it back to Todd in the middle of the playing field. Todd, doing everything but a Highland fling to shake off tacklers, stepped down the left sideline for 44 yards to the Steeler 14, where Wilbur Sorter, Steeler end, hit him. That wasn't enough to stop Todd, however, and Merlyn Condit and another Steeler had to pile in to smother the ambitious Texan.

Midway of the third quarter the Redskins took the ball on their 44, after Johnston had returned Patterson's punt 22 yards up the field. Baugh flipped a short pass to Wayne Millner for 4 yards, and then threw one that fairly screamed to Millner on the Pittsburgh 40 from a double wingback formation. Backed up to the 45 by a penalty, Baugh stepped back, calmly surveyed his field and laid a perfect pass into the arms of Johnston.

Johnston was running full speed in the clear down his left sideline and didn't have to change his step an iota to make the catch of Baugh's pass on the Steeler 29. The pass traveled 38 yards in the air. Masterson's kick was good. Substituting freely with his rookies, Coach Ray Flaherty turned the game over to Zimmerman late in the final quarter, and the lanky San Jose State product engineered a field goal after the running attack was halted at the Steeler 15, Masterson kicking with Zimmerman holding.

were on their heels, the Packers advancing on three separate drives to the Bear 6, 18 and 8. Famiglietti ended the first threat by intercepting a pass in the 3-yard line. Herber fumbled and Maniaci recovered on the 16 to end the second and Isbell's passes failed to connect on the third jaunt, the Bears taking the ball on their own 8 shortly before the game ended.

The Packers hit only 13 of 31 passes, gaining 156 yards in the air. Hutson nabbed seven of the completions, but missed eight others, one bouncing off his chest in the end zone in the final quarter.

and McChesney. Though Johnston scored a pair of touchdowns it was not much his offensive performance that won Flaherty's praise as his great defensive action which thwarted a pair of near-certain Pittsburgh touchdowns. Johnston, says Flaherty, is one of the greatest defensive backs he's ever seen. And, if you didn't already know it, the Redskins' players would almost as soon part with Baugh or Todd as Johnston.

The two touchdown-passes, Baugh to Johnston, were masterpieces of deception and precision. On the first the play was from single wing formation to the right with Johnston in the fullback slot along side Baugh. The ball was snapped, Baugh faked to Johnston crossing over in front of him. Then he turned to the right, delaying just long enough to allow the speedy Johnston to dash over into the left flat, and whipped him a short floater. From then on Johnston was pretty much on his own on his long dash, although Charley Malone provided him with a needed block on Pittsburgh's Billy Patterson on the 15.

The second Baugh-to-Johnston pay-off pass started from a double wing formation with Johnston at the left wing position. On this maneuver it was simply a case of Johnston being able to outrun Patterson and streak out into the clear and of Baugh being able to lay the pass right smack in his receiver's arms. Perfect timing it was, beautiful to behold.

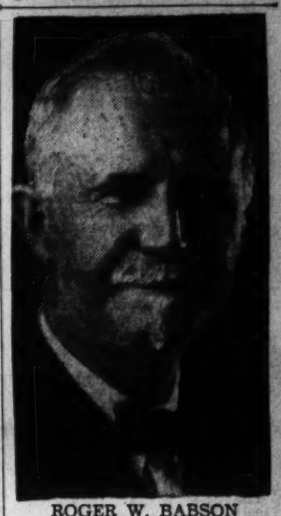
Sovereign Voters

By Roger W. Babson

Day of Reckoning Tomorrow

The most important day in two generations of American voters comes tomorrow! In the olden times when a sovereign king opened his mouth that settled it. No one could challenge his decision. He might make mistakes; he might be stupid, even ignorant; but he was the "works" and his word was law. So it is when the American voter casts his ballot. In a crisis such as we are facing today in our national life, what group can we count on when it comes to voting? It seems to me we must count on those independent voters who have the horse-sense that enables them to see through bunk and get to the heart of a crucial issue!



ROGER W. BABSON

Our democratic ideals imply that the country can always depend on the consensus of judgment of the average man for the wise direction we need in any given situation. The average man does not rate with the so-called intellectuals nor with the rich. He is, however, far more numerous than all the privileged and favored classes put together. At the ballot box he counts accordingly. The well-to-do still count for more than their actual number, because of the influence they exert on those associated with, or dependent upon, them, but their influence is waning.

And yet, even when great issues are at stake at the polls, there is often a fairly close decision. It was certainly so on Lincoln's second election. Furthermore, the slander of that time has never been exceeded unless it was during Washington's campaigns. In more recent times do not forget that the Hon. Charles Evans Hughes went to bed on election night in 1916 fully convinced he was the country's next President. He awoke the next morning a defeated man.

In the national election four years ago, notwithstanding the tremendous sweep by States made by the Democratic Party, there were 17,000,000 men and women who voted on the other side. These 17,000,000 Republican voters were by no means from the privileged and intellectual classes. Among the 27,000,000 voters on the winning side there was a large proportion of the highly educated and the well-to-do. Included in these millions was also a considerable percentage of the so-called middle class, not exactly intellectuals and certainly not rich.

It would appear that out of the 44,000,000 votes cast for the two major candidates there were 34,000,000 voters who tied each other—one vote for, balancing another vote against. I am considering now the popular vote, not the electoral vote where the ratio made the result seem like a thunderclap of popular opinion. The 17,000,000 voters who backed Landon do not see it that way. They know that a shift in less than a million votes, some say 300,000, in a number of crucial States would have given Landon a majority of the electoral votes and put him in the White House. If even in a landslide like four years ago a shift in less than 2½ per cent of the voters might have changed the final results, what can we expect now, where the contest may really be close?

On November 5, more than ever before, party lines will be ignored by millions. Great numbers of Willkie Democrats have declared themselves, and, as was the case four years ago, there is a flood of Roosevelt Republicans. I am now making no definite forecast, but it certainly seems to me that the results next Tuesday will be determined by the independent voters. What makes independent voters? Certainly one factor is discontent with blind partisanship and disgust with party leaders. Again it is sheer restlessness and dissatisfaction with the way things are going. As the veteran Arizona Senator Ashurst gracefully declared, on his enforced retirement after 40 years in the United States Senate: "It is the privilege of the people to displace an official and substitute another for any good reason, or for a bad one, or for no reason at all."

That implies what we all know, that there is no accounting for what the electorate may do in any given situation. Facts, reason, vision, principle, may all play their part, but so do ignorance, prejudice and passion. Remember, that people are governed by their emotions far more than by their intellect! These confusing doubts are the marks of sovereigns all the way down through the pages of history. And by what reason should we expect any more from our 44,000,000 sovereign voters on Tuesday than could be expected of kings, emperors or dictators?

I, however, have great faith in our voters regardless of their party, race or creed, provided they will take their God and their conscience into the polling booth with them. As I consider the map of the world today, who, in his right mind, would want to swap the American electorate for any other system of government? Are our voters wise? Will they do what is fundamentally right next Tuesday? Yes, I believe they will. The natural automatic checks and balances in our religion and body politic, representing among the voters every creed and element, provide a great saving grace. Remember, however, this free flow of human elements at the polls, combined with the provisions of our Constitution, give us the only security upon which we can count.

London Press Demands Death For Looters

Widespread Thefts During Bombings Arouses Public Ire

By the United Press

London, Nov. 3.—A serious outbreak of looting is arousing the public as German bombs strip the fronts from shops and homes and scatter merchandise and valuables in the streets.

Scotland Yard's new special "flying squads" and mobile units are kept busy trying to curb the marauders, while some newspapers even go as far as to suggest capital punishment to end the present epidemic.

Time seems to have turned back a century in London—to the period when commoners could be hanged for stealing goods worth but a shilling—as the Sunday Dispatch, in an editorial captioned "Forward the Gallows," said:

"Someone should be hanged—quickly."

Even members of the famous Davies bomb disposal squad could not resist temptation. Four of them pleaded guilty and have been sentenced to nine months' hard labor for stealing a number of shaving brushes, some soap and a bottle of brilliantine—the entire "loot" worth some $3.

The Dispatch called attention to the increasing "unspeakable victimization" of those who have been bombed out of their homes and shops. The looters were reported to be mostly gangs of youths, some of schoolboy age, who await the all-clear signal and then pounce on badly shattered shops and homes.

Looting cases tried by metropolitan magistrates increased from 140 in September to 250 in October.

One pathetic case was that of a flower vendor who still attempts to make a living in bombed London. The flower seller pleaded guilty to stealing one shoe, explaining to the magistrate that "I only wanted one, because my own left shoe had worn out."

The courts are daily hearing many such cases. One 20-year-old youth was sentenced to three months for stealing a few sweets. However, he proved to have been a former offender, just released from prison. Another 16-year-old unemployed laborer admitted to 63 separate acts of looting.

Two soldiers admitted stealing a cigarette lighter, a cigarette case and cigarettes worth $15. A member of the Home Guard was sentenced to three months' hard labor for stealing sugar from a damaged warehouse.

Under the defense regulations now in force the death penalty may be passed as punishment for looting. Thus far such a step has not been deemed necessary.

The News Chronicle predicted that "if the looting went unchecked it would swiftly pave the way for social breakdown and anarchy, and stopped it must be."

Listen! with Glynn

In order that residents in and around Washington may get their election returns more quickly than ever before, elaborate plans for pooling their extensive coverage resources on Tuesday night have been mapped out by WJSV, Columbia's station for the Nation's Capital, and The Washington Post.

Although scattered returns will be brought to you before that time, at 9 p. m., WJSV and the Columbia network will clear air time for nothing but news of the elections. WJSV's time will be divided equally between news of interest from the entire national scene and the election news of important local and regional interest as it is gathered by the far-flung staff of The Post.

From time to time, The Post's political experts, William Nessley and Joseph Mathias, will come before the WJSV microphones in The Post's city room to give you their analyses of the voting trends in Virginia, Maryland and other sections of particular interest to Washington people.

From C. B. S. headquarters in New York, Albert Warner, Elmer Davis and Bob Trout, furnished with the returns by scores of correspondents in the C. B. S. stations throughout the country, will keep you on top of the results nationally as the figures come pouring in from the States. Elmo Roper, who conducted the research work for the Fortune survey in 1936, will be on hand there to tell you how the actual voting compares to that predicted in the various polls.

Conn. Scholars Wage Erudite Campaign Duel

Lieutenant Governor Aspirants Show New Tricks to Politics

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 3.—A pair of Connecticut scholars recruited for the 1940 campaign by the rival major parties have been showing grizzled veterans a thing or two about old-time political feuding.

They are Odell Shepard, Trinity College professor, poet and author of a Pulitzer prize-winning biography, who was nominated for lieutenant governor by the Democrats, and James L. McConaughy, Wesleyan University president, who is seeking reelection for the same office on the Republican ticket.

The exchanges between the two doctors of letters, although couched in the urbane language suited to their academic backgrounds, have created much of the color—and most of the chuckles—of the Connecticut campaign.

No Poet Laureate

It began long before other political orators had unlimbered, when McConaughy made a jocular reference to his opponent's literary background, asserting that if the State "wanted a lieutenant governor who could serve as poet laureate, count me out!"

Shepard retorted:

"He and I are not running for the office of poet laureate, but for that of lieutenant governor. We face each other now in the political arena. I intend to meet him and beat him on that ground."

But the one which capped the climax came after one of McConaughy's running mates called Shepard a "Communist."

The lieutenant governor hastened to assure the voters that his opponent was "not a Communist," but went on to point out what he called "radical" statements and actions by Shepard in the past.

Those things, said McContughy, were perhaps what led former Democratic Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, the retired Yale graduate school dean who inaugurated the influx of scholars into Connecticut politics in recent years, "to call him (Shepard) a Communist."

Called Hatchet Man

Shepard asserted that to call McConaughy "the hatchet man" for the Republicans was inapt.

The hatchet, said Shepard, was to blunt an instrument for his rival's use. What McConaughy preferred was "the stiletto."

"He is a man who can say you are a Communist in such a way," continued the professor, "that it sounds like a confidential memorandum to the Dies Committee."

Furthermore, that McConaughy reminded him of "Chaucer's 'smiler with the knife beneath his cloak.'"

The lieutenant governor, who as president of Wesleyan holds an honorary degree from Trinity, received a letter soliciting a contribution to a special campaign fund being raised for Shepard by a group of Trinity alumni.

McConaughy gleefully announced that he had contributed "a very small check" because, although he would do all in his power to prevent Shepard's election, he hated to see his rival's campaign cramped for lack of funds.

The alumni committee returned the check, saying that McConaughy's name had been included "inadvertently" on a list of Trinity prospects.

Browder Pledges Soviet 'Gains' Here

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Communist Presidential Candidate Earl Browder said tonight that "the achievements which Stalin has led in gaining for the Soviet Union we would strive to gain the United States and its people."

BROWDER

Winding up his campaign with an address delivered at Madison Square Garden, Browder declared that America had abandoned neutrality and was "in imminent danger of becoming a belligerent" in the war abroad. He asserted that "the Communist Party would save America from catastrophe by emulating the policy of Stalin."

"We warn the workers and farmers of America," the candidate said, "that neither of the major parties (Republican or Democratic), nor their candidates, are worthy of the slightest confidence."

Declaring the Soviet Union had kept neutral in "the imperialistic war," had multiplied its industrial production 10-fold since 1929 and had raised the general living standard by 500 per cent, Browder said:

"We Communists have the deepest confidence in the American people. We say that Americans can accomplish anything that other peoples can. If the Russians can increase their national income by 1,000 per cent during 11 or 12 years, we say that Americans could do the same thing, once we adopted the corresponding policies and leadership. If the Russians can maintain peace and security in a war-like world, so could we Americans."

Chicagoans Map Vote Fraud Fight

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—A legion of resolute citizens is going to make it hard to steal a vote in Chicago next Tuesday.

JARECKI

Quietly, persistently, they have been organizing their forces for months, until today there are more than 15,000 volunteers prepared to help guard the polls.

They represent almost 100 civic and partisan groups dedicated to the task of insuring an honest vote and an honest count of the vote. Leaders promised there would be at least four of them in each of the "river ward" precincts, where investigations have shown election frauds to be rife.

County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, head of the election machinery in most of Cook County, struck a powerful blow for the crusaders today when he directed the Chicago Police Department to assign its officers to watch polling places outside their own districts.

The judge made it clear that he felt this maneuver would release the policemen from any political pressure that they might feel in their home precincts. His action recalled the report of the October, 1939, grand jury, which, after an investigation of election irregularities, said in part:

"Of great significance to this body is the fact that no police officer stationed at a polling place where fraud has occurred has ever come forward to initiate a complaint."

But the volunteers are ready to come forward. The Vote Fraud Fighters Alliance, one of the larger groups in the vote fraud drive, has asked its volunteers to equip themselves with cameras so that a pictorial record of any cheating may be turned over to the authorities when the election is over.

This unusual precaution caused a rumpus in the overwhelming Democratic City Council last week, when Alderman James McDermott took umbrage and threatened to have his precinct captains break some lenses.

George F. Barrett, Republican nominee for attorney general and chairman of the Illinois Volunteer Committee, one of the partisan groups working against vote frauds, countered with a guarantee that cameras would be carried into every precinct of McDermott's ward—the fourteenth—on election day.

Babson Sees New Party Ruling U. S.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 3 (AP).—Roger W. Babson, business analyst and Prohibition Party Presidential nominee, predicted today the birth of a successful new political party "within four to eight years."

BABSON

"The time is coming," Babson declared at a campaign rally, "when the voters will cast aside both major parties and go either to a coalition government or to some third party.

"It is up to you to see that it is a conservative third party and not some Socialist or Communist group."

The economist offered a four-point program as a guide to the Nation. It included stricter law enforcement, reorganization of the public school system, character tests for candidates for public office and "getting back to the fundamentals of American government."

Closing a 30-State 10,000-mile tour in behalf of his candidacy, Babson foresaw 1941 as "one of the best years the country has had," and declared Adolf Hitler will not be remembered as a conqueror, but as one who forced reorganization of the industrial system.

John G. Winant Urges Roosevelt

Boston, Nov. 3 (AP).—John G. Winant, director of the International Labor Office, said today he did not believe that President Roosevelt "wanted to succeed himself," but that "he is again a candidate through force of circumstances."

The former Republican Governor of New Hampshire and first head of the Social Security Board, asserted in a radio address that while both Presidential candidates have "promised aid to England":

"In the life and death struggle taking place across the sea, time is of essence. Even a temporary interruption through change of Government might have fateful results, not only to Great Britain, but to ourselves."

Winant asserted that the New Deal early had made "vigorous effort" to carry out the Democratic platform pledge to balance the budget, but that "a brief experience in this direction showed no compensating recovery to meet the job wants of millions of people out of work."

"Therefore," he said, "in order to prevent economic and financial ruin and starvation, the Presedint reversed his economy policy and spent to save people."

Vote Socialist, Thomas Urges

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, told a party rally today that "you will throw your vote away unless you vote the Socialist ticket."

THOMAS

"Those who have refused to support our Socialist case lest they permit the greater evil to overtake them cannot even agree which is the greater evil," he said in a prepared address.

"It has been our experience that there is a practically even division between those who think that we must be saved from Willkie, and those who think we must be saved from Roosevelt.

"The mathematics of the case alone should lead those tortured souls to vote the Socialist ticket rather than to cancel each other out."

America, he said, "has definitely taken the wrong road. But . . . she has not walked in it so far that she cannot retrace her steps."

"It is already untrue to talk about America as a democracy," he went on, "even to the degree that America was a democracy when we Socialists drew up our platform last April. Our Government has become a quasi-dictatorship. The temper of the country is already half-Fascist.

"The extreme bitterness between the major parties and their candidates is based on personalities and prejudices, and not on principle . . . The Socialist Party and only the Socialist Party in this campaign of confusion has offered a clear-cut program for the reassertion of a triumphant democracy.

"Our supreme Socialist insistence has been our contention that a democracy of free men can harness its machinery for the destruction of poverty better than any dictatorship has harnessed its machinery for military victory."

Postelection Unity Rally Set

New York, Nov. 3. (AP).—In the hope that healing of the Nation's wounds caused by the political campaign may be hastened, a rally for the "unity of America" has been announced for Wednesday night at Carnegie Hall.

C. D. Jackson, president of the Council for Democracy, said the speakers would urge subordination of party politics to the welfare of the Nation.

Heading the speakers, he said, would be Alf Landon, Republican Presidential nominee in 1936, and Attorney General Jackson.

In the event of Wendell L. Willkie's election as President, Columnist Dorothy Thompson, a campaigner for President Roosevelt, will speak. Mr. Roosevelt's reelection will bring Howard Coonley, past president of the National Association of Manufac-

Soviet Rejects British Protest On River Setup

Moscow Denies Part In Danube Board Violates Neutrality

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Monday), Nov. 4.—Soviet Russia has rejected an official British protest that Russian participation in the formation of a Danube River Commission along with Germany, Italy and Rumania, was a violation of neutrality, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported today.

The British ambassador to Moscow, Sir Stafford Cripps, addressed the note to Russia October 29, and Britain stated she could not recognize any agreement which may violate existing treaties regarding the Danube River, the agency said.

Premier Molotoff then received Sir Stafford Saturday and gave him Russia's reply which called "incorrect" the British assertion that Russian participation constituted a violation of neutrality, Tass said.

The note pointed out Russia had a vital interest in Danubian affairs because of her proximity whereas Britain was "thousands of kilometers removed" from the river, and also that formation of a new commission constituted a "restoration of justice" violated by the Versailles and other treaties.

"Russia was kept out of the International as well as the European Danube Commission by those treaties in which Britain played a leading part," Tass said the Russian reply stated.

D. C. Absentee Votes May Set Record

An increase of more than 35 per cent over any previous absentee voting record within his 25 years' experience here was reported yesterday by A. G. Chaffee, director of the Absentee Voters' Bureau conducted by the Willkie-McNary Campaign Club of the Republican State Committee in and for the District.

The club's headquarters in the Woodward Building will hold open house tomorrow night, when election returns are coming in. Connection with a major press service, loud speakers and a system of bulletin boards will keep track of State-by-State returns, officials said.

Before 1915 automobiles were known as "pleasure cars."

The Girl Scouts had about 600,000 members at the end of 1939.

TROLLEY VS. TRUCK—Nine persons were injured, none seriously, when this street car and a truck met at a San Francisco intersection. The force of the collision turned the street car almost to a right angle to the tracks on which it was running

U.S. Election Leads Papers in London

London (Monday), Nov. 4 (AP). The American Presidential election was the top story in London newspapers today, in most cases getting more space and display than either the battle of Greece or the slackening of the Nazi air attack on the capital.

Several papers not only published long news stories from New York and Washington on the windup of the campaign but carried special articles and cartoons as well.

One columnist went so far as to dig up an American porter in an apartment house for an interview on how Americans may ballot on Tuesday. The porter, it happened, had not been in the United States since 1918.

Secret Service To Guard Willkie

Secret Service operatives, whose duty it is to guard a President-elect as well as the President, last night prepared for the protection of Wendell L. Willkie in the event early returns from tomorrow's election should indicate the possibility of a Republican victory.

Agents in such widely scattered cities as Louisville, Des Moines, Chicago and Indianapolis arranged for transportation to Rushville, Ind., in case the G. O. P. nominee decides to await the election result there. New York operatives also held themselves in readiness

C.I.O. Official Raps Willkie Supporters

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—R. J. Thomas, C. I. O. vice president and president of the United Automobile Workers of America, charged in a radio broadcast today that "ealding supporters" of Wendell L. Willkie were "planning to deliver America to Adolf Hitler . . . in the same fashion that France was betrayed."

In his broadcast, under the auspices of the National Committee of Independent Voters for Roosevelt and Wallace, Thomas said that a vote for President Roosevelt was a vote "for peace and against appeasement."

Thomas said his support of Willkie's candidacy had been sought after the Republican convention by Harold E. Talbott, New York financier, whom Thomas quoted as telling him:

"Remember that the top job, that of Secretary of Labor, is open. If you stop your support of Roosevelt, we will make you the greatest labor leader in the country."

Thomas said that Talbott, to show his closeness to Willkie, said that his group spent $87,000 for telegrams "to bring pressure on Republican delegates" to nominate Willkie.

(Earlier last week when Thomas in interviews mentioned Talbott's name in connection with the cost of the telegrams and the labor post, Talbott, in answer to these assertions, declared he had not paid for any telegrams and emphatically denied ever offering Thomas a Cabinet post).

Thomas said that he asked why he had not gone to see C. I. O. President John L. Lewis and "Talbott said that any move by the C. I. O. leader in support of the Republican candidate would do more harm than good."

FIRM CONTROL WITHOUT A "CORSETED" FEELING IN

AIRWAY Foundations

Control those curves that are a "danger signal" this fall! Bring them into the "tall and narrow" lines where they belong. An Airway will do it. You've heard of these remarkable garments, fashioned of "the elastic that breathes." Airways expand and retract, thus avoiding that 'corseted" feeling though they're always on the job controlling you firmly. Features that add to your comfort are soft felt under the side lacing, under the back bones to avoid sticking, fabric facing under front and back panels. It takes an expert to fit these garments perfectly. Just rely upon the Hecht Co., corsetieres! Airway Girdles (exclusive with the Hecht Co.) in 15-inch length.....$12.50
